Souder 'Unshakable' in Concluding Bruno Wrote Notes.

N. J. Shifts Attack To Hidden Grave

Fleming, N. J. Jan. 16 (AP).—Discovery of English and German dictionaries in the Bronx home of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, with words used in the Lindbergh ransom notes heavily underscored, was disclosed tonight by Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey.

Wilentz made the disclosure in answer to a defense question raised at Hauptmann's murder trial today—why the same man would misspell simple words and correctly spell the more difficult ones in the ransom letters.

"Hauptmann is a dictionary student," Wilentz declared, "and we will prove it."

The State, he added, found two sets of dictionaries in the Bronx house—one German and one English—with words such as "hazardous," that figured prominently in the ransom notes, heavily underlined.

The Hidden Grave.

Prosecutors today capped their handwriting case against the carpenter with the opinions of eight experts that he was the ransom writer, and prepared to begin testimony concerning the finding of Baby Lindbergh's hidden grave.

Thus the State, intent on sending the glum carpenter to the electric chair, is ready to show how Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's first-born son lay buried in a thicket while Hauptmann allegedly wrote 14 lying letters and snatched the $50,000 ransom in a Bronx cemetery.

A colored laborer, William Allen, stumbled across the baby's shallow grave on May 12, 1932, more than two months after he was stolen from his Hopewell home a few miles away.

He will testify and then identification of the body, as it was found, will be established.

Since the defense has announced it will not dispute the identification, State's attorneys said it would not be necessary to recall Col. Lindbergh or the nurse, Betty Gow, to the stand. Both saw the body in a morgue before it was cremated.

Other witnesses will testify concerning the autopsy that fixed the cause of death. Then the State may proceed with evidence concerning the preparation of the ransom bills at the Morgan bank in New York and the story of how the tell-tale notes began to appear in circulation five days after the ransom was paid.

Then, it claims, he callously stripped the sleeping suit from the body to use in bargaining for the ransom and buried his burden in the thicket, across the Hunterdon County line near Mount Rose, N. J.

The State's tedious handwriting testimony was completed at the trial's adjournment today after four more experts had called Hauptmann the author of all 14 notes.

They were just as positive in denying defense insinuations that Hauptmann's handwriting was used as a disguise for somebody else.

"The Alibi Man."

The defense has made it plain that it expects to name Isador Fisch, Hauptmann's dead alibi man, as that somebody else.

Fisch, frail little furrier, went to Germany to die. Before he sailed, Hauptmann says, he left a shoebox in which Bruno allegedly found more than $14,000 in ransom bills.

That was the carpenter's story when officers found the money hidden in his house and garage in New York City's Bronx.

Out of court, the defense claimed today to have a witness "tucked away" who will testify that Fisch and two other men in New York tried to sell him the ransom bills—$50,000 in "good hot money"—for 75 cents on the dollar.

The witness, said Edward J. Reilly, chief of the defense staff, is Gustav Lukatis, of New York, who declared the offer was made in April or May of 1932, not long after Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon paid the $50,000 ransom to a man he has identified as Hauptmann.

Relatives on Hand.

However, the State has brought three relatives and the nurse of Fisch from Germany to explode the "Fisch myth."

The four were taken secretly to a Trenton hotel today after one of them, Pincus Fisch, was quoted in New York as saying he will testify "only that my dead brother is not guilty."

House Battle Looms on D.C. Budget Slash

Million More Lopped Off as Bill Is Reported for $39,308,404.

By James D. Secrest.

A fight for restoration of part of the $1,086,418 cut from the already emasculated 1936 District supply bill will be made today on the floor of the House as the measure is thrown open to amendments under the 5-minute rule.

A bill carrying appropriations of $39,303,404 was reported by the District appropriations sub-committee. It represented a net loss of approximately $3,250,000 since the budget left the hands of the District Commissioners for the Budget Bureau.

Almost the entire afternoon session of the House yesterday was occupied with general debate, during which Representative Blanton, ranking member of the sub-committee, harangued regarding the advantages of living in Washington and the "propaganda" of the local newspapers.

Final Vote Hoped for Today.

Today both Chairman Cannon and J. William Ditter, of Pennsylvania, only Republican on the sub-committee, will take the floor before the general debate ends. The committee hopes to get a final vote before the House adjourns for the day.

Ditter also will make an appeal for restoration of the $87,540 which the sub-committee eliminated as an estimate for continuation of the character education program in the public schools.

"If we don't allow this three-year program to continue," he said, "we will have wasted the money spent during the current year as well as

Chamber of Commerce Backs Ratification as Aid to Peace.

By Robert C. Albright.

The weight of a White House message yesterday was thrown behind the Senate resolution for World Court adherence, but it headed into a whirlwind of opposition reminiscent of the bitter League of Nations controversies of early postwar days.

Spearhead of the recriminatory outburst was Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, the one Progressive Republican the Roosevelt Administration wholeheartedly sponsored in the 1934 campaign. In a slashing, sardonic denunciation, the tart Californian revived the traditional argument: "Back door to the league."

In his pointed 230-word message, President Roosevelt discounted "partisan considerations," appealed for Senate ratification "in such a form as not to defeat or delay the objective of adherence," and denied that "sovereignty" of the United States is in any way involved.

President Sees Peace Aided.

"At this period in international relationships, when every act is of moment to the future of world peace, the United States has an opportunity once more to throw its weight into the scale in favor of peace," the President said.

His argument was bolstered by a communication to Senators from the United States Chamber of Commerce. Speaking for the chamber, President Henry I. Harriman branded all objections "unimportant, as compared with the advantages which would accrue to us and the support and impetus which our Nation would give to the promotion of international justice and the furtherance of international peace."

Johnson answered with his most effective weapon—satire. He talked to packed galleries.

"It is a beautiful thought," he said; "it is a marvelously naive expression, that we, with all the nations of the earth, a least over there, feeling toward us like a recalcitrant debtor ever feel toward a creditor, are to go among them to preserve peace among them; and they can not preserve it themselves."

Robinson Sees Ratification.

Senate Democratic Leader Robinson, who on Tuesday opened the Administration argument for adherence with a forceful appeal for ratification, was content for the most part to listen, although injected a few sharp questions between periods in the Californian's oratory.

Robinson does not anticipate an early vote on the issue, but World Court proponents are satisfied the Senate will ratify the protocol, if, and when, they can bring it to a ballot. Half a dozen Senators on Robinson's side of the aisle are ready to unlimber protocol speeches when the debate is resumed late today or tomorrow. One of the first, unqualifiedly supporting the court, will be Senator M. M. Logan, of Kentucky. Many more of the opposition are awaiting their turn, among them Senator Borah, of Idaho.

Johnson told the Senate he had heard that the State Department was aiding Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, in preparing a resolution for American entry into the league. This was speedily denied by Pope, but Johnson was not fazed.

"Why do we enter this court?" asked the league's ancient enemy. "I think it is to meddle and muddle under an hysterical internationalism in those controversies that Europe has and that Europe never will be rid of. We enter it to do something that is foreign to our soil, foreign to our people, foreign to the genesis of our institutions, foreign to every characteristic of our republic."

Johnson Assails Move.

Of all times, he said, the present is "the most unpropitious" time to consider World Court membership, when Europe is "sitting on a volcano, ready to erupt at any time."

He said he was more interested

Mrs. Wilson Here After Record Flight

Storm Forces Rickenbacker To Halt Record Flight South

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

A sudden snowstorm and a cracked oil tank forced the new Douglas airliner Florida Flyer to turn back to Washington last night, thus ending what was to have been a record-breaking round-trip flight from New Orleans to Washington. While most of the guests of American Airlines, Inc., were disappointed in having to complete their journey by train, starry-eyed Marie Louise Reynolds, New Orleans secretary and journalism student, who was "kidnaped" by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, chief pilot of the trip, was thrilled when she visited her first night club clinging to the arm of the famous ace.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the war-time President, and Mrs Eugene Meyer, had left the plane at the Washington airport yesterday afternoon, after having flown from Washington to New Orleans and thence to New York and back to this city. It was Mrs. Wilson's first extended air journey and she found it "perfectly lovely," even during a previous snowstorm through which the plane sped while approaching Newark, N. J., yesterday morning.

Guests Return by Train.

The delayed guests of the airliner, who included Rudolf Hecht, president of the American Bankers Association; T. Semmes Walmsley, mayor of New Orleans, and Mrs. Walmsley and J. H. Kindelberger, president of North American Airways, planned to return to New Orleans on the 11:55 train, after weather conditions south of Washington precluded the possibility of a return by air.

The plane, a beautiful, big, silvery bug, had sailed into the airport just before 3:30 yesterday afternoon, ahead of its schedule. A cold, wintry wind whipped across the airport, but 13 minutes after its arrival the ship taxied across the field and started south. Shortly before 6 o'clock engine trouble developed. A heavy snow squall was in progress and Capt. Rickenbacker, who said it was beginning to ice up, decided to return to the Capital.

A hasty examination revealed that the oil tank of the right engine had cracked. The return to Washington had been accomplished on one engine, as had part of the earlier passage, also through a snowstorm, when the oil supply was found to be insufficient to drive the two huge engines over the route from Philadelphia to Newark, N. J.

The two most-thrilled passengers were Mrs. Wilson and Marie Louise. It was through the intervention of the former First Lady that the blonde girl, who yesterday saw her first snowstorm while flying 1,500 feet above the ground, made the trip. A secretary by day and a journalism student by night, the 17-year-old, wonder-smitten girl had come to the New Orleans Airport early yesterday morning. Her mission was to interview Eddie Rickenbacker for her Loyola College newspaper and, if possible, to fly in his plane.

"Forgets" to Get Off.

She interviewed the ace, and she got her flight. Capt. Rickenbacker invited her into the plane where it was warm, and when the plane got under way it was found she had "forgotten" to get off. Rickenbacker planned to leave her at Atlanta, where the plane stopped for fueling, but Mrs. Wilson's pleas saved her. So, with only a nickel in her pocketbook, and a look of dazed wonder on her face, Marie Louise had her long day of adventure.

"And was I scared when Mr.

Nazi Foes Flee Hitler's Saar; Report 5 Slain

(Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press.)

Saarbruecken, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 16.—Adolf Hitler's Saar opposition crumbled completely today and the Saar, in effect, passed into Nazi hands.

The League of Nations government was still in nominal authority, but it was evident the league commissioners, bowing to the will of the people expressed in the Sunday plebiscite's 90 per cent pro-German vote, meant to stand to one side.

As unconfirmed reports reached this capital that five persons had been killed and several wounded in post-plebiscite fighting, the demoralized anti-Nazi common front moved its headquarters across the border to French soil.

Socialist and Communist newspapers which short days ago were shouting their defiance of Hitler to the high heavens, suspended publication.

(Dispatches from Forbach, France, said several hundred Saar refugees arrived on French soil today. Four of them reported they had been fired upon as they started to turn back to the Saar. French authorities were anticipating many thousands of self-exiles, the dispatches said.)

Bluecoat police, controlled by Nazis, earlier today moved into the Socialist welfare center from which the anti-Nazi plebiscite campaign had been directed, swept out several hundred Hitler opponents refuged there, and occupied the building.

No violence occurred in Saarbruecken, despite the fervor of the Nazis, although one report said six Communists had been arrested.

As the uproarious Nazi demonstrations that started immediately the plebiscite result was announced yesterday continued, leading Jewish residents said 3,000 Jews in the Saar were anxious to leave, despite the advice from Bruno Weil, international lawyer and leader of the German-Jewish organization, that they "stay in the fatherland and see the battle through."

"We do not know which way to turn," spokesmen for the Jews said. Business men asserted they were being boycotted, and their children reported schoolmates were "shunning them."

Powers Halt Dollar's Rise Experts Say

Bank of France Acts to Support Franc, Observers Hold.

State European Groups Lose Heavily; Official U.S. Action Hinted.

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Gold bloc monetary powers were believed in Wall Street today to have waged a successful battle to prevent the dollar from soaring to new heights since its revaluation in terms of gold a year ago.

The demoralized conditions of Tuesday's session in the world's exchange markets was replaced by relative calm today, and informed banking quarters believed they saw tangible evidence of official intervention from abroad to steady the French franc, and, indirectly, other gold monies.

While the usual secrecy clothed whatever action was taken late Tuesday and today, it was confidently stated in some international banking circles in a position to observe the inner workings of the market, that the Bank of France, probably with the aid of American authorities, was actively engaged in selling dollars and buying francs during the severe break Tuesday.

High Bids Noted.

Acting through New York connections, it was said, bids believed to originate abroad came into the market toward the close of the session Tuesday at figures substantially above what would have been necessary to secure offerings. Such a condition, it was pointed out, would scarcely have resulted from either commercial or speculative buying of the franc.

In one well-informed quarter it was said that gold had been placed under earmark by New York banking institutions at the Bank of France during the worst of the break and that further commitments for import to this country were arranged in today's session.

Decline in Franc.

The decline in the French currency was not wholly arrested today. At the close a net loss of .01½ of a cent was registered, the last price being 6.56½ cents. This compares with a low of 6.47 cents Tuesday. The pound sterling, a non-gold currency, gained ¾ of a cent to close at $4.87¾.

The wall of secrecy which is thrown around intervention of central banks in the exchange markets likewise left open the possibility that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, acting for the United States Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, may also have been a factor in curbing the dollar's rise. In some of the best-informed Wall Street banking circles, however, the Bank of France was thought to have been the principal, and probably the only agency acting to support the franc market.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

The American equalization fund of $2,000,000,000 has defeated foreign speculators who attempted a bull coup in the dollar markets of the world yesterday, it was indicated tonight.

European money groups lost heavily.

Dollar markets were orderly today after a wild upward movement on the snap judgment of nervous traders. That snap judgment cost many a fortune and enriched a few courageous individuals who bought stocks and commodities at low prices to profit by today's recovery.

No one will know how the American equalization fund fared until the Government sees fit to make an announcement. However, foreign exchange traders were convinced the fund was operating against the dollar yesterday, buying francs, pounds, Dutch guilders and other foreign currencies. This buying probably was done at the lows and if the fund was able to unload dotay it netted handsome gains.

Brokers discussed the possibility of closing the stock exchange if the Supreme Court should rule against the Government. Such procedure would prevent wild selling and give traders time to digest the opinion and new legislation the Government would present. The market could be reopened the next day without difficulty.

In event of a pro-Government decision traders foresaw sharp advances in prices, and then inflation, probably mild at first, such as "something for silver," and more thoroughgoing later.

Convicts Kidnap Board of Parole In Prison Break

Board Hostage Tells of Break At San Quentin

Slugging and Pursuit Are Described by Member of Paroles Body.

By Warren Atherton,

(Copyright, 1935, United Press.)

San Quentin Prison, Jan. 15. The parole board held a meeting at San Quentin this morning and then went to lunch at the warden's office. We had been at lunch about five minutes when two convicts sprang through the kitchen door and covered us with revolvers.

Warden Holohan tried to run out the front door to sound an alarm. Two more convicts, both with automatics, were in the hall. They beat him over the head with their guns.

All four convicts then assembled in the dining room, covering us with revolvers. In addition to the board members, Mark Noon, board clerk; Mrs. Holohan and her sister were present.

Forced to Change Clothes.

The convicts then made the board members change clothes with them and marched us out, with Mr. Noon, to the warden's car, which was in front of his house. Two unarmed guards were out there. The convicts covered them and told all of us to get into the car.

They instructed the guards to call out to other guards, who had assembled in response to an alarm, not to shoot or they would kill everybody in our party.

Warden Holohan Slugged With Pistol by Fleeing Desperado.

Men Overpowered Within the Walls

Seized as Hostages, They Are Tossed From Car as Police Bait.

San Quentin, Calif., Jan. 16 (U.P.). One of California's most daring prison breaks—in which the entire State pardon board was abducted as hostages—ended tonight with the slaying of one of the fugitives and capture of the other three.

Warden James Holohan, famous frontier marshal of San Francisco's "hell-roaring" days, was cracked on the head with a convict's gun and left for dead in the prison yard. He suffered a fractured skull and 26 head wounds and at first was feared dying, but tonight his condition was improved and Dr. Leo Stanley, prison physician, said he had an even chance for recovery.

The four members of the State board of pardons and paroles, who had been seized while at lunch in the warden's home inside the walls and used as shields in the wildly-careening prison automobile in which the convicts fled, were safe. So were two guards, also taken for protection in the dash for freedom.

Board Is Overpowered.

The board met this morning to consider the usual list of applications for paroles. At noon, as is customary, the four members—President Sykes, Secretary Mark Noon, Joseph Stephens and Warren Atherton—retired to Warden Holohan's home for lunch.

The group toyed with soup and salad, discussing official business, with an occasional jest or word of State politics.

There was a call at the door for the warden. As he stepped to the door a group of convicts leaped upon him. Some clubbed him. Somewhere they had obtained automatics. Other convicts swept into the dining room. The astonished board members were subdued quickly.

A big State-owned sedan rolled up to the door to receive the board members. The convicts rushed out, hustling their hostages with them. They seized Guard Lieut. Harry Jones and Guard Frank Duzey, slammed the doors and roared across the prison yard.

Not A Shot Is Fired.

The car whirled through the gate, so far as was learned, without a single shot being fired. The board members were held inside the car, the guards placed on either running board as shields against gunfire.

The car shot out onto highways as teletype machines carried word to police and sheriff's offices all over California. It raced through towns and villages in an effort to break through police lines which began forming a few minutes after the alarm had been sounded. Everywhere they found their way blocked by barricades.

As they careened on they began picking up pursuers, fast police cars and motorcycles with sirens screaming. They threw Noon, prominent politician, out of the car as a bait to halt the onrushing police. A little farther on they tossed out the two guards. Then, finding their way blocked, they backtracked and shot past pursuers.

In desperation they turned toward the coast. Authorities following reports of the pursuit knew then that it was only a question of time before the prisoners were caught in a cul de sac.

Police Were Within Range.

The fugitive car sped into the sparsely-settled Hicks Valley. Police followed in increasing numbers. Over a dozen miles they raced grimly, throttles wide open and police cars gradually moving within gun range.

The officers had a little more pick-up to their cars; a little more daring on the turns; a little less weight in their machines. Finally, 18 miles west of Petaluma, they wheeled around a slight turn and were in gun range of the convict car.

Fire broke from the first of the posse machines. Tires on the convict car burst and the machine careened crazily. The chase was at an end.

The convicts fled into a creamery. Hardly had the last of them disappeared inside, his flight singed by whistling bullets, than the building was surrounded.

Frank C. Sykes, president of the board, said this evening at Petaluma that one of the convicts told him the group had obtained pistols and ammunition from a prison guard for $1,000. Sykes said the convicts had four automatics and a fair supply of ammunition. He had the name of the guard alleged to have furnished them.

A brief exchange of shots ended resistance, with one convict mortally wounded. Stephens and Sykes were wounded. Their fellow board member Atherton reported to the prison by telephone.

At the prison a chec was made

Standard Oil Ends Impasse By Stock Move

Will Issue $10,000,000 in Securities Undre New U.S. Securities Rules.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Filing of notice by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey of an intention to issue $10,000,000 of new capital stock, to be registered under regulations promulgated earlier in the week, yesterday caused the Securities and Exchange Commission to believe it had at last broken the log-jam in the capital issues market.

This step by the Standard Oil Co. also aroused hope that within a short time it would launch a refinancing $45,000,000 long-term bond issue and that other corporations requiring either new capital or refinancing soon would enter the money markets. Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the SEC, envisages as much as $3,000,000,000 of corporate refinancing in the comparatively near future.

Confusion on Gold Clause.

A clear test of the efficacy of the commission's new regulations under the 1933 securities act for seasoned corporations with records of operations will not be possible for several weeks due to the general confusion and apprehension existing in financial centers over the outcome of the gold-clause cases pending before the Supreme Court.

It is understood that perspective issuers of securities are holding back in order to determine how the Supreme Court ruling may affect the money markets. For that reason the notice filed yesterday by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey was regarded as the more significant. In that quarter, at least, there is apparently a growing confidence in the future.

Meanwhile the SEC found enthusiastic support in the Senate for itself and the work it is doing. Without debate, the Senate con-

League Lifts Arms Embargo To Aid Bolivia Against Enemy

Geneva, Jan. 16 (AP).—For the first time in its history, the League of Nations today took punitive action against a war-making member.

Because Paraguay has failed to accept the league's plan for peace in the Chaco, the league's Chaco advisory committee voted to reinforce the arms embargo against Paraguay and lift the embargo against Bolivia, which has accepted the plan.

Bolivia henceforth will be free to buy, and nations adhering to the league's embargo will be free to sell, armaments and munitions.

The committee's action took the form of recommendations to the government now imposing the embargo on the Chaco belligerents.

An unprecedented step, it creates delicate problems for the United States inasmuch as the American Congress, in authorizing the embargo, stipulated it should be operated against both the warring nations.

The United States and Brazil, as nonmembers of the league, will be asked to subscribe to the project, which was described in Geneva as the league's most drastic step toward putting an end to the South American conflict.

Paraguay is given a further chance to accept the peace plan, since the resolution specifies that February 24 is the date of expiration of the three months Paraguay has to decide finally concerning the detailed plan for ending the war.

Snow Falls Here, Rain Forecast; 18 Snowbound on Western Peak

It snowed here last night, but just as Washington prepared to draw up a white blanket while slumbering youngsters dreamed of thundering sleighs, the weather man put a damper on the whole situation.

He predicted rain in the early morning hours of today that would drive the snow into slush, rain that would last all day today as temperatures steady slighly above 30 degrees. He added that the Capital would probably receive sharp cold weather tomorrow, but could promise no more snow this week.

The local snowfall, which totaled more than 2 inches according to the weather man, was part of a general wet weather belt that stretched across the Nation from Chicago into Virginia. Richmond received snow, but other large towns in the belt path had rain or sleet instead. In Washington the snow began at about 6 p. m. In the Shenandoah Valley, snow started shortly after noon and had piled 4 inches by nightfall.

In the West, three trains were stalled by snow, and, as the worst storm since 1932 whipped across Cumbers Pass, 10,000 feet up in Colorado, attempts were being made to rescue 14 passengers and 4 trainmen marooned in the Cumbers Station. According to an Associated Press dispatch, two wedge plows failed to penetrate 20-foot drifts in efforts to reach the marooned 18. A rotary snowplow was ramming its way up from Alamosa, Colo., last night.

Caucus Called As Bonus Camp Divides on Bill

Patman Will Try to Force Vote; Vinson Backers Stand Firm.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Supporters of the Patman bill for immediate full cash bonus payment will meet tonight to map strategy for forcing a House vote on the measure.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, and his friends, chagrined over introduction by Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, of a different cash bonus proposal favored by the American Legion, are considering seeking to force a vote on their measure by linking it with the legislative appropriation bill, which provides for the salaries of Senators and Representatives.

"We expect from 100 to 200 members at the caucus on our bill," Patman said. "We will fire the opening gun in our third and final drive to win real justice for the former service men."

Plan Steering Committee.

The Texan explained a special steering committee would be named to perfect strategy. He made plain his group would make no overtures to Vinson or the American Legion.

"The veterans want my bill," he added. "We've passed it through the House twice before. This time we'll get it through both the House and the Senate."

Patman said he believed the House Ways and Means Committee would favorably report his bill without amendment. He made known, however, that thought has been given to means of compelling a vote on the floor should the committee seek to delay or prevent consideration.

Bills Differ on Method.

Observers believed Vinson, from his membership on the ways and means group and due to his Legion backing, had an outside chance of persuading the committee to approve his bonus ideas instead of those of Patman. Both Vinson and Patman proposed full bonus payment at once. The chief difference between the two measures is that Patman's plan would authorize issuance of the necessary new currency, perhaps $2,000,000,000, while the Vinson scheme would in effect call for a bond issue to raise the money.

Patman's advantage in the split, generally recognized, was attributed to his long identification with the bonus movement, the large following he has built up among lower chamber members and the near success of his earlier efforts.

Indications were that when bonus debate begins in the House, friends of Patman's bill would question the sincerity of Legion officials in working with Vinson rather than Patman, unless the differences between the Texan and the Kentuckian have been ironed out before that time.

Special Rule Sought.

Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, already has advanced a resolution for a special rule to permit consideration of the Patman bill as an amendment to the legislative appropriation measure. Patman bill advocates pointed out if the necessity should aris for a petition to insure a vote, it would be easier to get names on a petition for a rule than on an out-and-out bonus list. New House rules require 218 signatures on petitions.

Frank N. Belgrano, jr., Legion national commander, issued a statement in defense of the Vinson bill. He said it conformed with the "mandate" of the recent Miami convention of his organization.

"The Legion," the statement went on, "has no quarrel with the proponents of any other bills now before Congress asking for the immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates, of which there are some 25, but desires to comply with the recommendations adopted at its last national convention. The American Legion will abide by the decision of the Congress as to the method and manner of providing funds for payment."

Frank Wiley pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 25 to 30 years. Charles Zied, convicted by a jury, got 20 to 40 years.

Between You and Me

Wheeler Has Them Guessing; Left-Wingers Worry Democrats; Third Party Feared.

By Raymond Clapper

Democratic politicians are wondering about Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana. In 1924 he left the Democratic Party to run on an independent national ticket. Will he do so again next year?

There is a suspicion in some Democratic quarters that he may, or rather that he is working himself into a strategic position, where he can do so if a propitious opportunity presents itself.

Some Democratic leaders sought to head Wheeler off from the chairmanship of the powerful Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. They tried to persuade Senator Ellison Smith, of South Carolina, a former chairman of the committee, to return to that post, but he preferred to keep the key seat on the Agriculture Committee instead. After that, Wheeler inherited the chairmanship by seniority.

This places him in a position to actively and effectively champion Government ownership of railroads, to which the Administration is opposed. The tall Montanan has extended his reach also by adding to his committee Senator Homer Bone, of Washington, one of the most aggressive champions of Government ownership in the country.

Senator Wheeler is renewing his agitation for monetary inflation, lending his support to the group now in session here which has the purpose of goading the Administration to a more venturesome currency policy. As a silverite, Wheeler once was somewhat aloof from the paper inflationists led by Elmer Thomas. He is playing with the entire inflationist group now much more than formerly.

A certain amount of forward passing has taken place between Wheeler and Senator Huey Long. Wheeler opposed the Administration in his last campaign to the extent of campaigning for Gov. Olson, the Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, and Senator Bronson Cutting, left-wing Republican. No one of these various circumstances would stamp a Democrat as heading definitely off of the reservation, but the combination of them all is sufficient to give rise to such a suspicion in some Democratic quarters.

Wheeler was the elder La Follette's vice presidential running mate on the Progressive Party ticket in 1924. It would be curious if a younger La Follette were his running-mate in 1936, on a third party ticket.

* * * *

Curious, too, is the fact that when the Democrats peer into the crystal to learn what 1936 has in store, they do not see formidable Republican opponents facing them but rather menacing left-wingers who threaten to crowd them over to the right. It is the Father Coughlins, the Huey Longs, the Olsons, Wheelers, La Follettes and such, each with a considerable body of followers, that need to be watched.

* * * *

In certain States overtures to Republicans may be expected from Democratic leaders on the theory that unless the two old parties merge, a third party will dominate next year.

* * * *

That, however, probably was not the reason President Roosevelt had Senator McNary in earlier this week to outline to him the White House plan for a TVA in the Columbia River basin which would bring new bloom to millions of acres in Oregon and Washington. Mr. Roosevelt thought the Republican Senate leader, who was the active sponsor of the Bonneville Dam, which is part of the Columbia River development, would be interested to know that the Administration had further plans in store for his section. That was one reason the President told McNary about it. Is it possible that the other reason is that Mr. Roosevelt can use some Republican help in blocking the soldier bonus?

* * * *

The story going around the Capitol is that Secretary of Labor Perkins can be head of Wellesley College if she is interested, but it is understood she is not.

* * * *

Officials are looking into a suggestion that expanded CCC workers be put to work digging in abandoned gold mines, and working placer locations. How they could justify this as useful work is another question, with the Government owning the greatest pile of gold ever assembled and just sitting on it like a hen on a nest of china eggs, and not permitting anyone else to have any gold.

* * * *

William B. Shearer, the big bass drum of the shipbuilders' lobby at the Geneva arms conference in 1927, has appeared mysteriously in the White House lobby recently. He looked as if something momentous was afoot but he was merely waiting to see Secretary McIntyre, an old acquaintance, about a minor personal matter.

* * * *

Senator Joseph T. Robinson had to correct an absent-minded White House slip yesterday. The President's World Court message went to the Senate dated January 16, 1934. After it was in the error was discovered and unanimous consent was asked to change the date. Nobody objected.

Fight in House Looms on New D.C. Budget Cut endanger the future of the children."

Several members, including Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Dirksen, are planning to offer amendments to grant the Metropolitan Police Department all or part of the 141 additional policemen asked by the department.

Increase Only $1,210,879.

The bill, on its face, appears to be $2,723,726.06 larger than the 1935 act, but actually it is only $1,210,879.06 greater because of the 5-and-10 pay restoration which was not accounted for in last year's act.

Most of the $1,250,000 increase over 1935 is accounted for by elimination of the last 5 per cent pay cut on July 1.

Provisions for continuation of the $1.50 tax rate and the record low United States payment of 5,700,000 are included.

Whereas the Budget Bureau submitted a budget that would have left the District with an estimated defici of $33 at the end of the next fiscal year, the bill would give the city a theoretical surplus of $612,780.

Increases Other Surpluses.

The economy of the committee not only leaves this surplus in general revenues but increases the estimated surpluses in the gasoline tax and water funds to $498,000 and $888,000, rspectively. Since these collections can be used only for highway work and improvements in the Water Department, the money will lie idle in the Treasury.

Among the deletions made by the sub-committee, in addition to the estimate for character education, are:

An estimate of $9,920 for continuation of the Federal-District Employment Center. While the bill cuts off only six District employes, it leaves the fate of the 28 Federal employes and the status of the service in doubt.

Estimates of $70,000 for the Woodrow Wilson High School and $70,000 for improvements at the Armstrong High School. It also refused to reappropriate an unexpended balance of $55,000 for the purchase of additional land at the Phelps vocational school.

Viaduct Sstimate Cut Out.

Estimates of $220,000 for construction of a viaduct in line of Franklin street over the Baltimore & Ohio Railway tracks and $15,000 for an engineering survey for a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge over the Anacostia River.

The committee refused to reappropriate an unexpended balance of $40.000 for continuation of reclamation work in Anacostia Park.

As a means of saving an estimated $250.000 a year, eventually, the bill carries a provision abolishing free schooling for certain pupils living outside the District, but states that "this limitation shall not apply to pupils who are enrolled in the schools of the District of Columbia on the date of the approval of this act."

Also carried are provisions that the Capital Transit Co. shall pay half of the construction cost of the Michigan Avenue Viaduct and the cost of widening and altering the Benning Road Viaduct.

P. U. C. Employes Increased.

Text of President's Message Urging World Court Ratified by the Senate

TO THE SENATE:

The movement to make international justice practicable and serviceable is not subject to partisan considerations. For years, Republican and Democratic Administrations and party platforms alike have advocated a court of justice to which nations might voluntarily bring their disputes for judicial decision.

To give concrete realization to this obviously sound and thoroughly American policy, I hope that at an early date the Senate will advise and consent to the adherence by the United States to the protocol of signature of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, dated December 16, 1920, the protocol for the revision of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, dated September 14, 1929, and the protocol for the accession of the United States of America to the protocol of signature of the statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, dated September 14, 1929, all of which were submitted to the Senate December 10, 1930.

I urge that the Senate's consent be given in such form as not to defeat or to delay the objective of adherence.

The sovereignty of the United States will be in no way diminished or jeopardized by such action. At this period in international relationships, when every act is of moment to the future of world peace, the United States has an opportunity once more to throw its weight into the scale in favor of peace.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

in 11,000,000 of unemployed and swelling relief rolls, adding:

"I resent that I have to turn my mind from domestic policies to things across the sea at a time like this."

President Harriman of the Chamber of Commerce, in his letter to Senators, said that business men's organizations which constitute the chamber "have repeatedly expressed their support of adherence by the United States Government to the protocols of the Permanent Court of International Justice."

3 Pupils and Driver Die as Train Hits Car

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 16 (AP). Three school children and a motorist were killed during a sleet storm late today when a fast Milwaukee freight train struck an automobile carrying six children to their homes near the outskirts of Oconomowoc. The three other children were injured and hospital attendants said one may die.

The dead: E. M. Chaffee, driver of the car; Pauline Dornford, 13; Ross Dornford, 7; an 8-year-old son of Jess Gleisner.

Arkansas Seeks Bonus.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 16 (AP).—The Arkansas House today memorialized Congress to pass the bill calling for immediate payment of the World War soldiers' adjusted compensation certificates.

More Help Is Planned For House Members

Representatives who think they are overworked are going to get a chance to do something about it, according to the Associated Press.

Representative White (Democrat), of Idaho, told his colleagues yesterday he was going to propose a resolution that would add one clerk to each member's staff.

"Is that to take care of additional patronage?" questioned Representative Taber (Republican), of New York.

"It is not," White replied. "Due to the extreme burden of work I think we require increased clerical forces."

Woman Robbed in Car, Police Seeking Driver

A 52-year-old Maryland woman was assaulted and robbed in Southeast Washington last night. The police are hunting a white man said to have committed the attack.

The woman said she had entered the stranger's car at Alabama avenue and Forty-fourth street southeast, and that they had gone on to Hillcrest avenue and Fort Baker drive southeast. There the man suddenly flung a sack over her head, dragged her out of the car, and assaulted her. She said he had also taken $34 in bills and a purse containing keys and small change.

The New Orleans Flier left that city at 4:50 yesterday morning to make a dawn-to-dusk flight to the Newark Airport and back. On board were Capt. Rickenbacker, who is in charge of the ship, and his wife; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the war President; T. Semmes Walmsley, Mayor of New Orleans, and his daughter, Augusta; J. H. Kindelberger, president of North American Airways; Rudolf Hecht, president of the American Bankers Association; representatives of all the newspaper associations, as well as Dick Merrill and G. W. Branson, pilots in charge of the flight under Capt. Rickenbacker's direction.

Tuesday night Capt. Rickenbacker was obviously skeptical when Mrs. Wilson and I agreed we needed only 20 minutes' warning to prepare for sailing orders, so we compromised on half an hour. We were not a little proud, therefore, when we arrived at the door of the hotel ten minutes before the men appeared. Wrapped in fur coats and carrying opulent bunches of roses and orchids, we looked more as if we were returning from a very late and gay party than like two sober ladies who have been invited to help initiate a new airline. It is lucky for Capt. Rickenbacker that he lost us when we had made the round trip to Washington or he would need another plane to carry the flowers.

Photographers Present.

Arriving in the pitch-darkness of a winter morning at the airport, we were completely disconcerted to find that the Associated Press wirephotographers had preceded us, for no woman enjoys the thought that the world will be able soon to see just how terrible she looks in a flashlight photo at 4 a. m. of a chill winter's dawn after four hours of sleep.

We are up early enough, but the pilots, including Capt. Rickenbacker, have already done a good hour's work. They have been in touch with every weather station and become intimately acquainted with every wind that blows until there is no chance of the least surprise between New Orleans and Newark. It is all so scientific, this flying, that we are robbed of the least thrill of danger. You can just sit down with the weather reports, a piece of paper and a pencil and figure out your whole trip before starting. So much so that when a pilot checks in on the dot, he ought to put Q. E. D. on the office timesheet and let it go at that. I only hoped the pilots had a quieter bedroom than Mrs. Wilson's and mine, for otherwise no amount of higher mathematics would get us safely to Newark.

A North Pole Cinema.

The plane climb at once to a height of 9,000 feet, which later becomes 14,000 in order to reach the most propitious air currents. We travel 210 miles an hour over the same Arctic expanse of clouds upon which we saw the sunset the night before. I conceal my surprise that clouds just seem to hang around in the same old spot for so long a time. So frigid is the atmosphere in this ice-grey light of predawn, so endless is the fleecy expanse, that I am convinced we are part of a North Pole cinema and expect at any moment to dash past Admiral Byrd sitting in an igloo reading the New York Times.

Mr. Kindelberger is not only president of the North American Airways, but also the engineer who designed the Douglas plane in which we are flying. When I challenged him as to the especial merits of the Douglas plane, he said: "The distinguishing characteristics of the Douglas plane are: General cleanness of design—the shape of the wings and the body is considered beautiful, but they are purely practical in origin. There is a complete elimination of any parasite drag. Its provisions for comfort are numerous. It has special soundproofing, elimination of practically all vibration even when only one engine is being used. It has steam heating and excellent ventilation, for the air changes once every minute. Even if it is 20 degrees below zero outside, the temperature within can be kept at 70 degrees. The seats can be adjusted to practically any taste and any figure. The Douglas planes are especially steady, for there is a quick damping of any disturbance. The maximum speed with normal propeller setting in still air is 215 miles per hour at 8,000 feet. The maximum cruising speed is 203 miles per hour at 1,400 feet at 75 per cent power. The single-engine performance is very good, for these planes can be flown with a full load at 9,500 feet altitude on one engine."

Admires Stone Mountain.

After leaving Atlanta we pass over Stone Mountain, a great rock boulder of fine form and dimensions. The various scratches that numerous so-called sculptors have made upon its well-molded sides, look like so many scars on a magnificent piece of natural sculpture.

While we are some 14,000 feet up and completely out of sight of land, Capt. Rickenbacker invited me into the pilot's cockpit and let me use a pair of earphones while they were signaling the weather stations to check up the plane's bearings. "Two thirty-eight calling Spartanburg," called our pilot, and immediately came back word we were immediately above Spartanburg and Spartanburg would not reply himself because he was home having coffee and ham and eggs for breakfast. This constant intimacy with land while we are suspended so high in the heavens gives one a conviction of being at one and the same time on an eerie journey and yet safely at home. For again we travel in this ocean of clouds with more steadiness than an ocean liner maintains upon a quiet sea. The size of these new planes contributes to this, for the wingspread is 86 feet and the fuselage 68 feet in length.

Mrs. Wilson, in spite of our short rest and constant travel, is radiantly happy over the whole experience. Her humor and her love of adventure are infectious. She is especially amused over a letter which she received recently which was addressed quite simply "Ex-First Lady of the Land."

When we land she is kindness itself to the newspapermen who greet us everywhere, and though she refuses ot give interviews, she does it in such a way that press men all feel as if she had bestowed some great favor upon them.

Below us it is raining, but we have climbed 16,000 feet above the storm and are dashing ahead at record speed with a tail wind that may enable us to make a record run to New York from Atlanta without stopping at Washington to refuel.

As there are so few women on this enchanting adventure, I am reminded that in my numerous air trips between New York and Washington I am frequently the only woman, although the plane is always crowded. Why is it that one sees so few women in airplanes? Can it be that the American woman is not nearly as up-to-date and progressive as she thinks she is? If so, let us hope that Amelia Earhart's gallant journey from Hawaii to California will serve to make our women more air-conscious.

A snowstorm is raging above and below us now and, instead of climbing higher, the ice on the wings drives us to a lower level.

We all feel an unquestioning confidence in every decision that Capt. Rickenbacker makes. He has a radiant cheerfulness, is somewhat high-strung like all seasoned airmen, but with a mysterious inner control which characterizes Lindbergh as well.

Sixty miles this side of New York, the gas supply being low because of head-winds that had been retarding our speed, Capt. Rickenbacker decided it was wise to cut out one engine, an interesting illustration of the wide margin of safety that has to be observed in the air.

The Newark airfield was reached, as Capt. Rickenbacker predicted, at 1 o'clock (1:07 to be exact), the total flying time from New Orleans being six hours and forty minutes, or three and a half hours better than any previous record. As the total mileage was about 1,300, this meant an average flying time of 200 miles per hour.

Nobody is happier about the trip than Capt. Rickenbacker himself, not only because he has broken another record, but because he had the honor, as he himself put it while speaking for a sound film, of having as his guest Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who, for him, is still the First Lady of the Land. A. E. M.

Storm Forces Rickenbacker To End Flight

Turns Back to Washington; New Orleans Guests Take Train.

Rickenbacker found me," she said. "But, gee, it was swell. And he's swell, too. He was just as nice as he could be. And I saw my first snow, way, way up in the air. Gee, it was wonderful."

Rickenbacker, although deeply disappointed at the unkindness of fate, was a genial host to the girl at the Hangar Club, Marie Louise's first visit to a night club. She and Mrs. Rickenbacker, who accompanied her husband on the flight, became fast friends, and after supper the three visited friends in Washington.

Richard Merrill, noted pilot who on Monday had established a new record between Miami and New York, was piloting the plane when Capt. Rickenbacker ordered the return to Washington. His copilot was G. W. Branson. They believed it would have been possible to complete the journey with the one motor, but the three airmen decided to take no chances.

It was revealed by newspapermen making the trip that Mayor Walmsley had an uncomfortable moment when the plane arrived at the Newark airport. There among the crowd of greeters was Abe Shushman, of the Louisiana Levy Commission, a Huey Long henchman and political foe of the mayor. Mayor Walmsley was visibly surprised at seeing Shushman, but the two were reported to have nodded genially to each other, although they did not speak.

The big Douglas liner left Newark at 1:05 and was in the air continuously until its brief Washington stop at 3:30 in the afternoon.

'All for Roosevelt,' Johnson to Spurn Private Job Bids

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Hugh S. Johnson declared tonight he intends to "put everything I have on the ball for what Franklin D. Roosevelt stands for."

The former NRA executive said all the "talk" that he is going to work for "big business" gives him "a pain," adding:

"I'm not going to take any job. I'm going to set aside another year to do just what I have been doing steadily for the last two and a half years—put everything I have on the ball for what Franklin D. Roosevelt stands for.

"I can do it better out of Government than in, because I don't have to walk any official tight rope. I couldn't do it at all on any industrial payroll."

The general's address was broadcast over an N.B.C. network.

Saying he had been offered some jobs, Johnson said "they'll all shuck out to rest on NRA publicity and some idea of a pull in Washington and it gives me a faint nausea."

Gen. Von Steuben Dies At Age of 79 in Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 16 (AP).—Gen. Kuno von Steuben, 79, who served Germany actively on the eastern fronts during the World War, died today o' the infirmities of age. He was the head of the family famous in the historical annals of the United States because of the services of Maj. Gen. Baron von Steuben, of Washington's Army.

Gen. von Steuben was commandant of the German War Academy until 1914, but went into service at the front immediately upon the outbreak of the war.

France Adds Conscrip' Term.

Paris, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Superior War Council today approved an inmonths in the period of conscript service and also approved the quick crease from one year to eighteen development of army motorization.

Flight Praised By First Lady

Amelia Earhart's Achievement Acclaimed by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Flights, such as that of Amelia Earhart's solo hop from Hawaii to California, furnish information and data upon which future argonauts of the air may set new records and chart new skyways, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said at her press conference at the White House yesterday.

She described Miss Earhart's achievement as "just grand," and said she had sent a message of congratulation to her.

"It's exciting to learn that a woman has accomplished such a feat," Mrs. Roosevelt asserted. "I am always proud and pleased when a woman achieves in any manner, and Miss Earhart must have felt when she undertook her flight that by her successful air voyage she would draw the West Coast of our country and Hawaii closer together in the minds of the people."

Jack and Jill, two playful Irish setters and present White House pets, briefly interrupted the conference when they paid an unannounced visit.

Mrs. Roosevelt denied rumors of a squabble with Secretary of the Interior Ickes and said emphatically that she did not ask the resignation of E. K. Burley and Louis R. Glavis.

"I never would dream of asking either the resignation or discipline of any one," she said. "The running of departments is the business of the heads of those departments and no outsider would have the slightest basis to ask any head to do anything about his own people."

Story of Escape Bared by Hostage

The convicts were armed with four automatics, had extra clips of ammunition and obviously meant business. They ordered Guard Jones to drive the car. In order not to kill us, guards on the walls and at the gates held back their fire.

Jones drove at 70 miles an hour. When he reached the first drawbridge we saw it was up. A car was pursuing us. The convicts let Mr. Noon out and instructed him to tell the occupants of the other car they had better let us through or we would be killed. Meanwhile other cars of officers had arrived. Mr. Noon walked to pursuing cars and gave them the message. They opened up and let us through, then started following us again.

Passed Several Patrol Cars.

The convicts told Jones to drive toward the coast. He did, taking a back road through the hills. We passed several other patrol cars and they didn't shoot because we were there.

At Tomales we could see a whole posse gathered. As we went through they opened fire on our car. The tires were shot out from under our machine. Bullets wounded Mr. Sykes, Mr. Stephens and one of the convicts.

Guard Jones, one of the convicts and I were in the front seat. The convict pushed Jones out of the car and took the wheel himself. The other convicts shouted to drive on until they saw a car which they could seize.

The posse's cars were speeding up behind us.

The convicts saw no cars they could commandeer and decided they would abandon the car at the first sign of cover. Then we swung around a curve and the posse could see us. They started firing.

Scrap Repeal, Sheppard Asks, Keeping 'Tryst'

Dean of Congress Voices His Annual Defense of Prohibition.

Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, white-haired, diminutive dean of Congress, and arch antagonist of liquor in any form, yesterday kept an annual tryst with the eighteenth amendment, in a memorial speech on the fifteenth anniversary of prohibition.

Demanding the immediate return of Federal dry laws, the man who guided the eighteenth amendment to Senate passage declared there are more legalized saloons in the country than when the amendment was adopted.

He cited increased Washington traffic deaths and jail commitments, in point.

Hits Bootlegger.

"The all-time record in automobile fatalities and injuries for this city was made under repeal in 1934, during which 134 persons were killed and 3,973 injured," he said, pointing to a 68.75 per cent increase shown in Washington police statistics.

"Jail records for the District of Columbia show that in 1932 there were 8,430 commitments for intoxication; that in 1933, with beer legalized after April 7, these commitments rose to 11,618; that in 1934, under repeal, they reached a total of 13,462."

The dry warrior, who has not missed an anniversary speech since prohibition was enacted, said the bootlegger is still functioning and "the evils of liquor and the liquor traffic have multiplied so rapidly as to call for the immediate return of prohibition."

House "Celebrates."

The anniversary, meantime, was celebrated in the House by Speaker Byrns sitting quickly and effectively on a motion to sell wine in the House restaurant.

Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of Brooklyn, N. Y., arose on a question of personal privilege.

"Members should have the right to imbibe temperately as they will," he said.

"Well, if you got your wine, I should be allowed to have a drink of straight Scotch," said Representative Tom Blanton (Democrat), of Texas.

And then he explained to his astonished dry colleagues that such a practice would set up a bar in the Capitol. He then raised a point of order. Speaker Byrns sustained the point.

to determine who were the men who escaped. With more than 5,000 prisoners held, their task was difficult. All prisoners were either locked in their cells or ordered to their regular stations of duty while guards went through the lists, calling rolls.

San Quentin, built to house 3,294 convicts, has been holding 5,747 men recently—many of them desperate criminals, murderers and long termers.

Overcrowded conditions have resulted in numerous disturbances during recent months. Crudely-fashioned weapons have been found in cells. Brawls among inmates have been frequent. Solitary confinement cells have been kept busy with victims of disciplinary measures.

Tom Mooney, serving a life-term for the famous 1916 San Francisco preparedness day bombing, is the prison's most famous inmate.

Virginia Births, Deaths Up.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 16 (AP).—Figures released today by the bureau of vital statistics showed 818 more births in Virginia during the first 11 months of 1934 than in the corresponding period in 1933 and 1,727 more deaths on the same comparative basis.

Roosevelt Maps Cotton Control On Wheat Plan

Seeks International Pact to Curb Volume on World Markets.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt was disclosed yesterday to be working quietly for an international agreement to control the volume of cotton offered on the world market in an effort to stabilize prices, as has been attempted for wheat.

This was made known at the White House as Mr. Roosevelt, for the second consecutive day, turned his attention to America's largest export crop. It also coincided with a State Department notice putting Italy on the list of those with whom trade pacts are to be negotiated.

Despite the apparent breakdown of the world wheat agreement, Mr. Roosevelt feels that the same principles can be made to apply to cotton and that, on the whole, an agreement between nations offers the most logical plan for the disposal of farm surpluses.

With this in mind, he has been conferring with officials of the State, Treasury and Agriculture Departments. The subject also is being debated abroad, but discussions have not reached the point of calling an international conference, nor has this Government taken it up with any foreign country.

Secretary Wallace disclosed, after attending a White House conference, that the national quota under the Bankhead cotton control law will be announced at 11 a. m. today. The allotment which may be sold tax free will approximate 12,000,000 bales, it has been indicated, including 700,000 bale certificates carried over from 1934.

With domestic consumption figured at 5,500,000 bales, officials are hopeful of exporting enough to cut the present 8,500,000-bale surplus to 7,500,000 bales by August 1, 1936. Besides Wallace, those attending the conference were Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator; Cully A. Cobb, AAA cotton chief; Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama; Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Representative Marvin Jones, Texas.

Hugh L. Taylor Dies; Brother of Governors

Elizabethton, Tenn., Jan. 16 (AP). Hugh L. Taylor, 75, brother of two Tennessee Governors, Robert L. and Alfred A. Taylor, died at a hospital here today following a long illness.

He underwent a major operation yesterday.

He was the last of the famous Taylor brothers, and was well known as a writer and lecturer. His Governor-brothers were famed for their "war of the roses" campaign against each other for the governorship of Tennessee. Robert was a Democrat and Alf a Republican.

E. R. Fancher Dies; Reserve Bank Head

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 16 (AP).—Elvador R. Fancher, 71, governor of the Fourth District Federal Reserve Bank, died suddenly of heart disease today in his home.

Fancher was the bank's first and only governor, receiving his appointment from the Wilson Administration on October 23, 1914, when the Federal Reserve Banking System went into effect. He had been in failing health for more than a year, but his death was unexpected.

Hauptmann's Thoughts Turn To War Times

Vows He Didn't Listen to Experts Who Said He Wrote Notes.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 16.—The State of New Jersey's last handwriting expert left the witness chair tonight, and there came to Bruno Richard Hauptmann a sudden surcease from the drip, drip of cold, scientific testimony that has fallen on his head for three days.

He seemed to be glad of it.

It had begun tc get on his nerves, and when a correspondent asked him after today's court session what he thought of the expert testimony, he shook his head irritably and said:

"I didn't listen."

Then he was led back to his cell, with the fingers of guards locked around his wrists.

Now it becomes possible to summarize the weight and import of the testimony that these eight scientists have flung at Hauptmann.

Over and over this phrase came tumbling from the lips of the experts:

Closes His Ears.

"The man who wrote the ransom notes was Bruno Richard Hauptmann." Hauptmann had no defense for such accusations. He could not mutter "You're a liar!" to these men as he muttered it to Joseph Peronne, the taxicab driver. He could not shake his head slowly from side to side as he did the day old Amandus Hochmuth identified him as the man he saw near Hopewell in a green sedan at noon of the day of the kidnaping.

So he closed his ears to the scientific testimony and sat with his arms folded across his chest, his eyes brooding on something out the window. He even was glad to talk of other things than ransom notes and ladders and gold certificates. Once he discussed the World War.

"There are some stories going around," he was told, "that you were one of the men chained to a machine gun to cover the last retreat of the German army."

Hauptmann thought that was funny.

"I never was chained to a machine gun," he said. "I never saw anybody chained to a machine gun and I saw plenty of war."

"How do you like the jury, do you think they will give you a square deal?"

Jury "Looks Okay."

A smile tugged at the corners of his lips, as he turned to lok at the eight men and four women who hold the power of life or death over him with their "Yea" or "Nay."

"They look okay," he said.

"Did you sleep all right last night?"

"Yes, I sleep good."

"Have a good breakfast?"

"Pretty good breakfast."

With such trivial words as those did Hauptmann try to shut out of his mind the fact that eight supposedly disinterested men had damned him as guilty of the Lindbergh crime. He began to worry about that three days ago when he leaned over to C. Lloyd Fisher, one of his lawyers, and apparently complained that all the expert testimony was against him and none for him.

"That's all right, Bruno," Fisher consoled him, "they're having their innings now. Ours will come later."

Fight on Utilities May Be Widened

A hint that Federal regulation of holding companies may be proposed to cover all industries, as well as public utilities, was dropped at the White House yesterday by Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

"Personally," declared Mr. Rayburn after a talk with President Roosevelt, "I'm in favor of laying down a policy under which they will disappear altogether."

He added that to do this at once might be too much of a shock to industry. In reply to another question, he said that the forthcoming legislation on holding companies may or may not be confined to public utilities.

The intruder escaped by the fire escape leading to the roof. Police said they believed he had hidden in the building preparatory to breaking into a safe.

Long Foes Plan Military Body, Allen Warned

'Drastic Action' Threatened Unless 'Dictatorship' Laws Changed.

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 16 (AP).—As Gov. O. K. Allen continued to ignore its demand for immediate repeal of dictator laws, the Square Deal Association of Louisiana late today, just before the "zero hour" for his compliance with its ultimatum, announced that military companies would be organized and drilled over the State if the chief executive continued silent.

The association issued its statement as State police guards were massed in and around the Statehouse, the executive mansion and over the city of Baton Rouge as the hours dwindled before midnight, final time limit allotted to the Governor to call the legislature into session for erasure of Senator Huey P. Long's "obnoxious laws."

"The intensity of the feeling of the people . . . has caused many people to expect drastic action immediately after 12 tonight if the Governor does not act," the pronouncement read:

"We propose and will organize companies of this organization in every section of the State along strictly military lines. These companies are to be drilled and taught the rudiments of military science, so as to perfect an organization that is instantly mobile and that can be conrolled and effective."

Dictator Long was far from the scene, attending his senatorial duties in Washington.

4 More Experts Brand Hauptmann as Penman

Osborn's Son Finds German Wrote 14 Notes

Richmonder, Californian, Federal Expert Agree in Testimony.

Harry E. Cassidy, of Richmond, Va., was called first. Assistant Attorney General Joseph Lanigan began:

Q. Where do you reside?—A. In Highland Park, just outside of Richmond, Va.

Q. Your profession?—A. Document examiner for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad.

The witness said he had examined both the ransom and the Hauptmann writings and was convinced all the 14 ransom notes were written by one person.

Q. Who wrote those ransom notes? A. If Mr. Hauptmann wrote the standard writings, he also wrote the ransom notes.

"The Proper Time."

The Virginian spoke briefly on the defense contention that some one may have imitated Hauptmann's writing in penning the ransom notes.

"The possibility is so improbable as to be absolutely negligible. That's my honest opinion," he said.

C. Lloyd Fisher, associate defense counsel, cross-examined.

Q. Did you see any of the request writings being written?—A. No, sir.

Q. When would you say was the best time to take a hand-writing specimen from a subject?—A. I would say just as quick as you get a suspect.

Q. You'd take a writing as soon as you got a suspect?—A. I certainly would in a case like this.

Q. Now I'm going to ask you about the word spelled "n-o-t-e." How many of them did you find in the ransom notes?—A. As I count them, there were 13 of them in the ransom notes.

Q. It was also spelled right?—A. More times wrong than right.

Q. Sometimes in the request writing you found the same word spelled in the same ways, didn't you?—A. Yes, it was misspelled more times than spelled right.

Q. Was that mispelled as an attempt to disguise the handwriting? A. Well, sir, not necessarily. A lot of people make mistakes, I know, on words similar to that. I sometimes spell them right and sometimes wrong.

Fisher then wanted to know if one Hauptmann handwriting specimen wouldn't be ample for a clever penman to imitate.

"One well will make a river if it's big enough," drawled the witness.

The court rocked with laughter.

Q. Were you present when the defendant made these request writings? A. I wasn't present when Washington crossed the Delaware but I got a pretty good idea he got over to the Jersey side.

U. S. Expert Called.

Wilmer Souder, a member of the Federal Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce, at Washington, was then called.

He said that for nine years he had served his bureau in the capacity of document examiner.

Lanigan was questioning him.

Q. When were you first assigned to this case?—A. On April 1, 1932.

Q. Tell about .. please.—A. I was called from Toledo, Ohio, to the home of Col. Lindbergh, where I was asked to examine them and give such advice as I could.

He identified all the ransom notes.

Q. You've examined all of them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you examine them? A. First in April, 1932, and then again in December, 1932.

Q. I show you the genuine writing of Hauptmann, the automobile license. Have you examined them? A. Yes. I have.

Q. As a result of your examination of these three sets of documents, the request writings, the licenses and the ransom notes, what is your conclusion?—A. The same person wrote all three sets.

Explain Qualifications.

"If Mr. Hauptmann wrote the request writings and the admitted writings," the mild-mannered Federal expert said, "he also wrote the ransom documents."

Q. All of them?—A. All of them.

Pope took up cross-examination.

Q. You were referring to your qualifications. Do you want us to understand that you took any special course in handwriting?—A. No, but I wish to explain.

The court ordered the explanation.

"I was employed by the National Bureau of Standards in 1913. I became interested then," he said.

"I went back to school and received my doctor's degree in physics, which helped me later."

Pope moved the answer be stricken out, but the court admitted it.

Q. Where did you get instruction? A. At Northwestern University.

Q. Was that a special course in handwriting?—A. That was a special short course in disputed documents.

Q. In making the examination of the so-called ransom notes, the standard writing and the request writing, you find various discrepancies?—A. I found no discrepancies that were not overcome by positive identification.

Q. How many documents have you examined in connection with the case?—A. Eight thousand.

Q. Eight thousand?—A. And more.

Osborn's Son Called.

Albert D. Osborn, of New York and Montclair, was called. He is the son of Albert S. Osborn, first of the battery of experts used by the State.

Q. Based upon your examination of the genuine writing of Hauptmann, the request writing of Hauptmann, and the ransom writings, have you reached a conclusion?—A. I have.

Q. Are you prepared to state it?—A. I am.

Q. Do so.—A. In my judgment, based upon these standards, Bruno Richard Hauptmann wrote all the ransom notes.

The expert produced a large photograph showing part of the label from the package in which the sleeping suit was sent to the Lindberghs. He pointed to a second address on the wrapper. Here, he said, the "writer let down. He was off his guard."

As a result he said the similarity of the address writing to Hauptmann's writing was in his opinion "obvious."

He called significant the "n" that "practically stands on one foot" in the word New York, as it appeared on the wrapper.

A large chart of the request writings made by Hauptmann after his arrest was placed before the court.

Osborn said the first five lines of the request writing were very similar to the script of the ransom notes.

These lines were disguised, the expert said, and then pointed out that abruptly the writing changed and Hauptmann reverted to his normal style.

"But One Disguise."

Osborn spoke of the specimen as an indication of the writer's "guilt," and expressed his belief that the ransom notes and parts of the Hauptmann request writing was disguised.

"And the writer had but one disguise," he added.

"This specimen is very strong evidence that the man who wrote this wrote the ransom notes."

Osborn revealed he had prepared the dictation given to Hauptmann, when he wrote the request writings.

He said he prepared the carefully worded article in 1932, and previous Lindbergh suspects had written the same sentences when their handwriting specimens were taken.

Suddenly the court proceedings were interrupted by a voice from the audience, asking if the speaker could not have a place where he could see the exhibit then before the jury.

"We can't permit this sort of interruption," said Justice Trenchard. "Is counsel for either side interested in finding this man a seat?"

Neither side was interested and the questioning went on. The speaker who interrupted was found to be Lieut. Comdr. William Comerford, allegedly a defense handwriting expert.

Fisher on cross-examination relentlessly pressed the defense point that the police who took the Hauptmann request writings deliberately dictated to Hauptmann ransom note misspellings and word transpositions so as to incriminate the Bronx carpenter.

"I can't believe the people getting these specimens would do anything like that," the witness said.

He pointed out that these same officers had taken hundreds of specimens prior to that time.

Q. Do you think a man who can spell "hazardous" and "circumstance" would misspell "not"?—A. Yes. He didn't look up the spelling of the simple words.

Fisher asked if the witness believed it would be possible for an imitator successfully to ape the Hauptmann writing throughout the ransom notes.

"The probability is so far fetched that it is ridiculous," was the answer.

Sellers Examined.

T. Clark Sellers was sworn. He said he was an examiner and photographer of questioned documents and that he lived in Los Angeles.

Sellers said he testified in two kidnaping cases and also had identified Winnie Ruth Judd as the writer of a confession letter in her trial for murder of two women. He said he testified in the Rudolph Valentino estate case, the Paul Bern death case, and the Mae West jewel robbery case.

"I am convinced absolutely," said the California expert, "that the person who wrote these conceded and request writings is the same writer who wrote each one of the ransom notes.

"If Mr. Bruno Richard Hauptmann wrote these conceded and request writings, then he must have been the writer of the ransom notes."

"I think," said the witness, "that Mr. Hauptmann started out laboriously to disguise his handwriting.

"As he progressed further in the letters, he still tried to maintain that disguise, but at various times he let down.

"There is no doubt he wrote the ransom notes."

Adjournment was taken at 4:31 p. m.

Says Hauptmann Wrote Kidnap Ransom Notes

their questions toward the defense premise that Fisch wrote the notes, but they got no support from the witnesses.

The soft-voiced Cassidy conceded that the handwriting "in one short letter" might be forged successfully, but added:

"But gee whiz, when you talk about all 14 letters, it looks like to me it would be almost an impossible task, Mr. Fisher."

"Far-fetched" Theory.

"Mr. Fisher"—C. Lloyd Fisher, of the defense staff—got about the same answer from the others.

Osborn, whose father, Albert S. Osborn, was a previous witness for the State, said the theory that someone copied Hauptmann's writing on the ransom notes was "so far fetched that it is absolutely ridiculous."

At another point he declared:

"There have been lots of persons suspected that were perfectly innocent. Finally they got the right man."

As before, the defense sought to show that the hyphenated "New-York" in both the ransom notes and Hauptmann's own writing was not uncommon and that Fisch used a somewhat similar hyphen, but Osborn said the hyphen was "only one of a hundred connections between Hauptmann and these ransom notes."

Souder, who is chief of the identification laboratory of the Bureau of Standards, said he had examined 8,000 suspected writings, including Hautpmann's conceded and request writings, before he came to the unshakable conclusion that Hauptmann wrote the ransom notes.

Fawcett Loses a Point.

Sellers, who testified for the State in the trial of William Edward Hickman, executed for the murder of Marion Parker, and was a witness also in the trial of Winnie Ruth Judd, said under cross-examination that the writing in the ransom notes was "so convincing that Hauptmann might just as well have signed each and every one of them."

Although the defense made little progress in its boring cross-examination today, it won a partial victory in another court.

James M. Fawcett, who was succeeded by Reilly as the carpenter's attorney, was ordered by the appellate division of the supreme court in Brooklyn to bring to court Friday all papers bearing on the case that are in his possession.

The order was made with a view of determining whether the documents are necessary to the murder trial defense.

Reilly has sued for the papers, which Fawcett, by authority of a supreme court order, retained as security for counsel fees and expenses.

Can You Afford Your Present Method When Electric Cookery Is:

So Inexpensive: It costs less than 1 cent per meal per person . . . for electricity is used only a fraction of the cooking time. Electric power rates in Washington are lower than those of most cities. And you save money on meat bills, too, by not allowing so much for shrinkage.

Healthier: Vegetables are cooked in their own appetizing juices . . . practically without water . . . thus preserving valuable minerals and other qualities so necessary to your family's well being. And meats are never roasted dry.

More Efficient: Electric Cookery is absolutely accurate and automatic. The clock, set at the heat required, starts the cooking, maintains the exact temperature required, and turns it off.

Cleaner: No soot to coat utensils or smudge the walls and ceiling. And the porcelain top of the stove is much easier to take care of.

3 Dead, 4 Hurt As 65 Engage In Gun Fights

Sheriff and Bank Cashier Slain; Trapped Gunman Commits Suicide.

La Salle, Ill., Jan. 16 (AP).—A gallant sheriff, a brave bank cashier and a bank robber died and three men and a boy were wounded today in a series of gun battles that raged through three counties.

Three pitched engagements, fought with gorilla savagery by 65 participants, took place along a 30-mile line as a quartet of gangsters sought to blast their way to freedom after they had been beaten back in an attempt to loot the Leonore (Ill.) State Bank.

Charles Bundy, 54, the bank official, and Sheriff Glenn Axline, of Marshall County, were killed by the gunmen's bullets.

Robber Is Suicide.

Deputy Sheriff Reinis Brown, of Marshall County; Charles Seipp, member of the La Salle County board of supervisors; Norbert Maas, 13-year-old Leonore lad, and one of the thugs, Arthur Thielen, of Rockford, were wounded.

The other two raiders were caught after coming unscathed through a hail of more than 100 slugs.

Three of the gunmen slipped into the bank through a coal chute last night while the La Salle County hamlet of Leonore slumbered. The fourth sat in a car near the Bundy home. James Adamson, a bank guard, became suspicious. With Bundy and another guard, Leonce Smith, he went to the bank about 8:45 a. m. They saw that the car had been driven to the rear of the bank. Bundy opened the door and cried, "There's somebody inside."

The three would-be looters fled empty handed to the George Yusco garage. They waved their weapons, forced young Maas and a salesman into a machine and roared out of town. The lookout sped away in his auto. A posse took after him.

The fugitive was overtaken after a short chase. He was being marched to town when the other three gangsters and their hostages reappeared.

The thugs opened fire on the possemen. The salvos were returned. Bundy fell dead. Seipp pitched into the dirt, wounded. The liberated desperado rejoined his comrades and their captives.

Boy Is Wounded.

Forewarned of the outrage, Sheriff Axline and his deputies met the fugitives near Varna in Marshall County. The officers laid down a barrage and the criminals returned the fire. Deputy Brown was struck in the right arm. A bullet hit the Maas boy's right hand.

Running the blockade, the bandits sped north and west. Near Magnolia, in Putnam County, they saw their pursuers hot on the trail and stopped. One of the felons got out and raised his hands above his head. The officials' auto halted. Sheriff Axline got out. The gangsters shot him down in cold blood.

Pushing the salesman from their machine, but with young Maas in the tonneau, the robbers sped to the Jacob Yeager farm near McNabb. Two of the men took the boy into the house. The other pair, Liest and Thielen, sought safety in a nearby copse, taking shelter behind trees. They pumped their weapons as the slain Axline's party drove up.

Gangsters Surrounded.

Fifty State policemen, deputies from Putnam, La Salle and Marshall Counties and officers from Peru, Peoria and La Salle hurried to the scene. The officers surrounded the desperate gunners. They raked the woodland with bullets. One found a mark in Thielen. Leist, cornered like a rat, put his own pistol to his head and ended his life.

Thielen was captured. His confederates, Fred Gerner, 30, Rockford, and John Hauff, 25, Chicago, who had hidden in the beleagured house, came out with Maas and surrendered.

Bank Robber Takes $1,577, Returns It

Sayre, Okla., Jan. 16 (AP).—A bank robber who "couldn't go through with it" surrendered at the First National Bank here late today immediately after taking $1,577 at pistol point from three bank officials.

The man, who gave his name as Elmer Ford, was charged with armed robbery. Another man, who said he was Morris Brien, was arrested about five miles east of Sayre.

County Attorney Ralph Hood quoted Ford as saying, "I had to have money. I was in trouble over money matters, but I couldn't go through with it. After I went out of the bank I laid my gun down on the seat of the car and went back to return the money."

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything. What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and ¾ of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over your body every six minutes.

When our friends smell our bad breath (but we don't) and we feel like a whipped coward, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for—25c. ©1934, C.M.Co.

Bank Stock Record Called Incorrect

O'Donnell Seeks to Defeat $111,000 Assessment.

In an effort to defeat an assessment of $111,000 made upon him as the apparent owner of 1,500 shares of stock of the closed Federal-American National Bank and Trust Company, James O'Donnell yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to order a change in the bank's records so that the actual owner will be assessed.

Mr. O'Donnell, through the law firm of Whiteford, Marshall & Hart, said he took the shares to the bank and informed an official he was holding them only as security for a loan of $111,000 to Peter A. Drury.

Mr. O'Donnell said he held the stock merely as collateral and not as owner. Nevertheless, when the bank closed and he remained the record owner on the bank's books, assessment was made against him. He now wants the bank to correct its records, and the court to issue an injunction barring further efforts to collect from him.

Asbury Harrison, Ill Two Years, Dies

Prominent Fairfax Farmer to Be Buried Today.

Asbury S. Harrison, 67, prominent farmer of Fairfax County, Va., died Tuesday night at his home near Floris, following a two-year illness. Funeral services will be held today at 1 p. m. in the Woolf Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church South. Interment will be in the Chestnut Grove Cemetery at Herndon.

Mr. Harrison, a life long resident of Dranesville district, was the organizer and first president of the Herndon Light & Power Co., which later became a part of the Virginia Public Service Co. In addition to his extensive farming and dairying interests he also organized the Herndon Water Co. which supplies the town from artesian wells.

He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Nannie H. Holden, of Manassas, Va.; two sons, Holden H. Harrison, of Herndon, and G. Ray Harrison, of Floris; one brother, George F. Harrison, of Herndon, and one sister, Mrs. Lucy Day, of Washington.

Kidnap Plotter, Mother, Slain By U. S. Agents

Kate, Fred Barker, Bremer Suspects, Battle Squad Five Hours.

After five hours of battling with machine guns and gas bombs, 15 Department of Justice agents yesterday killed two members of the gang responsible for the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer in St. Paul last January. The battle occurred at Oklawaha, Fla.

The dead are Fred Barker and his mother, Kate Barker. The woman died with a machine gun in her hand, a drum of cartridges nearly exhausted.

The Division of Investigation here reported that 15 agents converged on the little house occupied by Barker and his mother at 7 a. m. yesterday. All roads approaching the house were blocked by sheriffs and local police.

Two Wage Battle Alone.

As the Federal agents approached the house, firing started. The officers responded with a blaze of machine-gun bullets. It was not until noon that firing from the house ceased, and the two occupants were found dead. There was no one else in the house. No one outside the building was hurt.

Barker and his mother were two "public enemies" who had been sought for a year. At the Department of Justice it was said that the woman was the head of the gang, which has been known as the "Karpis gang." Two other members still are missing—Arthur R. Barker, brother of the dead man, and Alvin Karpis. Both have long criminal records. It was said that criminal activities of the gang have netted them $500,000 in the last year, including $200,000 Bremer ransom money.

It was revealed last night that E. J. Connelley, a tenacious 38-year-old Federal agent who is in charge of the division's Cincinnati office, led the 15 officers in the battle. Connelley helped lay a trap for Karpis and Arthur Barker in Cleveland last September, and when the trap failed Connelley and his men continued the hunt. Connelley, whose home is in Columbus, Ohio, was among the 40 agents sent to the Louisville (Ky.) area in October when Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, society leader, was kidnaped.

Had "Night Visitors."

The Associated Press reported that the house in Florida had been rented to a man who gave his name as T. E. Blackburn. The Barkers, it was said, had occupied the house for two months. Neighbors reported they had many visitors, mostly at night.

The Department of Justice men said they found the two bodies on the second floor of the nine-room house. Barker had been shot 14 times and his mother had been hit once.

The house was in a fairly populous section. Residents of the neighborhood were warned to leave as the shooting began. The Associated Press quoted Mrs. A. T. Westberry a neighbor, as saying she and her daughter remained at home for a few minutes after the firing began, but escaped after several bullets crashed into the house.

From Chicago the Associated Press quoted the Evening American as saying that Arthur Barker had been in custody there for a week. The Department of Justice denied the report. A $5,000 reward had been offered for information leading to the arrest of Karpis or either of the Barkers.

Senators Revolt Against Hiring Of 'Red' Waiters

An undercover "revolt" against the hiring of "red" waiters led Senate restaurant officials yesterday to order a change in costume for these employes, according to the Associated Press.

The waiters appeared Tuesday with large red letters—"USSR"—on the collars of their white coats and some immediately commented that the initials were those of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

King explained the initialing was to distinguish Senate coats from House coats, but he said yesterday: "There's been too much comment. There's going to be a change. We'll probably knock off all the initials or just keep the S. R., meaning Senate restaurant, and not soviet republics."

THE CAR BEHIND THE NEWS
Ford Plans to Produce a Million Cars in 1935
MORE THAN A NEW CAR—A NEW ADVANCE IN AUTOMOBILE DESIGN

The NEW FORD V-8

With Comfort Zone Riding and dozens of other new features

WHAT is there about this new car that makes Ford believe a million people will want it?

Your question will turn into an exclamation of surprise when you go to the Automobile Show and see the new Ford V-8 for 1935.

Here is a car—low in price, economical to run, and yet built to meet every modern motoring need.

It meets the demand for style—with streamlined bodies and new interior finish that set a new note for motor car beauty.

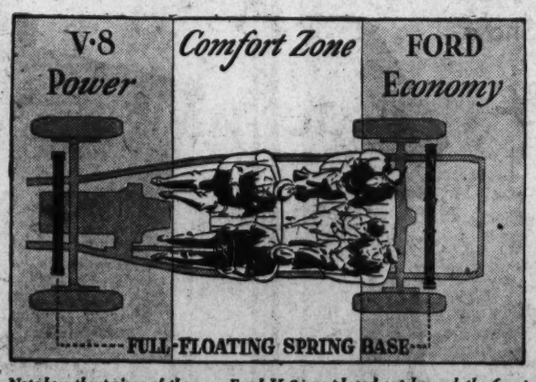
It meets the demand for roominess—with wider seats, front and rear, and a large luggage compartment behind the rear seat of sedans.

It gives you the handling ease you need today. It is easier to steer and park. It has stability at all speeds. The new brakes and clutch operate with extremely light foot pressure. A car that makes driving an entirely new pleasure!

But your greatest surprise will be the new Comfort Zone Ride. This is the result of a major engineering development, exclusive with Ford—the Full-floating Springbase with Comfort Zone Seating. Now even back seat passengers get "front seat riding comfort!"

It has taken more than 100 improvements to make the 1935 Ford V-8 the car it is. And remember this: they have been added to the proved 85-horsepower, V-8 engine. Then you will realize why millions are already talking about this new car value—why Ford believes a million motorists will own it in 1935.

SEE THE NEW FORD V-8 TODAY



Note how the springs of the new Ford V-8 are placed out beyond the front and rear axles—and serve only to cushion the load. They provide a long springbase for riding ease and retain the 112-inch wheelbase for handling ease. Both front and rear seats are cradled between the springs—enabling all passengers to ride in the Comfort Zone.

House Inquiry To Fight Crime In the Capital

Sub-Committee Is Selected to Conduct Thorough Probe of Conditions.

A special sub-committee pledged to "get in under" crime conditions in the National Capital was named by the House District Committee yesterday.

Evidence of the determination of the committee, of which Mrs. Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey is chairman, to get at the root of crime and improve conditions in the Capital was found in the fact that seven members were named on the sub-committee, with Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, as chairman.

A "crime" committee of three had first been suggested. Later this was enlarged to five. Yesterday seven members came forward with offers to serve on the committee entrusted with the task of assuring greater safety to the lives and property of the residents of the Capital and the thousands of visitors to Washington.

Before the "crime" committee will be facts and figures and other information gathered by The Post. This information has been welcomed by Representative Randolph and other members of his committee. It will afford the basis of many questions directed by committee members to officials and others who are to be summoned before them.

The investigation of his sub-committee is to be made on a sane, fact-finding basis, designed to disclose weaknesses so that they may be remedied, Representative Randolph said.

"We have a very fine sub-committee, composed of men and women of intelligence and diligence and sincere desires," Mr. Randolph said.

The sub-committee is composed of Representative Randolph, Virginia E. Janckes, of Indiana; William T. Schulte, of Indiana; Theodore B. Werner, of South Dakota, all Democrats; and Representatives Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois; Chauncey W. Reed, of Illinois, and Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, Republicans.

The meeting of the crime committee is to be an executive one. It is to be held at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow in the House District Committee room in the old House Office Building.

Public hearings probably will be begun early next week Representative Randolph said.

"We are not in any hurry about starting," he told reporters. "We are more concerned with how we finish than how we start.

"The special sub-committee will organize most carefully so that its hearings and closed sessions may bring the maximum of beneficial findings for the District of Columbia and the Nation as a whole.

Plans Thorough Inquiry.

"The make-up of the committee, with their background and with their deep interest in this absorbing problem I am certain will assure closest attention and cooperation to the end that this investigation will seek to probe deeply into matters which vitally concern the well-being and safety of those residing and visiting the National Capital. There are hundreds of thousands of persons who come here annually from every State in the Union.

"There will be no disposition for our committee to skim the surface."

Behind the declaration of the crime committee chairman was that of Mrs. Norton, made in the course of her address opening the first meeting of the full committee.

"We have reports," Mrs. Norton said, "of an amazing and an alarming condition of crime in the National Capital. This condition was brought to my attention again when I served as a delegate to the President's crime conference several weeks ago.

"It seems to me that this committee, charged with partial responsibility for the conduct of the National Capital, should give its serious attention to this problem and it is my purpose to propose to the committee the appointment of a special crime investigating committee headed by a young, capable and energetic member of the committee."

Something of the underworld life which has been growing in the National Capital and causing gang slayings was hinted at in the closed hearings held recently before the House District Appropriations subcommittee of which Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, is chairman.

Numbers Game Assailed.

Bitter complaint against the numbers game was voiced by Representative Cannon, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee, who took Maj. Brown to task. Sam Beard, whom Mr. Cannon described as a local gambler, had paid an income tax of $199,185 from gambling. Beard's place had been raided and his operations restricted by the police.

Complaint has been made in the underworld that the attack on "Jimmy's" and then on Beard's places has placed "Jew Boy" Dietz (which isnt his real name) on top of the underworld pile. Dietz (which isn't his right name) began his rise to the title of "big shot," as Washington's underworld knows the meaning of the term, with buying in on a part of the crap game in a gambling house run by another gambler who has sometimes been described as "The Mayor."

Why Lieut. George Little, in charge of the gambling squad, had not arrested anyone when he raided one of the gambling houses of a competitor of Dietz was the purport of a question directed at the lieutenant by Maj. Brown earlier in the week.

Recounting the police efforts to use strong-arm methods to break up gambling in the District, Maj. Brown, in his testimony before the committee, said "one of my friends on the Hill came to see me, saying we were going too far."

Efficacy of the present jury system was questioned during the hearings. Most persons tried to dodge jury duty, Maj. Brown and other District officials agreed.

These and other questions raised during the closed hearings on the District appropriation bill are to be considered by the Randolph crime committee when it gets under way, the chairman said.

House Group to Study D. C. Crime Problem

Junior Bar Conference To Press War on Crime

A Nation-wide war on crime will be planned by the executive council of the junior bar conference of the American Bar Association at a meeting Monday in the Harrington Hotel.

The conference was organized last year and proposes to enlist 10,000 lawyers under the age of 36 to participation in a campaign against crime. People's Counsel William A. Roberts is national secretary.

The group also will outline a program for the elimination of dishonest lawyers from the profession. Samuel S. Willis, of Detroit, is chairman of the conference.

Clergy to Ask Nice for Probe Into Gambling

Prince Georges Ministers Name Committee to Call On Governor.

A delegation of Prince Georges County clergymen will call on Gov. Harry W. Nice at Annapolis tomorrow at 2 p. m. to commend him for his stand against gambling and to ask an inquiry into why gambling has been allowed in past years.

Meeting yesterday at Hyattsville, the ministers appointed a committee to make the visitation. It will consist of the Revs. Walter P. Plumley, St. Johns Church, Mount Rainier; J. G. Lambrides, Laurel Baptist; Fred Miller, Mount Rainier Christian; W. Keith Custis, Riverdale Presbyterian, and R. K. Nevitt, Mount Rainier Methodist Church.

Attended by 19 ministers, representing as many different Prince Georges County churches, the session saw the institution of two resolutions. The first was drected to the country commissioners.

"We do heartily indorse the commissioners in their drive against gamblers in the county. We further urge that this campaign be continued until illegal gambling is entirely driven from the county.

"Be it further resolved that we are opposed to the idea of legal gambling in Prince Georges County."

The second resolution was directed to Gov. Nice, and will be presented to him tomorrow. It declared:

"We do hereby commend his excellency, Gov. Nice, for his courageous opposition to gambling in the State prior to his election and urge that be publicly announce his support of our commissioners in their attempt to rid the county of gambling.

"We further urge that your excellency institute a probe of county officers, which was threatened prior to your election, to determine why illegal gambling has been allowed to operate in the county for 15 years."

The Rev. Plumley was selected as chairman of the delegation to visit the Governor. The group of ministers also decided to retain the Rev. Fred Holden, pastor of the Brentwood Methodist Church, as their secretary.

'Mighty Rough Road' Deserted

Southern Would Abandon Last Bit of Line Made Famous in Song.

Danville, Va., Jan. 16 (AP).—It's the last bit of that "mighty rough road from Lynchburg to Danville" commemorated in "The Wreck of Old 97" that the Southern Railway today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to abandon.

In the song, long a subject of court controversy, but which the Supreme Court of the United States last month in effect credite David Graves George, a Virginian, with writing, Pete, the engineer on old 97's last fateful trip, told his "black, greasy fireman" that:

"When we cross that White Oak Mountain,

"You can see old 97 roll."

The grade, down which the Southern's crack train of the year 1903 rolled "making 90 miles an hour," is a part of the 3.5-mile stretch between White Oak and Danville, Va., which the road now asks to abandon because revenues have been insufficient to pay maintenance and operation costs.

Most of the old road was abandoned some years ago when the railroad double-tracked its line from Washintgon to Atlanta and part of the old right of way now is used as a State highway.

Up To The President.

The failure of the National Industrial Recovery Board to recommend a specific plan of procedure following expiration of the recovery act is not at all surprising. Since the experiment in industrial control was inaugurated there has developed a great number of issues that will be difficult to deal with at the present time, and especially difficult to incorporate in a legislative program for submission to the new Congress.

The board is reported to favor a more comprehensive plan for the future. It is possible, however, that its powers may be expanded without much or any change in existing legislation, through reliance upon executive rulings and administrative decrees. After all, the problems encountered by the Administration under the NRA in dealing with labor and capital can not be satisfactorily settled by resort to legislative definitions of the powers to be exercised by the Government and the rights and privileges to be granted to organized groups of industrialists and workers.

Even the much criticized section 7(a) of the present act, relating to collective bargaining, has been indorsed by representatives of organized labor because it gives opportunity for latitude in adapting the policies followed to the needs of the particular situation. Employers, too, realize the value of a general declaration in favor of collective bargaining as opposed to precise definitions of what constitutes a representative type of bargaining.

Similarly, moot questions relating to such subjects as price control, restrictions upon production and the nature and scope of codes of fair practice can be dealt with in the future as heretofore without substantial changes in legislation. Indeed, from the point of view of the Administration, it would probably be much better to discourage Congress from addressing itself seriously to the task of revising the national recovery act until more time has been given to work out future policies. In any case those policies are likely to be eclectic, not hard and fast rules of procedure to be followed without regard to differences in the requirements of organized industries.

Alternate Plan.

An amateur astronomer in Arizona has devised a dust trap in which he has collected gold from the air streams of the sky. By erecting the mechanism in the path of known meteor streams he has collected gold in direct ratio to the known percentage of that metal in meteors. The trap consists of a battery of magnets surfaced by enamel metallic plates, and although gold is usually nonmagnetic, a small drag is effected when it is finely divided.

Gold from the skies! Boy, page Dr. Townsend . . .

Not The Real Issue.

Once more the proposal is advanced to institute an elected rather than an appointed Board of Education. Under the terms of a bill reintroduced by Senator Capper, the board would continue its membership of nine, but in place of appointments by the District Supreme Court, three members would be elected yearly for three-year terms.

Proponents of the plan argue that it is of paramount importance that the people have the power of election and recall over any board charged with as vital a matter as the education of the youth of a community; and that every possibility of political influence should be eliminated from the school system. On the other side, it is declared that an elected board would be more rather than less subject to political influence, and that the franchise should not be extended over so technical a field as education.

The question of the election of the Negro board members also complicates the plan, inasmuch as a population two-thirds white would be voting for six white members and three Negro members, and vice versa. It is suggested that the successful Negro candidates might be those who had the interests of their race least prominent in their minds.

On close inspection, however, it may appear that Senator Capper's proposal does not come to grips with the real issue. It is no secret that for several years there has been a growing number of citizens categorically opposed to the present program of school administration. Using the arguments cited above, together with specific suggestions for revision of the existing junior high school system, every effort has been made to undermine the position of the board.

Doubtless there is much justification in criticisms of the present Board of Education. But it does not follow that an elected board would be an improvement. Indeed, the present hostility to giving the Commissioners even nominal control over the board indicates that above all else the community wants that body to be independent and nonpartisan.

Gyrations Of The Dollar.

The great merit of the gold standard in international dealings is that it automatically fixes the value of gold-secured currencies so that traders can carry on their business undeterred by fears of wide and unforeseen fluctuations in exchange quotations. Thus, under our former freely functioning gold standard, the upper and lower limits within which the exchange value of the dollar moved were very narrow, determined by the cost of shipping gold into the country or exporting it as the case might be.

After the dollar was devalued and the gold standard provisionally restored, insofar as international dealings were concerned, it was assumed that a similar degree of stability would prevail for the 59-cent dollar in terms of gold currencies. During the present week, however, it has become quite evident that the United States does not even possess the kind of gold standard that can be depended upon to maintain an ascertainable relationship to other gold currencies. Fears that the Supreme Court might render a verdict unfavorable to the Government in the gold clause cases has upset the exchange status quo and caused the dollar to advance sharply in terms of francs and other gold currencies. As a matter of fact, the cases now before the Supreme Court turn entirely upon the validity of contracts to pay in gold, but there appears to be a popular belief that the dollar might be restored to its previous gold value if the court should invalidate the law abrogating the gold clause.

In face of that uncertainty, exchange dealers were unwilling to take profits by selling dollars for francs and obtaining gold for shipment to this country. As a result the gold standard failed to operate in the usual way, and the dollar experienced an abnormal appreciation in terms of the gold bloc currencies. Of course, erratic movements of this sort are thoroughly disruptive of orderly commercial dealings between countries, especially if long continued.

The flurry in exchange was accompanied, too, by a speculative drop in stock and commodity prices that has stimulated new activity on the part of the advocates of devaluation. The Committee for the Nation, for example, states that "collapsing commodity and foreign exchange prices are a forewarning of disasters which would result from a reversal of the Administration's monetary policy." Of course this argument is as specious as the earlier assumption that the speculative advances in prices which momentarily followed abandonment of the gold standard were caused by the lower gold value of the dollar.

Even if the dollar were to be revalued on the old basis (which is highly improbable), there would be no proportionate decline in commodity prices. It should not be forgotten that the object sought by devaluation was to encourage a sort of dumping of American commodities upon foreign markets. This effort was only partly successful because such dumping also served to depress prices in foreign markets. If the dollar were to be revalued, therefore, the decline in dollar export prices would help to increase prices in foreign currencies with cessation of dumping. However, the effect of devaluation upon the prices of export commodities, of which the most important is cotton, has been obscured by a policy of production curtailment which has had the effect of cutting down our exports, as statistics clearly show.

The chief need of the country at the present time is currency stability and an end to uncertainty regarding the value of the dollar in terms of gold. However serious the dislocations caused by devaluation, an endeavor to correct them by a return to the old dollar would create other serious difficulties. The result of the flurry over the gold-clause cases may, however, prove to be beneficial in one respect. It may cause the Administration to stop, look, and listen before taking further action of doubtful constitutionality in face of an alleged emergency.

Iran: Where's That?

The school teacher will be the greatest sufferer. The rest of us will either avoid mentioning the place altogether or else just stick to the old usage. But the school teacher has to teach up-to-date geography. So, now that Persia has decided to change its name to Iran, she will have to go to all the bother of forgetting "Persia" and saying "Iran."

Don't tell her that the alteration is an expression of nationalism: she will justifiably reply that the Iranian Farsis are but one of several races composing the Persian nation. Why choose Iran rather than Hajemisa, Lurin, Tajiksa? And don't tell her that Persia used to be Iran: she had her troubles when Christiania reverted to Olso. Weren't things sufficiently bad when St. Petersburg became Petrograd and Petrograd became Leningrad?

One of the greatest evils of self-determination is the self-naming it entails. A Frenchman may not object to seeing certain Americans spell his beautiful capital "Paree": that's all very well for dance halls. And it may delight a Persian to be called an Iran—an Iranian—an Iranan—however the adjective is formed. But it is a little too much that we should be asked to talk of the Iran room in such-and-such a hotel, of Iranian cats, of Iranan rugs. It drives the last nail into the coffin of the Omar Khayyam vogue.

Toward Integration?

Discussion of the proposed amendments to the agricultural adjustment act serves to emphasize the real magnitude of the task by which the Administration is confronted. From a strictly agricultural point of view, it should not be difficult—now that the adjustment plan has been in operation for a year and a half—to detect the weak points in the law and remedy them. But the AAA is not operating in a vacuum. Other economic forces and other agencies of the New Deal must be brought into the picture. When the Administration begins to talk about modifying the agricultural program it raises the whole broad issue of harmonizing unrelated policies.

In the spring of 1933 formulation of an agricultural policy was left almost exclusively to farm leaders. The general outlines of the plan they drafted at a conference here were accepted by the President and Congress. In the excitement of this emergency period very little thought was given to the integration of this policy with the recovery program for industry, the New Deal foreign trade policy or the public works experiment. Consequently, the Administration now faces the formidable problem of coordinating major policies in which basic conflicts are apparent.

It is significant that Secretaries Hull and Morgenthau as well as Secretary Wallace attended the White House conference on ways and means to improve the status of cotton. The vital interest of American farmers in the foreign cotton market is more fully recognized than it was a year ago. Some observers will see in this conference indications that the Administration is trying to harmonize its objective of raising farm prices with its equally desirable objective of extending foreign trade. Whether or not there is a conscious effort to adjust these basic inconsistencies, the need for such action can not be seriously questioned.

Farm leaders complain against price-fixing in industry and "unduly high wages on public works." In turn, industry complains about the processing taxes on agricultural commodities. Exporters of both farm and factory products contend that higher prices and increased costs make it difficult for them to compete with foreign enterprise. These are not merely idle protests. Behind them lie isolated policies that have not been adjusted to a common point of view.

It goes without saying that elimination of these deep-rooted incongruities is one of the greatest responsibilities facing the Administration. Doubtless there will be pressure from each of the groups that has obtained benefits from specific measures to let them stand with only minor legislative patches to cover obvious defects. But the time for meting out special benefits to separate groups in accord with different principles has passed. Any thoughtful survey of the present situation will reveal a grave need for merging of these disparate measures into a comprehensive national policy. If the broad-gauge conferences on the future of the AAA are a step in this direction, they will constitute a most significant milepost in the history of the New Deal.

Heraclitus Confounded.

The horse, in the opinion of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, is here to stay. That is to say, the milkman's horse. While the firehouse stalls have long since been converted into grease pits, and the brewers' sleek Clydesdales have given over to the multiple-cylinder truck, the milkman's helpmeet holds his own, yielding only to the extent of rubber shoes, in spite of swirling motor traffic and monoxide fumes.

In support of their opinion, the society's officials quote figures, remarking by way of explanation on the high cost of motor vehicle insurance. But it develops that the biggest factor in favor of the horse is the animal's intelligence as regards milk routes. The machine age can devise nothing to duplicate it. After a short time on a route, any milkman's horse worthy of the name will know his points of call with infallible accuracy—to such an extent that there have been cases of new drivers giving their horses free rein, simply delivering bottles wherever the horse stops.

The A. S. P. C. A.'s faith in the horse strikes a welcome note in this world of continual flux. Come stratosphere flights, come bullet-train records, come Townsend plans, gold-clause decisions, streamlining and wirephotos—the milkman's horse remains, sturdy heir to the best traditions of Pegasus and Bucephalus, and matutinal servitor supreme, not only from the point of view of economy and efficiency but, more important, from the standpoint of intrinsic reassurance that things are as they have been and should be.

It might be well to allow Japan to have naval equality with the United States and Great Britain. When a little fellow is continually frightened, he's likely to haul off and start shooting any time.

The New York World-Telegram recently published the photograph of a rat's soul. It is understood that a rat's soul is larger but not so black as the soul of a kidnaper.

The Government isn't alone in having difficulties in balancing its budget. We lost a dime six months ago and haven't been able to balance ours since.

Letters To The Editor

Tradition Vs. Tin Lizzies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the Administration has seen fit to appropriate billions in what may prove a futile attempt to restore prosperity, might it not be a good idea to establish a fund to preserve some of the fine old homes and gardens of a dying period, which represent ancient Washington?

A fund of this character would require only a few million dollars and a few million seem relatively insignificant in view of a single four-billion-dollar project, just launched.

Can not a few of the splendid old landmarks escape the so-called "march of progress"? Aren't the customs, traditions, romance and beauty of a former age worthy of perpetuation? Is it actually necessary to give "parking lots" preference over stately homes of famous men and women who helped to make Washington?

Not so long ago W. W. Cochran's historic home, facing Lafayette Square, with its quaint, old grounds was supplanted by a Government structure. Then the Bayard home, adjoining, which had stood a century, was demolished to give birth to a parking lot. Now the Riggs Mansion, with its charming garden and stately trees, is to share a similar fate.

We can gain some consolation in the fact that the people who planned Washington had some respect for beauty; otherwise Lafayette Square itself might today be occupied by the ubiquitous "tin lizzie." E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

A Balanced Diet.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest the recent articles of Mr. Lothrop Stoddard in The Post. There are a great number of persons here in Washington interested in foreign relations. The Town Hall of Washington is devoting half of its program to international relations. Also the Washington Public Affairs Forum has emphasized that field. I am interested to see that The Post is devoting more space to international affairs.

FRANKLIN ROUDYBUSH.
Director, Washington School of Government Administration.

Washington, Jan. 10.

You Give Us One.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: In the editorial columns of your issue of January 3 I noted an item about the man who paid $100 to have his inferiority complex removed and was later fined $50 for talking back to a traffic cop. The phrase, inferiority complex, seems to be used in such varying senses that I would be glad to know whether you intended to convey the idea that the operation was a success or a failure.

JOHN W. ADDISON.

Washington, Jan. 3.

The Nye Committee.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Senate committee investigating the munitions industry has done admirable work in exposing these hidden and sinister forces, but the work of this committe is not finished, and unless the proposed appropriation of $100,000 is granted by Congress we shall be deprived of future and more important information which has such bearing on the present and future peace of the world.

Therefore, as a citizen and taxpayer I should like to urge that this appropriation be made without further delay. MARY ALLEN.

Washington, Jan. 15.

An Obvious Duty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was pleased to read the editorial entitled "An Obvious Duty," which you carried in The Washington Post on Sunday, January 6.

As you know, the providing for the widows and children of special agents of this division who have been killed in line of duty is a matter in which I feel a deep concern, and I am pleased that you took occasion to indorse legislation of this kind.

I am hopeful that the proposed legislation to provide for those who have suffered so acutely in the efforts to combat crime will receive the necessary support, and I appreciate the approval you have given in your editorial columns.

J. EDGAR HOOVER,
Director, Division of Investigation, United States Department of Justice.

Washington, Jan. 12.

Referred To Mr. Rea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been much interested in a letter to you, signed by Mr. George Bronson Rea, which appeared in your issue of December 28, under the caption "Mr. Rea Packs a Wallop." He advanced the suggestion that it would be well to have an investigation made into the activities of Americans who disseminate propaganda or express publicly in the United States ideas favorable to the Chinese, and that The Post would perform a public service in editorially advocating such an investigation.

I would suggest that The Post go a bit further and, in order to avoid any possible imputation of partiality, advocate an investigation into the activities in the United States of all Americans who, in the pay of foreign governments or of foreign organizations, disseminate propaganda favoring their employers or undertake by lobbying or otherwise to influence the legislative, executive or judicial branches of the American Government in the interest of those employers.

If such an investigation were to go back in point of time as far as Mr. Rea apparently desires, it might have the salutary effect of bringing out the facts in regard to the activities of Mr. Rea when he himself was in the employ of the Chinese as contrasted with his present activities in another foreign employ, in addition to bringing to light facts bearing on other activities of a similar nature to which Mr. Rea refers. PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Nebulae For Pictures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I desire to express my appreciation for the publication of the excellent photographs of the new 40-inch Ritchey Chretien reflector telescope at the Naval Observatory, which appeared in the Sunday photogravure edition of The Post of January 6, 1935.

The two photographs of the nebulae were taken by Dr. George W. Ritchey before he joined the staff of the Naval Observatory. The picture in the lower left-hand corner, page 1, was taken by Dr. Ritchey with the 60-inch reflector telescope at Mount Wilson Observatory, Pasadena, Calif., on the 12th, 13th and 14th of July, 1915. The picture in the lower right-hand corner was taken also by Dr. Ritchey with the 24-inch reflector telescope at the Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wis., on September 15, 1901.

Superintendent, U. S. Naval Observatory.

The Federal Diary.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is to thank you for the wonderful space you have allotted us in your paper under the heading of "The Federal Diary."

The first thing the Government clerk does in the morning is to look for this feature. We all enjoy it and discuss the different meetings of the different lodges that are given space in the paper.

We consider it our personal matter, as it so closely relates to our activities, and wish to express our hearty appreciation for the way it is handled and hope you will continue to give us the space you have so graciously allloted to us.

Women Against War.

Probably the general reaction to the news that French women are becoming increasingly active in demanding equal suffrage will be to ask, "Well, what of it?" The impression is widespread in this country at least that the enfranchising of women has had little or no effect on political issues or the decision of political contests, and there certainly is good general ground for this assumption.

Yet there is, in our opinion, at least one department of political activity on which women voters have had a decided influence. That is the department that has to do broadly with all matters affecting the choice between war and peace as a national attitude and policy.

Women tend to keep in mind the agonies of war, which men are prone to forget or to gloss over with the romance that time lends to all stirring events, however horrible at the moment of their happening.

It is the women voters in our opinion who in recent years have set the face of the United States so firmly against war in all its aspects. And we say this with all due deference to the valuable work of organizations like the American Legion in insisting on action to "take the profits out of war."

From this standpoint, at least, it would seem the new intentness of French women on achieving the vote really does have world-wide significance. If all Europe enjoyed free parliamentary government and all European women had the vote, there very likely would be much less danger of war in that quarter.

(The Detroit News.)

Isn't The World Noisy Enough?

A gadget with almost terrifying potentialities is the "sound microscope" just developed in the laboratories of New York University and demonstrated with deafening success by its inventors. It amplifies sound ten thousand billion times—large figures even for these days of billion-bolting. Applied to a few grains of wheat in which weevil larvae were disporting themselves, it brought out their squirmings like the sound of machine-gun fire.

If the purring of a cat in New York were magnified to the same degree, it was explained, it could be heard plainly in San Francisco without the aid of telephone or radio.

And if the gadget were turned on by mistake some time and allowed to go to work on a New Year's Eve celebration, or a councilmanic debate or some of our street traffic noises, the consequent avalanche of noise probably would destroy everything in the city—including the sound microscope.

The Post Impressionist

The Doll Immortal.

Post Office, Thursday.

NOW that the Christmas-gift dolls are beginning to feel at home in your house, we beg to introduce the Doll Philosopher.

He is the Laureate of Dolls, too. He is the Doll-Song Maker and the Defender-General of Dolls.

Most likely you already know him through his work. But so modest is he, the chances are that you don't know his real name in real life. He was the "Uncle Ed" of "Uncle Ed and His Dream-Children" which won a large radio-success with thousands of non-dream children and, for our part, we wish he would soon resume the air.

He is Henry Edward Warner, of Baltimore.

Mr. Warner has done more than anybody else or anything else to make dolls popular—except children and instinct. He is for a doll in every child's arms. He even declares that many a childless adult would be a better man or woman if they retook the doll-habit of their earliest youth—not the boudoir dolls which were fashionable a few years ago, but real dolls. And he declares that everybody has a lot to learn from the love of dolls.

He has written thousands of articles upon doll psychology. He is in constant correspondence with doll lovers everywhere. He has composed hundreds of poems and songs with dolls for his inspiration.

But, fond as he is of all really dollish dolls, he is fondest of the Rag Family.

Twenty years ago he wrote his first doll song, and it is still going stronger than Johnnie Walker: "I've Got a Pain in My Sawdust." Perhaps you are old enough to have listened to Kitty Cheatham sing it into fame. Perhaps you travel enough to have heard it taught to the Japanese school children in the Hawaiian Islands as part of their Americanization.

Nevertheless, Mr. Warner writes us: "I like better one of my less-known compositions,

"'I want my little Rag Doll,
'Cause my little Rag Doll needs me.'

"I've always had a strong yen for the rag dolls. My feeling for them is something like the President's for the Forgotten Man.

"The rich dolls and the princess dolls have much too much too easily got. My rag dolls have modest charms, but they are the most loved by the doll mothers. Fancy dolls come and go; the old Rag Doll will live on as long as there is a Little Girl in the House."

Doll propaganda being Mr. Warner's life work, by what would you suppose he made his living?

He does not make it by the propaganda, nor by doll manufacture.

He is a veteran newspaperman.

Listen to him:

"Anyone who fears the charge of sentimentalism when writing about dolls and children—sentimentalism in the sense of cultivating unmaudlin sentiment—has been brought up on the wrong breakfast food. As my best friend that ever was—the Rag Doll—would say, such a person has learned the great untruths of practical men. Why, we must all become as little children to enter into the Kingdom of Happiness!

"Hard-boiled? Being sentimental doesn't hurt the toughest—and I'm plenty tough! Besides, among humans there is really no such thing as a hard-boiled egg. The kind of egg that sort of human being is would never boil hard. He'd explode, very likely, and shock the olfactory nerves, but he wouldn't boil hard.

"Who wouldn't rather be Santa Claus than Alexander the Great? Alexander—they say—wept because he had no more worlds to conquer with his real soldiers. But Santa Claus goes around the world giving children tin soldiers and real dolls. We just about come into life playing with them, and, in one of my songs, I picture mankind reaching the end of this existence and waking

"Where I shall play with my soldiers, and you Shall mother your dolls again."

"Hard-boiled Alexander: He did not weep because he had no more worlds to conquer. Here's the truth about him, which I made up myself—because it must be the truth:

"In his time, there was also Diogenes, living ragged in a tub and teaching the people, who blocked the traffic to listen. One day, Alexander stopped to see what could possibly draw such a crowd that he couldn't even give a party at his palace. With his shadow falling over Diogenes, he said, after bit: 'I have heard you and, if I were not Alexander, I would be Diogenes.' But the humble philosopher answered only: 'Stand out of my sunlight!' Then, for the first time, Alexander realized how cheap were the triumphs of his sword. And that, dear colleague, was when and why Alexander wept. . .

"I'd like to tell the world what would happen if my dolls and dream children were sitting at Geneva, in solemn international conclave guarded only by my tin soldiers!"

Well, we hope Mr. Warner will tell us sometime!

Debt Revision Solves Argentina's Problem

Together With Venezuela, Nation Sees Recovery Ahead In South America.

By Peter F. Kihss.

NEWS FROM BRAZIL that a commission will arrive here within two weeks to seek another modification of service on Brazil's foreign debt serves notice that much of South America is still wallowing by the roadside in the economic morass of debts floated in the buoyant era.

Of all the countries south of Panama, but two can walk the path of international relations without staggering before the specter of debts that some day must be met. Venezuela can walk with assurance. Under its dictator, Juan Vicente Gomez, who celebrated the twenty-sixth anniversary of his first presidency last month, the nation has rigidly avoided foreign lenders.

Argentina, likewise, now can smile, reaping the reward due debtors who pay. Alone of the borrowing nations of the South, Argentina has not defaulted on either interest or principal payments of its national debt. Indeed, its government has so manipulated the debt problem that Argentina's debts have become the keystone of the structure of Argentina's New Deal.

More and more, students in the Latin nations are looking into the solution for economic crisis attempted in Argentina. For, apparently, Argentina's path was the way to Latin-American recovery.

• • • •

ARGENTINA did not default. This does not mean that Argentina's debt problem was minor. On the contrary, it was supreme among the nation's economic problems. Thirty per cent of Argentina's 1934 budget, the budget prepared just before her New Deal actually swung into action, was earmarked for payments on the public debt. This amounted to some 242,000,000 pesos out of a total budget of 796,000,000. Argentina's national, provincial and municipal governments owed a total of 5,500,000,000 pesos.

Argentina's private citizens likewise groaned with debt. Prices late in 1933, when the depression struck hardest, dropped so far that it looked as though no Argentine farmer would ever pay off any of his debts. A conservative newspaper in Buenos Aires estimated that farmers would lose 800,000,000 pesos after completing their 1933 exports. Country stores in the wheat country, the veins through which Argentine farm credit flows, refused credit under any circumstances that same October. A farmers' strike for paying prices loomed.

Debts were the root of the evil, said the new cabinet, dominated by 38-year-old Minister of Finance Federico Pinedo and 46-year-old Minister of Agriculture Luis Duhau, decided. The country needed a "plan of national reconstruction," they declared.

Argentina loves its international prestige. The nation shrank from being classed as a debt defaulter, although falling foreign trade (which fell 13 per cent in exports in 1933) was making it ever harder to retain the favorable trade balance which alone could make it possible to meet foreign debt service.

• • • •

THE Argentine cabinet grappled with the problem and decided to make the debt section of the budget pay for the New Deal. It announced that it would not default on its debts. In return, it exacted a lower interest rate from presumably grateful creditors. Early in the year foreign credits within Argentina had been blocked to hold foreign exchange within the country. When the New Dealers started their plan, they told foreign creditors that the blocked credits could be unblocked if converted into 20-year 4 per cent national bonds. Eventually this conversion took place, through individual agreements, and it gave the government a vast loan to play with.

With that loan, the government embarked upon a colossal conversion of internal bonds, during which interest rates were slashed from the former 6 and 5½ per cent to a top rate of 5 per cent, almost unprecedentedly low.

The public debt burden became a more bearable burden. Then the government moved to help private debtors. More than 1,300,000,000 pesos in mortgage bonds were outstanding in issues of the National Mortgage Bank, in bonds paying 6 per cent and guaranteed by the government. The government asked the bondholders to accept an interest rate of 5 per cent and to postpone final payment date for 33 years. Most of them consented. Private debtors thus got 33 years more to pay their existing mortgages, and had to pay interest 1 per cent less. Simultaneously, pressure caused banks to reduce interest rates on other forms of credit.

Where the government's hands had been financially tied before by heavy interest rates, reduced rates now made it possible to use large sums of the formerly earmarked budget to finance other aspects of the New Deal. Those aspects included a price-raising campaign at home, in which the government guaranteed prices of wheat, flax, and corn, and succeeded in raising them above cost of production, again easing farmers' financial burdens. They included a three-year public works plan, mostly for road-building, which put most of Argentina's urban unemployed back to work.

They also added government help to exporters, with meat commissions studying ways and means of finding new markets abroad and improving the quality of Argentine meat and a fruit commission doing the same for the developing fruit industry. Also, they stressed colonization schemes, designed to open up the half of Argentine that has hardly more than a person per square mile. Thus, settlers went into the torrid Chaco and forested Formosa territories to grow cotton. Others went to Los Andes to hunt minerals. Others extended the wheat area of La Pampa.

• • • •

BACKING it all, Argentina moved also to stabilize its foreign trade. Trade agreements were completed with most of Argentina's principal customers, including Great Britain, Belgium, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, and South American nations, excepting up to now the United States. Those agreements were based on Duhau's pet policy of "buy from those who buy from us." Argentina desired to make sure that its favorable balance of trade, vital if international debt payments were to be met, continued.

Prosperity is returning to Argentina. Economic stability is well in sight. The unemployed are down to a nominal figure. Farmers are holding their heads up again. Credit is flowing through the nation, throbbing its natural resources into national wealth.

Exports leaped 28 per cent for the first nine months of 1934 above 1933. The favorable trade balance jumped 35 per cent. Stock exchange transactions for the first six months swelled 22 per cent. Buenos Aires bank clearings increased 18 per cent in the same period. The dark figure of commercial failures brightened with a 91 per cent decrease for the first six months of 1934, compared with 1933.

Meanwhile, government revenues improved more than expected. Finance Minister Pinedo's report late last month estimated that ordinary revenues for the year would be 28,100,000 pesos above the estimate made as the year began. The ordinary budget of 869,000,000 pesos indicated a 5,000,000-peso surplus, thanks to savings of 40,800,000 pesos through conversions and other operations. However, special expenses and a deficit in the school budget created a small actual deficit of 19,400,000 pesos. This deficit became insignificant in comparison with the news that 151,500,000 pesos had been spent on public works.

Argentina's picture is bright. Argentina is fast becoming a nation about which classical economists can do much pointing with pride. And its debts are being paid.

That Saar Plebiscite

Germany has won the Saar Basin plebiscite and gets the custody of the territory the year around.

• • • •

France isn't even allowed to have it week-ends and holidays.

• • • •

The inhabitants voted to go back to the people they hate the least.

• • • •

All that is lacking is a card from the League of Nations wishing the Germans many happy returns.

• • • •

The Saar Valley was given to the French at the end of the World War for a period of 15 years. The French thought it a good idea at the time, but after 15 years they are glad of a pardon.

• • • •

• • • •

The election was held under neutral directors and counters, but the verdict couldn't have been much more overwhelming if it had been personally conducted by Adolf Hitler.

• • • •

The Allies sent troops to the Saar to see that the election was honest, and it worked so well that they may go so far as to try it in their own countries some day.

• • • •

This is one of the few times in modern history that any government has taken such steps for honesty at the polls.

• • • •

When the news that the Saar had voted to answer the ad, "Come home, all is forgiven," the other nations of the world were as relieved as the fellow with the hot plate and no table to set it on.

• • • •

When the World War was ended it was thought Germany had lost it. But it begins to look more and more like a premature decision.

• • • •

Most of the residents of the Saar Valley are Germans or of German descent, and it seemed a foregone conclusion that you couldn't expect a man named Hans to sign a petition that he be called Alphonse.

• • • •

The Saar, as a result of the plebiscite, will be formally turned over to Germany by the League with a card, "Opened by mistake," and will join the many bundles returned after Christmas.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

The Monetary Conference.

WE ECONOMISTS of the old school had a most delightful get-together yesterday at Senator Elmer Thomas' monetary conference. Ot its conclusion we all thanked the Senator for bringing us together in this way and resolved to meet frequently in the future, to make permanent, in fact, our organization, which, as we all agreed, had set in motion some very momentous history-making work.

BARGERON.

Although there were many of us who thought this first meeting would be devoted solely to exploring one another's minds we found that would take entirely too much time so we decided just to incorporate nearly all of the ideas in one resolution. In that way our resolution might be said to reflect the wishes of not only the 125,000,000 people already in this country but the 160,000,000 whom we forward-looking economists are counting on 20 or 30 years hence.

• • • •

What I really enjoyed about the meeting most was the renewal of old school associations. There was the gentleman from Columbia, class '48, who thought we did not go far enough in demanding a central bank to issue non-interest bearing notes. He thought we should also demand that these non-interest bearing notes be made available to the municipalities which, as he pointed out, are now steeped in debt. He had Philadelphia particularly in mind.

But former Senator Owens, of Oklahoma, who turned out to be one of our leaders—he is of class of '50 or '60 but I don't know which school—said we should not let ourselves in for being assailed by the press as being unsound. He was moved by the force of the Columbia gentleman's argument, he said, but we simply had to restrain ourselves and furthermore, under the new monetary plan or plans, there would be so much money that Philadelphia would be taken care of. We in turn were then moved by the force of Senator Owens' argument and voted the Columbia gentleman down. Personally, I most always am willing to follow Senator Owens' leadership. I recall three outstanding things about him. He voted against our entering the war, and then wrote a book explaining his vote, he bolted Al Smith. I have always understood the reason he got so interested in money was because he has so much of it.

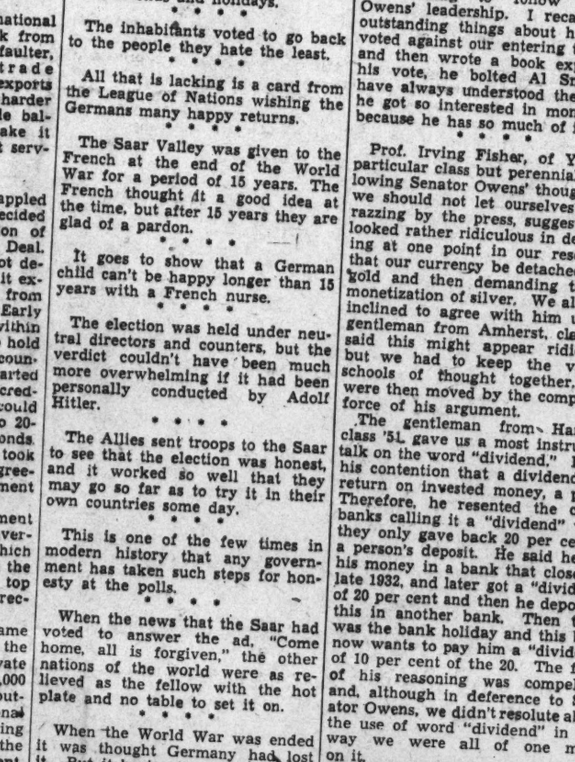
• • • •

Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale, no particular class but perennially, following Senator Owens' thought that we should not let ourselves in for razzing by the press, suggested we looked rather ridiculous in demanding at one point in our resolution that our currency be detached from gold and then demanding the remonetization of silver. We all were inclined to agree with him until a gentleman from Amherst, class '49, said this might appear ridiculous but we had to keep the various schools of thought together. We were then moved by the compelling force of his argument.

The gentleman from Harvard, class '51, gave us a most instructive talk on the word "dividend." It was his contention that a dividend is a return on invested money, a profit. Therefore, he resented the closed banks calling it a "dividend" when they only gave back 20 per cent of a person's deposit. He said he lost his money in a bank that closed in late 1932, and later got a "dividend" of 20 per cent and then he deposited this in another bank. Then there was the bank holiday and this bank now wants to pay him a "dividend" of 10 per cent of the 20. The force of his reasoning was compelling and, although in deference to Senator Owens, we didn't resolute about the use of word "dividend" in this way we were all of one mind on it.

The gentleman from Princeton, class '53, had a most interesting proposition to give all of the unemployed $500 apiece. We will probably do something about this at the next meeting.

It was really a most interesting gathering. Seemingly, all of economists were represented except Elliott Thurston and Arthur Brisbane. In a way it was we oldsters' answer to youth. They have been talking so much about how they intend to run the world and about retiring us at 40, that it was good to show them we have many a kick left in us—by heck!



"Maybe it was 201 West 27th!"

Frenchman's Novel Tells Tragedy of Super-Speed Liner Matched Against the Sea.

By Theodore Hall.

ONE seldom thinks of the French as a seafaring race, whereas it is a truism of the British, and only less so of the Norwegians, Danes and Germans. One little-known group of salt water mariners you might jot down in your memory—the Aland Islanders, who live on a dense and wooded little archipelago in the Baltic Sea between Sweden and Finland. They are preeminent for one fact. Almost alone in the world, they still send their great square-rigged barks careening down the latitudes. A. J. Villiers, of no slight windjammer fame himself, tells about these last of the sailing ships in the January Geographic, and a heart-warming story it is.

But the salt tradition got left out of the French, somehow. If you'd have a slight but telling index, compare the advertising of the French Line with that of the Cunard. The one stresses cuisine and "distinguished living," the other salt-encrusted captains and sea legend. Even the hardy, annual voyage of the Breton fishers to the Newfoundland bank doesn't tip the scale. And though we had last year so fine an example of French sea literature as Roger Vercel's "In Sight of Eden" (which I looked into just now to see if it was as good as I remembered, and it is) there is still a start of surprise on coming upon a Frenchman writing with salt water in his pen.

All of which I reckoned into my considerable joy last night over Edouard Peisson's novel, "Outward Bound from Liverpool" (Stokes, $2.50), translated by C. R. Benstead.

For dour old Capt. Davis' instructions were precisely that—"whatever the cost," said the owners' orders, he must hang up the speed pennant. Off the Skerries he dropped the pilot. Off the weather end of Ireland he took a last sight of Fastnet Light. Then at 28 knots (over 32 miles an hour) the Star of the Seas rushed her huge bulk westward. Money had built the most impressive liner ever constructed. Now man, from the solitary old captain straining his eyes on the bridge to the last sweating giant in the stokehold, was doing his agonized utmost.

• • • •

"In England, at this moment, they're calling the Star of the Seas the most wonderful ship ever built," whispered Herwick, the first officer, to young Simon, the second officer, off watch one day. "For myself, though—well, I call her a fragment of lunacy!"

Simon was astounded. "But—but why?"

Then Herwick unfolded a tale in his notorious harsh-tongued style. The designer of the ship, it seemed, had made all his plans and given them to the company. But when work was started he had suddenly repudiated his design, saying that the ship was too long for its strength. Obstinately, the company had gone right ahead and built a craft. Herwick intimated, whose beams and plates might buckle amidships at any moment. Young Simon was aghast, but he reasoned with himself until he could take the tale as one of Herwick's cock-and-bull stories.

"What a liar!" he said to himself.

• • • •

Capt. Davis pushed the ship along at the top pound of steam. For 17 years of command he had never so much as fouled an anchor. Now, when he entered Newfoundland fog he knew he had to draw on his luck to obey company orders. At full 28 knots the ship plowed on, crying its hoarse warning at two-minute intervals. When Cape Race wirelessed the presence of icebergs, and his officers pleaded with him that he swerve south, he held course and speed through the white, all-enveloping blanket to the very last moment.

Then he turned, but it was too late. There was a shape in the fog, a dash for the engine-room telegraph, the rumbling of reversed propellers, then a gentle bump as the iceberg nicked the port bow and lifted the ship ever so slightly on its underwater ledge.

Still, the officers felt lucky. Only a 10-foot slit and the forepeak filled, and water-tight compartments would hold until an emergency collision mat was lashed overside. Good-bye record, of course, but they could half-speed the ship into New York. The damage seemed insignificant.

Insignificant, that is, until the chief engineer, down in the engine room, looked up and stood frozen in his tracks—water, in trickles and pencil streams and ever-enlarging gushes, was coming through the walls of the ship. The plates themselves were bulging, loosening, shearing off the rivets before his eyes.

• • • •

M. Peisson's climax is tremendous. The stoic devotion to duty of the officers, the panic among the passengers as the boats are lowered, the ship itself literally breaking in two amidships—all this he narrates so vividly that you will have to stamp your feet to prove you have a solid floor under you.

Up to now his story has been put rather coolly and generally. The passengers are seen as typical groups—the stokers (I may be wrong, but I thought hand stoking had gone out of advanced nautical design) as symbols of brawn; the officers, too, for all their individualization, as drivers of the ship. But now, in the terrific tragedy, the men come to the fore as heart and blood. It is not M. Peisson's least bitter and ironic effect that all their efforts are sacrificed to a mistaken line in a blueprint, to a commercial lust for bigness and speed.

On the bridge, Capt. Davis realizes himself that such tales as Herwick spread were true. The company had put him in command of a ship which wasn't seaworthy. "I would to God," he says to his old shipmate, the chief officer, going down with him, "that I could be spared to tell them back there in Liverpool about it!"

But in this stirring novel, addressed to a speed-mad age, M. Peisson tells a lot of people for him.

Helen C. Frick Fights $250,000 Slander Suit

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 16 (AP). Trial of a $250,000 slander suit by James Howard Bridge against Miss Helen Clay Frick, daughter of the late Henry Clay Frick, has opened in Supreme Court.

Bridge, who asserts he was formerly curator of the Frick Art Galleries in New York City, charges Miss Frick with authorship of a letter disparaging his competence as an authority on art.

Benjamin Franklin

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE birthday of Franklin is probably more widely remembered in America than the birthday of any other American not legally celebrated. He was probably the greatest man who ever lived in the Western Hemisphere. He is at least 200 years ahead of contemporary thought and behavior in 1934. He and the great German, Goethe, were the two wisest men of the eighteenth century. It is a pity they never met; how much they would have enjoyed conversations on international affairs, on the progress of science, on religion, on almost everything except poetry.

• • • •

Although Goethe was a gentleman and an aristocrat by birth, breeding, university and court education, and Franklin was a self-educated man who rose from poverty and obscurity—they would have met on equal terms and without a particle of embarrassment, for this practical New Englander met all the leading diplomats of Paris and was regarded by them all as their superior; he met the ladies of the smartest society at dinner-parties and assembles in Paris, and was the most popular man on every occasion.

Franklin's mind never grew old; to the very last of his 84 years, he was alert, inquisitive, interested in everything important. Inasmuch as in 1933 there was a new edition of Webster's Dictionary, let us remember what Franklin wrote to Webster, December 26, 1789. Franklin was almost 84, and had less than four months to live.

Admiral Sellers, Nice Swap Calls

Governor Greeted by Gun Salute at Academy.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Gov. Harry W. Nice, and Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, superintendent of the Naval Academy, exchanged official calls today. The occasion, incidentally, was marked by the first gun salute and other military flourishes that have been accorded Maryland's new Governor since his induction into office.

Admiral Sellers, a former commander in chief of the United States Fleet, made the first call. Accompanied by his aid, Lieut. Comdr. Theodore T. Patterson, he drove to the executive mansion, where Gov. Nice was in waiting. Following a brief exchange of courtesies, the naval guests returned to the Naval Academy.

Half an hour later, the Governor, in company with Adjt. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, returned the compliment. The arrival of the State executive at the naval reservation was signalized by a 19-gun salute from the shore battery, and a company of Marines and the Academy Band were paraded. Like honors were accorded upon departure of the Governor.

Richmond Leaders Hail Tyler's Action

Decision to Stay on ABC Ends Liquor Anxiety.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Maj. S. Heth Tyler's decision to remain with the alcoholic beverage control board today relieved considerable anxiety over the future of Virginia's experiment in liquor control.

Leaders seem to agree that if any man can maneuver the liquor control machinery through its many pitfalls to success, it will be Maj. Tyler, who, as chairman, is the spokesman of the board policy and chief engineer of the most politically perilous experiment in Virginia's modern history.

Maj. Tyler has never been an active wet or an active dry, and because of his sanity toward a question which often has made two factions fanatic, has won the confidence of the great body of moderate citizens who always decide whether the state should be wet or dry.

Drayman Hauls Away Furniture, Disappears

Minnie Pugh, who moved from 302 C street northeast to 11 N street in the same section last Saturday, thinks the colored drayman she hired for the job took too many liberties.

The woman complained to police yesterday that she had not seen her furniture, valued at $44, or the drayman since he left the C street address Saturday. She waited until yesterday before reporting it because she thought the man might have become lost. Police call it larceny after trust and have sent a lookout for the man.

Skyline Extension Bids Set.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Bids for the first 9 miles of the Skyline Drive extension south of Swift Run Gap, where the Spotswood Trail crosses the Blue Ridge Mountains, will be awarded in Washington on February 15, Thomas L. Farrar, a former member of the State conservation commission, has announced.

Test Now Is Whether Securities Act Works

Commission's Liberalizing Of Act Is Victory For Formerly Scorned Critics.

By Elliott Thurston.

UNDER the leadership of Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy the Securities and Exchange Commission apparently has gone as far as is possible to liberalize the securities act by interpretation. After prolonged study in cooperation with industrial and banking interests most affected, the commission announced new rules and regulations which appear to go far to remove major criticisms leveled against the act.

By simplifying forms the commission has done much to reduce excessive, even prohibitive, costs of complying with registration requirements. By undertaking to define hitherto indefinite and unreasonable pains and penalties provided by the act, the commission has sought to rationalize punitive and unquestionably prohibitive sections of the law. According to Mr. Kennedy, directors and officers of corporations will no longer be exposed to the risk of being prosecuted and punished for errors of omission as well as commission in furnishing information for which they could not rationally and fairly be held personally liable.

In other words, so far as the law lends itself to being interpreted reasonably, so that it may become workable instead of obstructive, as it has proved to be in practice ever since it was enacted, as much appears to have been accomplished as can be expected, short of amendments by Congress. For this much, the country owes much to Mr. Kennedy, the market operator, who at first was roundly denounced by the more vociferous champions of the law. Not only President Roosevelt, but the "Young Liberal" authors of the act, who were long intolerant of all criticism to their handiwork, have come belatedly to comprehend that they had not reformed, but exterminated the capital markets to which heavy industry, in particular, must look for the means of creating business and employment.

• • • •

LIGHT has finally dawned. Not only has the realism of the chairman prevailed, but his erstwhile critics now approve of him, of his motives which they were once so hasty in suspecting, and of his liberalization of the law. This is something of a gain. It marks a transition from blind passion to cooler-headed reason. The law may not yet be workable, but at least the commission, under Chairman Kennedy, has done all that can be expected to make it workable. Most of all a sense of reality has replaced intemperance and inexperience.

This newspaper's efforts, more than a year ago, to present the case for liberalization, in the interests of economic recovery, evoked heated, scornful resistance from the very champions of the law who now admit that liberalization is needed if there is to be genuine recovery in this country.

More than a year ago, The Post, in a comprehensive survey, presented the views of leading industrialists, heads of insurance companies, of savings banks and of other representative business and banking concerns throughout the country. The most competent and experienced opinion on the operation of the capital markets was thus assembled and published. Complete unanimity existed that the securities act was unworkable and should be liberalized as a first essential to promote recovery and reemployment.

Some of the so-called "Young Liberals," who were largely responsible for the securities act, undertook at that time to discredit all such commentaries on their law by insisting that the act was, in fact, workable; that its critics were inspired by a variety of unworthy motives—selfishness, greed, an unregenerate refusal to be reformed, and so on. They blocked rationalization of the law in Congress, although some pretense was made of liberalizing it. Heat rather than light prevailed.

• • • •

HOWEVER, time went on and the cold, hard fact remained that no financing or refinancing was being done. Responsible directors and officers of corporations, large and small, refused to subject themselves to the unreasonable costs and the dragnet of indiscriminate penalties to which they became liable if they attempted to comply with the law as it stood and was originally interpreted by the Federal Trade Commission. The result was continuing paralysis of much of the most vitally important machinery of recovery. Literally billions of dollars of urgently needed refinancing and new financing was blocked.

It has taken all this time to bring about as much liberalization of the law as the commission itself can effect by interpretation. The test has been and will continue to be, not what either the champions or critics of the act say about it, but the results. For nearly two years the law has stood in the way of recovery. Many business leaders were forced to the conclusion that the intention behind the act must have been to block recovery. Otherwise they could not account for the New Deal's refusal to face the facts—the complete absence of results. Chairman Kennedy and the commission, under his guidance, exemplify the change to a realistic, national attitude. If results remain negative, for all they can do, the law itself will have to be moderated and liberalized to produce the workability which is imperative in the interest of a normal business and industrial recovery—in the interest of providing employment in private enterprise for the millions of unemployed now on the relief rolls.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Joint recital by Lotte Lehmann, soprano, and Erno Valasek, violinist, in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Wednesday morning; Erno Balogh and Pierre Luboschutz, accompanists. Program: lieder by Schubert, Schumann, Brahms and Richard Strauss; violin numbers by Vieuxtemps, Kreisler, Bettl, Brahms, Wilhelmj and Vienlavski.

When Frau Lotte Lehmann is in as admirable voice, as she was on this occasion, her artistry provides deep satisfaction to those who enjoy fine singing. A keen dramatic sense dictates the volume and coloratura of her tone, which is flexibly fitted to the melodic lines. In her readings there are no empty phrases, but each is charged with the emotional significance which seems to her to be the essential content. A song, as she sings it, is a means of expression, and not a medium for vocal display.

Her expressive skill had a wide range in the ten lieder which she presented. She began with a Schubert group of divers moods: "Die junge Nonne," "Auf das Wasser zu singen" and "Ungeduld." From Schumann's lyrics she chose three of the best: "Der Nussbaum," "Frehlingsnacht" and "Ich grolle nicht." Brahms was represented by "Immer leiser wird mein Schlummer" and "Staendchen," and Richard Strauss by "Allerseelen" and "Cecilie."

Intense and effective as was Frau Lehmann's delivery of "Ich grolle nicht," the fact remains that this is emphatically a man's song, quite out of place in a soprano repertoire. Moreover, her idea of the song's meaning missed its bitter scorn and biting irony. That was the single case in which one did not agree with her manner of interpretation; in all other respects she left an impression of sharp insight and finesse.

Master Erno Valasek, the 14-year-old Rumanian-American violinist, made his local debut with a slight nervousness which disappeared as he got well into his stride. He has a technique which many a gray veteran of the bow many envy, but he still has much to learn about tone-coloring and interpretation. His bowing has a dash which bespeaks potentialities of temperament, and his fingers are prodigiously dextrous on the strings. Yet the artist within him has only partially emerged.

He started with the first movement of Vieuxtemps' virtuosic concerto in D minor, and in two following groups played Kreisler's arrangement of the Tartini variations on a theme of Corelli, Grieg's "Cradle Song" transcribed by his teacher, Adolfo Betti; the A major Hungarian dance of Brahms, Wilhelmj's transcription of a Wagnerian air, and Vienlavski's "Scherzo-Tarantella."

Prematurely skilled as he is and excellently equipped for a concert career, this lad may look confidently forward to an artistic development. At present, his technical training overshadows all else, including his individuality. One is not conscious of any personal note in his playing, even in the more lyric pieces in which one would have expected to find it. But behind his impetuosity there surely must exist an emotional force which will presently manifest itself.

District Grand Jurors Return 12 Indictments

Twelve indictments, charging varied crimes from robbery to nonsupport of minor children, were returned by the District grand jury yesterday. In five cases the jurors reported there was insufficient evidence upon which to base an indictment.

Those indicted were Louis F. Carres, nonsupport; William H. Carey, joy riding; George W. Coates (two charges), housebreaking and larceny; Howard N. Carter, grand larceny; James Reeve, Leroy A. Turpin and Samuel Kates (two charges), robbery; John E. Welch, Frank Wingfield and Claude Price, assault with a dangerous weapon.

Jacob Mueller Funeral To Be Held Tomorrow

Last rites for Jacob Mueller, 72, member of the board of directors of the German Orphan Asylum, who died Tuesday noon at his home, 906 South Carolina avenue southeast, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at his residence. The pastor will be the Rev. Frederick Enders, of Concordia Lutheran Church.

Born in Ruppurr, Germany, Mr. Mueller came to America as a youth and established a prosperous grocery business here. He retired in 1913. He devoted much of his life to charitable work.

Surviving Mr. Mueller is his son, George J. Mueller. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Policeman Hit by Taxi While Carrying Stretcher

Policeman Newton E. Woodward, on patrol duty in the Second Precinct, is recovering today in Emergency Hospital from head injuries suffered early yesterday when he was struck by a taxicab in the 1200 block of Twelfth street northwest.

Woodward and Policeman C. H. Stello were carrying a stretcher containing a man who had been found unconscious in the street to the patrol wagon when Woodward, who was leading, stepped into the path of a taxi operated by T. Hemistocles Plackos, 40, of 710 F street northeast. Plackos was not held.

Biplane Makes 2,000-Mile Hop To Canal Zone

Giant Navy Craft Ends Lone Non-Stop Flight From Norfolk.

(Associated Press.)

Held back by unfavorable winds, the giant Navy biplane, XP2H-1, landed at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, at 4:50 p. m. (Eastern Standard time), yesterday after a 2,000-mile nonstop flight from Norfolk, Va.

Exactly 25 hours had elapsed from the take-off when Lieut. J. S. Thach, commander and pilot, brought the giant ship to an easy landing in the water off the air base near Cristobal, Panama. The report sent back to the Navy Department here was that head winds had prevented holding the normal speed of 90 miles an hour.

The trip was without incident throughout and Navy officials expressed no alarm because nothing had been heard from the plane from 3 p. m., when it was 160 miles from its destination, until the wireless was received announcing the landing. With Lieut. Thach were Lieut. C. E. Giese, copilot, and six enlisted men.

Officials, saying this was the first single flight of its kind undertaken, recalled that a squadron of six planes last summer made a nonstop hop from Norfolk to Coco Solo without incident.

The XP2H-1, a four-motored biplane, will be assigned under Rear Admiral A. W. Johnson, commander of the base aircraft force, who recently came to the Canal Zone from the West Coast on the aircraft tender Wright.

Officials said plans were being considered to send the plane up the West Coast to join the main United States fleet.

The plane's route took it down the Eastern Seaboard to Key West, Fla., and thence across Cuba. The last part of the journey was across the Caribbean Sea over 700 miles of open water.

Copeland Food Bill Put Up to Tugwell

Undersecretary Asked for Opinion by Wallace.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, has been called on for an opinion of the Copeland pure food and drug bill, it developed yesterday, after an apparent effort to keep the handsome "Brain Truster" in the background.

Questioned at his press conference, President Roosevelt declared that he favored any bill with enough teeth in it to eliminate certain abuses now being practiced. So far as he knows, he said, the Copeland bill will do that, but he hasn't read it.

Later in the day Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was asked the same question, does the Administration favor the measure introduced by New York's Senator Royal S. Copeland? With a smiling glance at Dr. Tugwell, sitting nearby, Wallace said a report is now being prepared on it.

Children's Eyes Tested By Silver Spring Group

Preliminary steps in a health program hich is being planned by the recently formed public health lay committee of Silver Spring, Md., were taken yesterday when the sight of approximately 65 children in the Woodside School was tested by representatives of the nursing committee of the group and Miss Martha Keys, county nurse.

Mrs. Paul Coughlan and Mrs. Margaret Neumann have been elected delegates to a meeting of the Public Health Lay Association of Montgomery County, in Rockville, February 4.

Franklin Edited Book of Prayer, Library Reveals

Benjamin Franklin, regarded by some as among America's first agnostics, edited and published a book of common prayer, the Library of Congress disclosed last night on the eve of his birthday, according to the United Press.

Among the literary treasures on the well-guarded shelves of the rare book section is Rachel Austen's own copy of "Abridgment of the Book of Common Prayer," published in London in 1773 by Franklin. Rachel Austen was the Baroness le Despencer, wife of the patron who otherwise was known as Sir Francis Dashwood.

Franklin wrote a preface to explain why he had shortened most of the services. He said the old-fashioned services "are so long and filled with so many repetitions that the continued attention suitable to so serious a duty becomes impossible, the mind wanders and the fervency of devotion is slackened."

Major Dortch Is Dead at 55

Berryville, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.). Maj. Tyson Dortch, 55, died tonight at Mount Hebron, near here, of a complication of diseases.

A native of Goldsboro, N. C., Maj. Dortch, 35 years ago, while a student at West Point, was thrown from a horse and the injuries he received forced him to resign.

Subsequently, he studied law at the University of North Carolina and after being graduated, he practiced in Goldsboro. He was a son of former United States Senator Dortch, of North Carolina, and his mother was Miss Hattie Williams, member of a prominent Clarke County family. At the beginning of the World War, he enlisted in the Army and for the duration of the conflict he was stationed in one of the training camps.

About four years ago he purchased Mount Hebron, his mother's ancestral home, with the intention of residing there. Much of his time has since been spent in Clarke County.

He is survived by his wife and one stepson, Edward. A sister, Miss Selen Dortch, who is engaged in welfare work in Philadelphia, also survives.

The funeral will be held from the Episcopal Church here Friday with burial in Green Hill Cemetery.

Standard Oil To Issue Stock, End 'Deadlock'

Will Register $10,000,000 Securities Under New Rules of U. S. Board.

firmed the appointment of the five members of the commission. When he was appointed some opposition in the Senate was expected to Mr. Kennedy, but his record so far apparently satisfied all members of the Senate.

Appropriation Foreseen.

The Senate Appropriations Committee approved the restoration by a sub-committee of $300,000 for the SEC stricken from the independent offices appropriation bill by the House. With support of this committee the $2,370,000 appropriation for the SEC for the next fiscal year, recommended by President Roosevelt, seems assured of Senate approval.

At the same time the House approved a deficiency appropriation of $846,000 to carry on the commission's work until the new fiscal year starts July 1, or $150,000 less than the sum asked. Congress last spring provided funds sufficient only to support the SEC until February 1.

Publication of the House Appropriation Committee's hearings on both the deficiency and regular appropriations for the SEC revealed that Mr. Kennedy was sharply questioned as to the reasons for the large sums asked. He pointed out that a part of the estimated expenditure was required to conduct studies and inquiries directed by Congress.

In addition, Mr. Kennedy stressed the importance of regulating over-the-counter transactions, pointing out that if surveillance of that form of trading is neglected "corporate officials may seek to escape our regulations." He said there were some costly activities that could be and were being dropped, but that the over-the-counter inquiries and regulation were not among those activities. He also cited the necessity for investigation of trading in unlisted securities for Congress.

Will Issue 400,000 Shares.

The $10,000,000 capital stock issue, of which the Standard Oil Co. gave notice yesterday, contemplates the issuance of 400,000 shares at $25 par value in connection with the company's fifth stock acquisition plan for its employes. The notice was given in connection with the filing of an application for listing of the stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

It was the first notice of a capital issue filed since the commission over the last week-end announced simplified rules for registration of issues by seasoned corporations. The Standard Oil, due to the necessity for a complete independent audit of its huge business, has not yet filled out the new registration form, but will do so as soon as the audit is completed some time this spring.

Meanwhile the trustee of the stock acquisition plan will be paid deductions from employes' salaries starting January 1. Shares of the stock will not be issued until the registration has been completed. When the registration is completed the company will issue a prospectus to each employe making payments and they will be given 30 days to examine the prospectus and determine whether they wish to withdraw from participation in the purchase plan. If they do, the money they have paid in will be returned with 6 per cent interest.

Once the Standard Oil completes a registration statement for the common stock it will be an inexpensive and simple matter to register a long-term bond issue to take care of refinancing needs, it is contended. Recently the company called in as of February 1, $90,000,000 in 5 per cent debentures.

The Standard Oil is meeting this refunding operation with $8,000,000 cash from its treasury, $37,000,000 serial debentures sold privately and $45,000,000 in short-term bank loans. It is this latter sum which it is thought the company will convert into a long-term bond issue.

Man Injured in Crash.

David A. Miller, 30, of 1209 Twelfth street northeast, was taken to Casualty Hospital early yesterday suffering from a fractured rib said to have been caused in an auto accident at Berwyn, Md. Bladensburg rescue squad members said Miller's car struck a telephone pole on Baltimore boulevard.

Hospital Year Proves Busiest

4,086 Patients Admitted at Harrisonburg; More Facilities Needed.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.). The Rockingham Memorial Hospital had its busiest year last year with 4,086 patients being admitted, and the need for increased facilities was keenly felt.

Work already has started on a new heating plant double the capacity of the present system. It is hoped to build this year a separate building for patients with contagious diseases, to install an additional operating room, and to enlarge the dining room and kitchen facilities. At the present, the hospital does not have funds for these improvements.

The hospital has a rated bed capacity of 100 and yesterday there were 116 patients in the institution. There has been a marked increase in recent years and the average for last year shows it operated at more than 95 per cent capacity.

The reports to the board of trustees showed that the hospital, without any endowment, had no deficit last year. There was a heavy expenditure for charity and emergency cases and the cost of these were charged off. The hospital has only a $600 annual income for charity work and the work done exceeded this ten times or more.

Judge T. N. Haas was reelected president of the board of trustees, with John H. Hoover, vice president, and C. Gratan Price, secretary-treasurer. The board decided to continue the operation of the nurses' training school, one of the few in Virginia.

Kansas House for Death Penalty.

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 16 (AP).—A revival of capital punishment in Kansas, which banned the death penalty 27 years ago, was voted today by the House of Representatives. The bill, together with one establishing the gallows as the means of execution, now goes to the Senate.

World War's Cost To U. S. Estimated At Fifty Billions

The cost of the World War to the United States was officially set yesterday at about $50,000,000,000.

The estimate was disclosed in the detailed annual report of the Treasury, the Associated Press says. In it, Secretary Morgenthau figured the cost of the war as follows:

Estimated cost to June 30, 1921	$27,729,000,000
Interest on war debt	9,557,000,000
Veterans' Administration	6,391,000,000
Settlement of war claims	88,000,000

This does not include something like $12,000,000,000 in war debts owed the United States by foreign nations.

2 Drivers Exonerated In Girl's Death Here

John K. Hillers, 19, of the 200 block of First street southeast, and Stanley R. Hirst, 34, attached to the Naval Air Station, drivers of two automobiles which collided New Year's Day, causing the death of Miss Irma Couch, 18, of the 1900 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest, were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday.

Miss Couch, 1935's first traffic fatality, was a passenger in Hillers' automobile, along with her twin sister, Audrey. The crash occurred at Twenty-fourth place and Bladensburg road northeast. The coroner's jury held weather conditions responsible for the head-on collision.

Boy Injured by Auto.

Severe cuts and bruises were suffered by Charles Collins, 8, of the 3000 block of Gault place northeast, when he was struck yesterday by an automobile at Florida and West Virginia avenues northeast. The child, a student at Holy Name Parochial School, received first aid and was taken to his home.

Health Agency For Bethesda

Mrs. Morell Is Chairman of Lay Association's Local Branch.

The Bethesda branch of the Public Health Lay Association of Montgomery County, with Mrs. William Morell as chairman, was organized Tuesday at a meeting in the Battery Park clubhouse.

The purpose of the association, as explained by Mrs. J. Angus Watson, chairman of the central committee, is to promote the general health of county residents, especially school children.

Organized under the direction of Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer, the Bethesda branch will specialize on cases of health and hygiene not under the Social Service League. School children will be given annual physical examinations, with special attention to eyes, teeth and tonsils. The committee will also provide diphtheria antitoxins for school children.

Two nurses from the county health office have been detailed by Dr. Ellicott for part-time service under the Bethesda branch.

Officers elected by the branch are Mrs. William Nelson Morell, chairman; Mrs. E. V. Caywood, vice chairman; Mrs. Lew Coit, secretary, and Mrs. W. C. Basehoar, treasurer. Mrs. Coit and Mrs. Morell will serve also as delegates to the central committee. The Bethesda branch will meet on the third Wednesday of every month.

Mrs. Wilson Is Delighted With Flight

First Air Trip Exceeded Hopes, Says Former First Lady.

Returns to Flying Field Here With Floral Tributes.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Smartly gowned and graciously smiling, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson stepped from the huge new Douglas plane at the Washington airport yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Wilson had made her first flight, with Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker as her pilot, in a new Eastern Air Transport plane. The trip from Washington to New Orleans, to Newark, and back to the Capital, was made within a surprisingly brief time, and according to her traveling companions, who included Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Rickenbacker and Miss Augusta Walmsley, young daughter of the Mayor of New Orleans, Mrs. Wilson is a grand companion, as well as a good "sailor."

Mrs. Wilson stepped from the plane, and in her own sweet and simple way greeted the battery of cameras and newspaper men assembled to meet her. When asked how she had enjoyed the trip, she asked, "Am I being interviewed? You know I never give interviews." But asked if the trip was all that she had hoped for, she answered, "Even more than I had dared to hope for."

Pretty Miss Walmsley was delighted to have as one of her companions on the trip the former First Lady, who had not been in New Orleans since 1910 when she went there for the Mardi Gras, and in saying goodbye to Mrs. Wilson, regretted that she was not continuing on the return to Louisiana.

Carries Huge Bouquet.

Mrs. Wilson wore a handsome coat of black fur and a close fitting black hat for traveling, and when she arrived carried a huge bouquet of red roses which she had received in Newark and a corsage of purple orchids, her favorite flower, carefully packed in cotton and encased in a cellophane box which was tied with silver ribbons. These had been presented to her in New Orleans, and the Washington airport, not to be outdone, added a huge bouquet of spring flowers to her floral tribute.

During the trip, Mrs. Wilson, her companions said, was cheerful and interested in the various "gadgets" which indicated the speed, altitude, and distance of the plane and in the beautiful panoramas which lay beneath the plane. Mrs. Wilson was besieged by reporters and cameramen at various stops, but remained charming, (if evasive) to all.

Mrs. Rickenbacker in Printed Crepe.

Mrs. Rickenbacker, a handsome woman with white hair bobbed in the newest fashion, was proud of the flight accomplished by her famous husband, and smilingly greeted all who spoke to her at the airport. She wore a frock of maroon and white printed crepe, a small felt hat to match, and a mink coat on which she had pinned her corsage of orchids. Mrs. Meyer was in a woolen sports frock of navy blue, with a loosely knitted scarf of dark red about her throat, and a black felt beret. She wore a mink top coat and carried her orchids, as did Mrs. Wilson, still inclosed in their cellophane carton.

Miss Mary Louise Reynolds, of New Orleans, who was the "ship's stowaway," was there to receive her share of the acclaim and flowers, for the enterprising young woman had visited the New Orleans Airport at 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning to get a story for her paper, and Capt. Rickenbacker had invited her to finish the trip with the party. She wore a simple coat of dark blue tweed with a hat to match and a wooly scarf of Scotch plaid about her throat.

Birthday Ball Plans Are Made

Dance Jan. 30 to Benefit Victims of Infantile Paralysis.

With Mrs. John R. Williams as chairman of the birthday ball for President Roosevelt, to be given at the Shoreham Hotel January 30, members of the committee are organizing at headquarters in the Transportation Building.

Youths in the District of Columbia afflicted with infantile paralysis will receive 70 per cent of the proceeds from the ball, the fund to be distributed through the five organizations which care for such cases, the Children's Country Home, the Children's Hospital, the Child Welfare, the Junior League through its social service, and Columbia Hospital. The remaining 30 per cent will go to the national committee for infantile paralysis research throughout the country.

Mrs. Williams has a new idea for the ball this year. There will be no floor show, no special entertainment features, but small tables seating six guests will be arranged in the room adjoining the ballroom. At these guests may watch the dancing, and later supper will be served. Mrs. Reeve Lewis is chairman of the table committee and Mrs. William W. Galbraith is vice chairman. Mrs. Lewis is choosing members of her committee from the five boards to assist her.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson is honorary chairman of the ball committee; Mr. Raymond T. Baker is chairman of the executive committee; Mr. Robert V. Fleming, treasurer, and Admiral Mark Bristol, chairman of the ticket committee.

Representatives from the five boards will be at headquarters daily to assist in the work and plans.

Wives of Three Cabinet Officers Hold 'at Homes'

Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Farley and Mrs. Swanson Receive.

The second round of Cabient at-homes was held yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, received their friends of the diplomatic, official, service and residential sets.

Ruthven, the home of the Attorney General and his wife, was artistically decorated with Easter lilies and calla lilies arranged artistically in the large blue-green and buff drawing room in which Mrs. Cummings, wearing a becoming gown of nile green crepe made on straight lines, the jacket of which was trimmed at the sleeves with blue fox, received and chatted merrily with every one. Similar flowers were used to decorate the dining room where the tea table, lighted by candelabra holding four cream tapers, was.

Among those glimpsed there were Mme. Espil, wife of the Ambassador of Argentina, who had on a frock of terra cotta crepe with which she wore a cocoa brown felt hat, with a curled, fluffy feather nodding from the front of the tall crown, and a mink coat. Near her stood diminutive Mme. Sze, wife of the Minister of China, who was wearing a mink coat, at the neck of which one caught a glimpse of silver on her gown. Her turban was of black baghera crepe trimmed with a braid of the same material. Mrs. Bartow S. Weeks, of New York, guest of the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings, mingled with the guests. She wore a handsome gown of steel gray crepe trimmed on the lapels with small silver disks. Mrs. Campbell Prichett had on a gown of royal blue crepe with which she wore a close fitting black hat and a black cloth coat trimmed with sables.

Mme. de Bianchi in Modish Black.

Chatting, while partaking of the refreshments, were Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal, clad in modish black and the Minister of Egypt, Ibrahim Ratib Bey. Not far away stood the Minister of Portugal, Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, also chatting with friends.

Mrs. Absolam Waller was accompanied by her debutante daughter, Miss Louise Waller. The former was attired in a gown of black moire with which she wore a small close fitting black hat with a small nose veil, and a mink coat. Her daughter's frock was of emerald green crepe, made on straight lines over which she wore a cloth coat of dark brown trimmed with mink. Her small black velvet hat was caught at one side with a clip of brilliants.

At the R street home of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Swanson, most members of the Navy set in or near the Capital were to be found. The home, which contains a quantity of lovely old antiques, was decorated with pale pink roses, ferns and palms. Mrs. Swanson, with Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, wife of the assistant Secretary of the Navy, received in the drawing room. The hostess was gowned in pearl gray chiffon, fashioned with slightly puffed sleeves. Mrs. Wilson was attired in deep royal blue velvet and wore a close fitting hat of the same shade, which was trimmed with dark blue ostrich plumes. Mrs. Roosevelt was wearing a gown, fashioned on long lines, of gray baghera crepe. Her hat of the beret style was of velvet of the same shade. Not far from the receiving line stood the Secretary, who remained for a while to join his wife in greeting their many friends.

Roses Decorate Tea Table.

The tea table was artistically decorated with pink roses and ferns arranged in one large centerpiece around which were grouped four unusually tall ivory tapers in tall silver candlesticks. The room appeared to be entirely in candle light, so soft was the glow from the wall lamps. Rear Admiral Mark Bristol was accompanied by Mrs. Bristol, who was attired in deep brown. Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman was costumed in black, wearing over her gown a handsome sealskin coat. Her velvet hat was trimmed with ostrich plumes of black and white. Mrs. Kenna Elkins' gown of black crepe was finished at the neck with a touch of white. Mrs. Edgar Snow and Mrs. Lister Hill arrived together. The former was wearing a black turban and gown over which she wore a mink coat. Mrs. Hill's wide-brimmed hat and frock were of hunter's green.

Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton was accompanied by her debutante daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton, who was wearing a knitted frock of bright blue made with a brief standing collar which fastened in the front with four crocheted buttons. Her small hat, which was of a darker shade of blue, was trimmed with a band of the brighter blue. In one corner, holding a reception of her own, was petite Deaconess Beatrice Boyd, who has known the Swansons for many years, and who held everyone's interest with her tales of the Virginia mountains, where several years ago she was "loaned" for a supposedly short period to do her bit in making life more pleasant and where she liked it so well that she put off her return.

Mrs. Farley Attired in Green.

Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General, received in their large apartment at the Mayflower Hotel. The rooms were effectively decorated with shell-pink roses arranged against a background of palms and ferns. Mrs. Farley wore a gown of a becoming shade of green. At the tea table, which was decorated with roses and softly glowing tapers, one glimpsed the same people that had been seen at the other receptions, and who seemed to be following one another about from place to place.

Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, wife of the Speaker of the House, entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in the Chinese room of the Mayflower, when she was assisted in receiving by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, jr. Mrs. Byrns, sr., wore a handsome afternoon gown of black crepe with the bodice lavishly trimmed, with gold and emerald green lame and deep cuffs of the same material. She wore a corsage of talisman rosebuds and lilies of the valley. Young Mrs. Byrns wore a lovely afternoon gown of red velvet and shoulder corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Byrns was assisted by the wives of the Tennessee Representatives.

The tea table which was placed in the alcove at the west end of the room, was effectively decorated with pink and yellow snapdragons, purple iris, white stevia and yellow and white marguerite. On the centerpiece of the table was a large cake with a sugar design of the flag of Tennessee, which is red with three white stars in the center. There were many other pieces of spun sugar in red, white and blue around which were the many delicious cakes and sandwiches. The other tables around the room had large baskets of flowers adding a note of color and contrast to the Chinese blue of the wall.

MacWhites Hosts At a Dinner Party

The Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite entertained at dinner last night in their apartment at the Shoreham, when their guests included the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso; Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, the Federal Relief Administrator and Mrs. Harry Hopkins, the Assistant Chief of the Western European Division of the State Department and Mrs. John D. Hickerson, the Secretary of the Irish Free State Legation and Mrs. Robert Brennan, the Right Rev. James Ryan, Bishop of Modra; Mr and Mrs. Davis Elkins, Mrs. Samuel T. Conner, Mrs. Harry Baxter and Miss Helen Lee Doherty.

Garners Give Dinner in Honor Of Roosevelts

Cabinet Members Attend Function at Washington Hotel.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt were the guests in whose honor the Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner entertained at dinner last night at the Washington Hotel.

Dinner was served in the rose room which was decorated with Australian ferns, palms and southern smilax. The long oval table was decorated with seven large centerpieces of silver containing "Better Times" roses of deep red, budlea, Spanish iris and euthorpia. The places were marked by corsages of gardenias for the ladies and buttonieres of maroon carnations (which is quite a Western fad that is coming East) for the men.

Following dinner the guests adjourned to the sun parlor, which was decorated with palms, Boston ferns and smilax. Here an amusing entertainment was furnished with songs, magician's tricks and music.

The guests included the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins.

Also the Chief of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. Jesse Jones, the Mayor of New York and Mrs. Fiorello LaGuardia, the Naval Aid to the President and Mrs. Wilson Brown, the Military Aid to the President, Col. Edwin M. Watson; Mr. R. W. Morrison, Col. and Mrs. Edwin A. Halsey, the Rev. ZeBarney Phillips, D. D., Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Sloan, Mr. and Mrs. Silliman Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Will Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Buck, Mr. Francis M. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Foot, Mr. and Mrs. Ulric Bell, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Benedum and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Shary.

Aldriches in City As Wilkins' Guest

Dunns to Entertain in Their Honor Sunday.

Former Representative and Mrs. Richard S. Aldrich arrived yesterday from their home in Providence, R. I., and will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins at their residence, 1700 Massachusetts avenue.

The Chief of the Protocol Division of the State Department and Mrs. James Clement Dunn will entertain at luncheon Sunday at their home on Observatory circle in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn will entertain at dinner Wednesday in honor of the former Military Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Maurice Fitsmaurice Day.

They will entertain again Friday, January 25, followed by a musicale, at which the noted Belgian pianist, Mr. Marcel Maas, will be the guest artist.

Town Chatter

Who's Where—and Why, Around the Capital.

Major Wilfred Blunt is an unusual Master of the Hunt. Far from boasting about his outfit, he dubs it "The World's Worst." When asked whether he had bought the couples in England or Virginia, he said "Oh no, we just let nature take its course."

Kitty Lester Hett, who has been visiting her sister, Ruth Buchanan, looks ridiculously young. Evidently working at the Best & Co.'s branch in Garden City agrees with her.

Some weeks ago D'Arcy McGreer of the Canadian Legation, went to live at the Congressional Club with a view to retiring from the hurly-burly and getting full of health; he has the establishment practically to himself and scarcely sees Ivan Franges and Seyfoullah Bey, who are the only other constant residents there, so he is monarch of all he surveys. A typical evening for him consists of a light supper, bowling, Badminton and a swim.

Sidney Mellon, of the PWA, has been going around with his arm in a sling. He says it was the result of a skiing mishap.

A few days ago Dr. Archie Randolph, of Upperville, suffered a broken arm while hunting; it was fractured just a few inches from the spot that was mended last year. It takes a medico to do such a neat job.

Lunching at the Mayflower the other day were Bill Hurlbut and his sister, Caroline White, of Middleburg. They had come up to glimpse the former's nine-pound grandchild, the infant of the Victor du Ponts. Bill neither looks nor feels a grandpa.

Also spotted at the Mayflower lunching with Senhor Freitas-Valle and Senhor Moura was Mrs. John Caswell, perhaps collecting Brazilian recipes.

Dr. "Brownie" Wells has arranged for the doctors of his neighborhood to meet two or three times a month for dinner. Shop talk is taboo. It seemed very quiet in the private dining room where they ate at Pierre's.

British Envoy Is Honor Guest

Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito Entertain at Embassy.

The Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, dean of the diplomatic corps, was the guest in whose honor the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito entertained at dinner last night in the embassy.

The guests also include the Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Patek; Senator and Mrs. Gerald P. Nye, the Japanese Ambassador-at-Large, Mr. Shigeru Yoshida, and his daughter, Miss Kazuko Yoshida; the Ambassador of Japan to Turkey, Mr. Iyemasa Tokugawa, and his daughter, Miss Toyo Tokugawa, who were at the Carlton Hotel yesterday on their way to New York; former Senator and Mrs. David A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott L. Thurston, Col. and Mrs. Ralph H. Hallett, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mr. and Mrs. William Philip Simms, the Counselor of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Fujii and their daughter, Miss Migoko Fujii; the Military Attache of the Embassy, Col. Kenji Matsumoto; the Naval Attache of the Embassy, Capt. Tmaon Yamaguchi, and the other members of the staff.

Tea Is Planned For Mrs. Garner And Mrs. Byrns

Woman's Democratic Club Announces Party Saturday.

The Woman's National Democratic Club will give a tea in honor of Mrs. John Nance Garner and Mrs. Joseph Byrns Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. Congress members, their wives and hostesses have been invited, although no special cards have been issued. The tea will be held at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Garner and Mrs. Byrns will be Mrs. Charles Hamlin, president of the club; Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Morris Sheppard and Mrs. Tom Connolly.

Assisting in greeting the guests and pouring tea will be the wives of the Representatives from Tennessee and Texas, Mrs. Samuel D. McReynolds, Mrs. Clarence M. Turner, Mrs. Herron Pearson and Mrs. Jere Cooper, from Tennessee; Mrs. Sam Rayburn, Mrs. Wright Patman, Mrs. Morgan Sanders, Mrs. Joe Eagle, Mrs. J. J. Mansfield, Mrs. J. P. Buchanan, Mrs. O. H. Cross, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, Mrs. W. D. McFarlane, Mrs. Richard Kleberg, Mrs. Melton West, Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Marvin Jones, Mrs. G. H. Mahon, Mrs. Maury Maverick, Mrs. C. H. South, Mrs. Martin Dies, Mrs. Luther Johnson and Mrs. Nat Patton, from Texas.

Others who will assist at the tea are Mrs. Benton McMillian, Mrs. M. E. Buford, Mrs. Robert Gates, Mrs. Samuel Herrick and Mrs. James T. Newton.

Mrs. James Craig Peacock and Mrs. W. L. Beale will make the introductions.

Mrs. Roosevelt Luncheon Guest

Mrs. Farley Entertains in Her Apartment at the Mayflower.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was the luncheon guest yesterday of Mrs. James A. Farley, who entertained in her apartment at the Mayflower.

The company included Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. A. Harry Moore, Mrs. W. W. Howes, Mrs. James A. Moffett, Mrs. Laura Curtis and Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer.

Also the out-of-town guests of the Postmaster General and Mrs. Farley, who are Countess Giuseppe Cippico, Mrs. Daniel H. Skilling, Mrs. Daniel H. McKettrick, Mrs. Salvatore Cotillo, Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy, Mrs. Lucius M. Boomer, Mrs. Louis Gimbel, Miss Beth Leary, Mrs. Vincent Richards, Mrs. C. R. Seldman, Mrs. Gene Pope, Mrs. Harry B. 'Bath Friction,' New Rubdown, Makes Debut

Lotion With Lemony Twang Is Just the Thing for That Tired Feeling.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

"I NEED a derrick to pull me out of bed in the mornings," said a sleepy-eyed young ing who entered the office at 5 after 9.

"You should also have a motor installed to keep you awake during the day," her supervisor added in crisp accents.

"What she really needs," interposed a young woman at an adjoining desk," is a brisk rub down with that new bath friction."

She was speaking of that new bottle of "pep" which has just this week put in its appearance on the counters of an F street store. It's called "friction for the bath," and that's just what it is. It's a little "pepper-upper" that's guaranteed to give you all the get-up-and-go you'll need to carry you through a long, hard day. It's an eye-opener that makes the world look positively rosy.

After you emerge from your shower or make your languid way from your tub, you simply take a little in your hand and give yourself a quick rubdown. It leaves the skin smooth and the pores neatly closed—thus preventing any chances for taking cold.

Because it hasn't any suggestion of alluring exoticism about it, and because it has a very lemony twang, it's ideal for the young working girl who knows she must not go to the office reeking of strange and exciting scents.

Just as it perks you up and gives you a sparkle in the morning, it buoys you up on-end in the afternoon. In a way it's a cleanser. If you come home dead tired and dull as the day is long, you simply sprinkle yourself with a bit of friction.

Incidentally, if that "man about the house" swipes it, make him buy you a whole quart bottle. The chances are that after you've tried the small size you'll be coming back for a quart yourself.

Toothpaste for 10 Cents.

A 50-cent tube of a toothpaste which really tastes good enough to eat is selling now for 10 cents. And if you have 10 cents more you can buy a mouthwash of the same flavor.

You'll like both of them with their faint odor and decided taste of mint. By the way, if you have any trouble with Junior about brushing his teeth, just try this toothpaste to make him think molar scrubbing is a gala occasion.

Yellow Gloves Popular.

Every season there comes some new style in gloves. This season Paris stylists have said from now on you'll see yellow gloves; more of them every day.

No sooner said than done. A local store which is quick on the trigger already has some of these dashing models—yellow doeskin gloves, known as the demi-mousqutaires. They add a lively touch to a somber outfit.

Fudge Aprons Useful.

Fudge aprons do their bit toward enabling a hostess to perform her kitchen duties and still look "dressed up." If she's entertaining a group for evening bridge and has to get the sandwiches ready and make the coffee she can tie on a fudge apron and still be a smart model in lace and ruffles.

The aprons are tiny things sufficiently large, however, to protect the front of a dress. They are made of printed batiste, dimity and dotted swiss, and are trimmed in lace or piped in colors. Some of them cost only 59 cents. Others are $1.

Oil Keeps Nails in Shape.

Sometimes it pays to pry around in the interesting toilet goods department of an F street store. The other day we tarried at that section of a counter where you always find an abundance of hand preparations. The newest addition to the large stock was an oil which prevents breaking and splitting of nails.

It also keeps the cuticle soft so that you can push it back without fear that it will become either sore or ragged.

If you want to preserve the health of your nails and keep them in top-notch condition you'll want a small bottle of this preparation.

Liquid Floor Wax.

When floors begin to have a worn and dusty look and no amount of sweeping and mopping restores their sheen, it's time they were gone over and renovated. It isn't necessary to hire some one to get down on hands and knees with rags and wax brushes and rub for hours to secure the desired effect. In the household department of a downtown store is a liquid floor wax which is not only easy to apply, but one of the most effective things of its kind on the market. According to the directions, you simply "apply and let it dry." Your floors will take on a brand new shine that will delight you.

World Court Pictured As First Aid to Peace

Harris & Ewins.

The peace movement, gathering momentum in the last ten years, is now making rapid progress toward world-wide abolition of war. So thinks Mrs. Florence Brewer Boeckel, education director of the National Council for the Prevention of War.

"ADHERING TO THE World Court is the simplest and most obvious thing we can do to recognize world interdependence. And such recognition is essential to world peace."

Thus Mrs. Florence Brewer Boeckel yesterday expressed approval of the Administration's determination to drive World Court adherence through the Senate. Mrs. Boeckel, noted feminist, formerly a journalist, and now education director of the National Council for Prevention of War, has been closely allied with the peace movement since 1921 and has written two books on the subject "Between War and Peace" and "The Turn Toward Peace."

Believing that peace is a necessary first step in the building of a humane and harmonious world civilization, Mrs. Boeckel is convinced it is the only possible foundation for continuous progress and prosperity. In this connection she pointed out that the establishment of world peace is the responsibility of every individual. "Any movement providing for abolition of war is of course of peculiar concern to women," she said, "because of their instinctive horror of anything that involves sacrifice of their sons and husbands."

War a Total Loss, She Says.

She looks upon the peace movement as being closely allied to the woman's movement in that both have been alike a part of the long struggle toward the establishment of the worth of the individual and toward the setting of reason above force in human affairs. She stressed the point, however, that the peace movement is in no sense exclusively a feminine project,

"Men as well as women are coming to realize that war is a total loss to everyone—except those private individuals who derive commercial profit from war. Men as well as women are beginning to realize that the evils of war have become intolerable."

She pointed out that the first peace societies were formed by men early in the nineteenth century when women were not even allowed to speak at public meetings. Even then, however, a few "Olive Leaf Circles" were organized as ladies' auxiliaries to a peace society known as the Universal Brotherhood of Man.

"And, of course, since 1915 when Carrie Chapman Catt and Jane Addams called a convention of women in the interest of peace promotion, an increasing number of women have been working for world peace," said Mrs. Boeckel. "The work of these women has progressed steadily and has gathered many converts in the last decade since, under the leadership of Mrs. Catt, women of 11 of the largest organized groups in the country formed a national committee on the Cause and Cure of War."

The 1935 conference of this committee will open here on January 22. Mrs. Boeckel is enthusiastic about what will be accomplished by that group.

"This, the tenth meeting of the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, will draw women from all parts of the country representing eleven organizations and millions of voting women of this country," she said. "This, within itself, is conclusive evidence of the widespread determination to abolish war. That these organizations have united their forces and in that way multiplied their strength is due to the genius and courage of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt who organized and has directed the conference throughout the 10 years of its existence."

The tenth anniversary conference will also be observed by the placing on sale of a book written by 10 of the leading women of the United States. Entitled "Why Wars Must Cease," this volume is a vigorous indictment of war. Its 10 authors include Mrs. Catt, Mrs. Roosevelt, Mary E. Woolley, Mrs. William Brown Meloney, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Judge Florence E. Allen, Jane Addams, Dr. Alice Hamilton, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, and Mrs. Boeckel.

New Book Coming.

Discussing the contents of this book, Mrs. Boeckel expressed the opinion it would pave the way for a later volume called "Why Wars Will Cease."

"As they undoubtedly will, when the world at large awakes to the fact that nations are interdependent, that the worth of the individual is of prime importance and that there can be no lasting prosperity without lasting peace."

Since she has been education director of the National Council of Prevention of War, Mrs. Boeckel has directed her effort toward bringing the fact of world interdependence home to the individual citizen in terms of his own job and pocketbook in order that public opinion and public policies may be based upon it. Her chapter in the book, "Why Wars Must Cease," deals with the economic chaos resulting from war and is a forceful presentation to the effect the recent depression was a direct result of the last war.

Mrs. Boeckel emphasized the point that war, with its reliance on militarism, looks upon men not as individuals but as means of gaining greater national power at the expense of human sacrifice. "The abolition of war," she said, "is a task not for tomorrow but for today. Its success depends fundamentally upon an increased loyalty to the principles upon which democratic government rests, principles concerned with life values, with human beings as ends in themselves. Adherence of the United States to the World Court would be a recognition of this and a definite move in the direction of world peace."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Treatment of Influenza.

DESPITE a tremendous amount of study and investigation, no plan of conferring immunity against influenza has as yet been developed. This means that no vaccine or serum has been prepared that will successfully protect against the disease.

The management of the condition is all important. Good nursing care is essential, and the patient should be confined to a room with free ventilation. The bed clothing should rest as lightly as possible on the body, since the very weight of heavy blankets on chest and abdomen may increase fatigue and be a factor in raising the temperature. Should the fever be high, sponging with tepid water, to which a little alcohol has been added, is restful and comforting. If the patient is inclined to perspire care should be taken to keep the body dry and thus prevent chilling.

Liquids must be taken freely and frequently except when the patient is resting, and food should be given preferably in liquid form. For the three or four days of the acute attack it is not necessary to force the patient to eat. Forced feeding is sometimes responsible for an increase in severity of intestinal symptoms. If vomiting is persistent, nothing should be given by mouth, unless fruit juices; weak tea or water are easily retained. Should vomiting continue, fluid in the form of a 5 per cent solution of glucose, or normal salt solution, may be administered by rectum.

In most cases bronchial symptoms are present and in some pneumonia complicates the picture. It is frequently a wise precaution at the beginning of any case of influenza to saturate the air of the room with moisture and to keep it saturated. To a kettle of boiling water compound tincture of benzoin, or menthol, may be added for this purpose.

Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, of Winnetka, Ill., president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, will speak on the "Among Women" program of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs at 1:15 o'clock tomorrow over station WRC.

Mrs. Langworthy, widely known in education circles, will present the layman's viewpoint in education. She was president of the Chicago P.-T. A. and of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers for four years.

* * * *

The department of education will be in charge of the January meeting of the local federation at 10:30 o'clock January 28 at Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Mrs. Veerhoff will present Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, widow of the former secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who will give an illustrated lecture on "Wild Flowers."

January Book Review.

MRS. ARTHUR VAN HAGAN will present her January book review of "World Events as Reflected in Current Literature" at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Wardman Park Hotel. She will review "Challenge: Behind the Face of Japan," by Upton Close, and "Soldiers What Next," by Katherine Mayo. In addition to these two timely books, Mrs. Van Hagan will speak briefly about a number of the new novels.

Nu Alpha Chapter of Kappa Delta Phi Sorority will officiate at the installation of Nu Beta Chapter tonight in the Pan-American Room of the Mayflower Hotel. A formal dinner will precede the ceremony. Charter members of the newly formed chapter are Virginia Fox, Helen Little, Cecil Keats, Winifred Corwin, Hilda Eyerman, Helen Lewis and Eleanor Robinett.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: You may think you are being swamped by letters from me—but it could be a lot worse! Almost every day something in your column strikes a responsive chord in me. There was the letter from "Reader" the other day, complaining because she didn't want to waste time and thought on her appearance.

* * * *

I used to feel the same way until I got desperately tired of having persons (even—and particularly—intelligent and discriminating persons) dismiss me with a glance as a sweet, dumb little thing. The classification reacted on me until I was about to become just that. Then I decided to take a scientific attitude toward the problem, and am rapidly approaching the solution.

* * * *

It doesn't take much time or energy to develop and maintain a reputation for smart gowning—nor much money, either, which is more of a consideration with me than it seemed to be with "Reader."

All it takes is a system, and the secret is consistency. It's really a lot of fun, once you convince yourself it really is worth while. Sincerely, Y. M.

Simplicity Important.

DEAR Y. M.: Your experience with the part which clothes play in classifying the woman; even, in a measure, in molding her personality, should prove a valuable object lesson to "Reader."

* * * *

I agree with you that the secret of acquiring and maintaining the reputation and appearance of being a woman invariably well groomed and attractive, lies in being consistent and systematic in the care of one's self and in the assembling of one's wardrobe.

* * * *

A successful wardrobe cannot be achieved without a certain cash expenditure, of course; but creative interest is the primary requirement. The very necessity to practice economy can result, if wisely adapted, in a really smart wardrobe.

* * * *

Simplicity is ever the keynote of real distinction, and the woman whose selections are circumscribed by her income or the contents of her purse, must eliminate useless ornament. And that is in her favor. She learns, too, that investment in good merchandise is the greatest economy. Unable to keep pace with all of fashion's extreme fads and fleeting whimsies, she falls back—with great style profit—into the class of the conservatively gowned.

* * * *

Finally, she arrives at an understanding of the underlying meaning of the term "style" as applied to woman's dress. And that is a subtle interpretation, through gowning, of the personality and mode of life of the wearer. M. H.

Slip Can Enhance or Destroy Beauty and Symmetry of Gown

Pattern No. 702.

THE effect of many a fine gown is ruined because of an ill-fitting slip. A good slip fits with such smoothness that its existence underneath a dress can not be detected. And here is an unusually good slip! It may be made with a built-up or a camisole top.

This pattern may be used now for slips to wear under winter frocks. Then put it aside and use it later for sheer and summery things. It provides for a shadow-proof hem. And it is an equally good design for either cotton or silk. Designed in sizes 32 to 48. Size 36, with camisole top and without shadow-proof hem, requires 2⅞ yards of 35-inch or 39-inch fabric.

Psychologists in Schools Urged by Julia Jaffray

System Would Prevent Growth of Crime, Says Welfare Expert.

ONE OF THE BUSIEST, most alert women at the mid-winter board meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs is Miss Julia K. Jaffray, of New York. As chairman of the federation's committee on public welfare she is actively interested in everything from police systems to Indians, from handicapped adults to problem children.

While she chatted yesterday about her work she jumped from subject to subject, offering a remedy for every ill. But before she had talked more than a few minutes in rapid, staccato style, it became apparent that her chief interest is centered in crime prevention.

"Two things are necessary if we want to prevent crime," said Miss Jaffray. "First, there must be a close organization of all the agencies in the community so their efforts will be coordinated. As it is now a good many youthful offenders slip between agencies. Second, we must have better methods for social adjustment of children before they develop into problem children. I hope the time will come when every school has a trained psychologist on its staff. It's no use to put more burdens on the teachers. But by adding psychologists the country will save money in the long run."

The conversation turned to jails and prisons. Said Miss Jaffray:

Condemns County Jails.

"The county jail is one of the worst seats of crime in the United States. That's where all types and ages are herded together. I've known of cases where witnesses were put in with offenders. What we need are State controlled farms. Then instead of sentencing a person to jail, sentence him to the farm."

For State prisons Miss Jaffray recommended a middle course between present coddling and cruelty. Almost all prisons err on one side or the other, she said. She believes insufficient money is being spent on the supervision of parole and probation; that the majority of prisoners given parole or put on probation are unwisely selected.

"Parole is all right. I believe in it," she said. "But it's unfortunate that bad selection has been allowed to govern it. I suppose it all goes back to weak personnel. We must raise the qualifications for everybody from policemen to probation officers. We need trained police forces. We need probation officers who are capable of developing better technique in supervision. And we must take the profits out of the State prison systems."

Suggests Licensing Plan.

Miss Jaffray then plunged into a discussion of her plan for taking care of handicapped adults. She hopes to put through a licensing system so that many persons now considered unemployable will be able to fill certain jobs under the NRA.

"This licensing system will take care of many who will be thrown upon their own resources when the Federal work-relief program goes into effect," she explained. "Institutions and subsistence homesteads will absorb the others."

Miss Jaffray is convinced that the Government market should be allocated to include the handicapped as well as prison labor and those industries whose whole output is for the Government. "The market is plenty large enough for all three groups," she said.

Miss Jaffray paused. But she wasn't through yet. "Another thing," she went on. "We should have more thorough examinations for those applying for automobile licenses. Mechanical tests aren't enough. We need personality tests, too. Then we could weed out the neurotics and others who help to make our traffic fatalities a disgrace. Connecticut has already tried personality tests. They've been a success. We ought to have them all over the country."

Verdict Announced in Puns.

A suspended sentence containing two puns was pronounced recently in a Brooklyn magistrate's court. In deciding the case of a man arrested in a cemetery for public intoxication, the magistrate said:

"It is a grave situation to be found intoxicated in a cemetery. In the future stay away from spirits, my man. Suspended."

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

WHEN MOTHER said to the 5-year-old, "Jimmy, would you like some nice tomato soup for supper?" Jimmy answered vehemently, "No."

"Then how about some milk toast?"

"No, I don't want milk toast."

"Well, suppose I give you some peanut butter sandwiches?"

Again the answer was a decided negative. On and on the questioning went, through creamed carrots, poached egg, toasted bacon sandwiches and baked macaroni.

"Then what would you like for supper?" Mother asked with a patience worthy of Job.

"Cookies," Jimmy answered decisively. And then the argument began. "You can't have just cookies. You must have something else. What shall it be?" But nothing but cookies would suit young Jimmy.

We want children to learn to make their own decisions, in matters on which they have attained sufficient judgment, but food is not the place to start. If it is temptingly prepared and Jimmy is healthy, he will eat whatever is set before him. When you ask him if he'd like this, that and the other dish, he is not expressing a preference; he is simply taking advantage of the opportunity you have given him to say "No!"

Thin Dressing Brings Out Real Flavor of Salad

By Dorothea Duncan.

LETTUCE and cherries, a simple dish to set before a king, but it pleased King Henry VIII of England so greatly that he conferred a special reward upon the gardener who first devised the combination.

Lettuce was first known in England in 1520 and was called by the peculiar name of "cos lettuce" or romaine. The word cos no doubt was applied to any green, because the plant was found on the Island of Cos now Stanchio in the Aegean Sea. This island is noteworthy as the birthplace of Hippocrates and several other famous men of ancient Greece. Romaine has long since replaced the term "cos lettuce" in England because it is more pleasing to the ear and definitely describes one of the many salad plants in frequent use today.

The salad plant probably found its way to England by a round about route, first being introduced into Italy and then into France. At least, the title romaine has a feeling of the French, and even today the French pride themselves upon the salads they achieve and the dressings they make. French dressing, a mixture of salad oil, vinegar and condiments, stands out as a prime favorite in this country and is second only to mayonnaise as an accompaniment for greens.

Thin Dressing Superior.

The term salad as it stands today is a far cry from a simple plate of crisp, green leaves that bore the name 100 years ago. What has America done to the salad? Merely this, she has drowned the honest green leaf in a blanket of fruit, fish, meat or vegetables and smothered them both with a heavy dressing which completely obliterates the flavor of both. This seems to be the greatest of the two crimes, the heavy helping of dressing.

If the salad green is to be really enjoyed for its own merits, it should be served, uncovered and seasoned lightly, only enough to bring out the hidden flavor of the plant. A thin dressing is far superior to a heavy one for a real salad.

There isn't the ghost of a reason why leftovers, fruit, vegetables, etc., can't be made into attractive dishes with the little help furnished by crisp lettuce and a smart dressing. Don't forget that a plain salad of greens will work wonders for your menus, and can stand on its own merits as well as the lettuce leaf piled high with pineapple and cream cheese and crowned with mayonnaise.

The rules for seasoning a salad, whether it is a plain lettuce leaf or a fancy concoction are primarily the same—never submerge the real flavor of your salad with too much dressing, add just enough to enhance the flavor of the foods you have used in combination or alone.

Salad of Mixed Greens.

If you are ever in doubt as to what salad to serve with your dinner, you can almost always rely upon this simple one of mixed greens. Rub the sides of a wooden bowl with the cut side of a clove of garlic. Then add your mixed greens, chicory, endive, watercress and lettuce. The greens should always be fresh, crisp and clean. A wilted salad is never appreciated and denotes a careless cook. If the greens by chance have become wilted, freshen them by permitting them to remain in cold water for a time. Keeping them too long in the cold water may have a tendency to make them slimy, so guard against this. Serve the salad from the same bowl, and at the last minute before serving mix lightly with a fork as you add a little French dressing.

Home Making Drive Planned By Federation

WHILE the Government seeks to provide houses for its citizens, the club women of the nation have undertaken the task of converting these houses into homes.

With this end in view the American home department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will start this spring a series of county home makers' councils to study consumers' problems and also the means whereby harmonious and happy family life may be promoted in the thousands of new houses to take shape under the housing program.

Plans for these councils were outlined by Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, of Chicago, chairman of the department of the American home in her annual report made yesterday at the meeting of the board of directors of the federation.

Mrs. Seymour emphasized the need of women's clubs throughout the Nation working to make childhood "safe and happy."

"Surely child marriages must be stopped," she said. "Walkathons must be prohibited. Narcotics and intemperance must be stamped out and child labor must cease. No woman with a mother heart can sleep while these degrading things prevent the goodly heritage to which all children are entitled.

"Every club in this land should have a home making program which will stir the nation. And this should result in action which will sweep away the barriers to the honorable and glorious fulfillment of life's noble purpose—a good child in a good home."

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

IF JANUARY 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

On this January 17 hastily spoken words are in danger of being misinterpreted, so it will be advisable to be cautious regarding what you say, as well as careful of your diction. Discounts may prove an important factor in closing business deals where there is close trading. You might find to your sorrow, should you be tempted to believe in a literal Santa Claus, that the kind-hearted person who offers you something for nothing has his heart incased in a coating of steel. There is an excellent possibility of your receiving money on this date, and there is also a good likelihood of your losing it if you indulge in a game of chance.

If a woman and January 17 is your birthday, you are blessed with a temperament which enables you to keep your equilibrium under the most trying circumstances. Your coolheadedness will probably prove of great value throughout your married or commercial life. You have a gift for successfully handling people, especially children. Life is probably going to be full of good fortune for you. If you will have faith your every need will be met in an unexpected manner. Teaching, lecturing, demonstrating and writing should offer congenial lines of employment. Should you marry, your home life should be very happy.

If a man and January 17 is your natal day, your motto probably is: "Slow, but sure," which, with your tenacity, combined with ambition, will probably enable you to achieve your goal. Drawing or painting, education lawork, architecture, literature as well as the legal profession, offer a suitable choice for one of your ability from which to select a career.

Woman's Club Fights Change In School Rule

Chevy Chase Group Goes on Record on District Education Issue.

Three resolutions calling for the maintenance of Montgomery County and District of Columbia social service and children's agencies on a nonpartisan basis were adopted yesterday by the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md.

The first, which cited the nonpartisan operation of the District public school system at present, contained a protest against placing the Board of Education under the control of the District Commissioners.

The club requested the board of Montgomery County Commissioners to appoint a qualified social worker for the position of supervisor of county aid if that position is to be filled. It was vacated recently by the resignation of Mrs. Walter Perry, who recommended that the position be abolished.

The other resolution placed the club on record as approving the retention of the juvenile court in Montgomery County. This action was taken because of reports that it might be curtailed or eliminated.

Will Act On Scholarships.

A special committee on the study of scholarships, headed by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, reported in favor of awarding an annual scholarship to a young woman residing in the Chevy Chase postoffice area, or the daughter of a club member of three years' standing who may live outside this limit.

A vote will be taken on this plan at the club meeting on February 13. At present a $250 annual scholarship is given for use in the freshman year.

The club voted yesterday to allot 10 cents per member (amounting to over $50) to the county federation scholarship loan fund.

A nominating committee, including Mrs. Jesse E. Swigart, chairman; Miss Emma Hays Heck, Mrs. W. L. Orem, jr., Mrs. Marvin Farrington and Mrs. Loyd H. Sutton, was appointed to prepare the 1935-1936 slate of nominees.

There was an exhibition of water colors by Mrs. Fred E. Keplinger, member of the club and of the Washington Water Color Society.

Miss Lenroot Speaks.

Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, recently appointed chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, spoke on "Child Labor and Juvenile Employment." She urged the members of the club to work for approval by the Maryland Legislature this year of the proposed national child labor amendment, which, she said, would perpetuate the gains made in that direction by the NRA codes.

Guests of honor at the meeting were Mrs. Richard M. McClure, of Chicago, chairman of motion pictures for the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Charles F. Owens, of Norristown, Pa., her assistant, and Mrs. George E. Pariseau, president of the Woman's Club of Bethesda.

Seven new members were elected, Mrs. J. Robert Bryant, jr., Mrs. Emma F. Starrett, Mrs. Joseph Proske, Mrs. Benjamin Hugh Bennett, Mrs. O. Leland Hunt, Mrs. Carl G. Tilman and Mrs. Thomas M. Ross.

Soldier Given Hero's Medal

Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commander of the Third Corps Area, pins the Soldier's Medal for Heroism on Private William Hone, 18, who saved a comrade from drowning in the Potomac River. The citation was made yesterday at Fort Washington.

Young Soldier Is Decorated For Hero's Act

Malone Awards Medal to Private Who Rescued Comrade in River.

An infantry battalion stood at attention and a bugle corps blared its salute to a hero yesterday at Fort Washington as Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commander of the Third Corps Area, decorated Private William Hone, 18, for saving the life of a comrade.

Pinning the Soldier's Medal on Hone's overcoat lapel, Maj. Gen. Malone extended him official congratulations for the rescue of Private Christie Hoffman, 20, from the Potomac River last August 5.

Communiques released by Col. J. Graesche Ord, commander of the Fort, pointed out that the medal was granted by the War Department for heroism displayed in Hone's jumping from a harbor boat into the darkness and fog that covered the river shortly after midnight of August 4.

Fell Asleep, Awoke in River.

Private Hoffmann, a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., said he fell asleep on the lower aft deck of the boat, as it neared the fort on a return trip from Washington, and awoke in the water. The statement of Private Hone, a native of Brownsville, Pa., to his superior officers, read:

"When Private Hoffman fell overboard, I wasn't aware of the fact until I heard some one cry for help. I was standing on the lower aft deck. I jumped into the water, and at the same time called for a life ring.

"I didn't see Private Hoffman at first, but swam toward the sound of his voice. Then the boat light was flashed on him. Just after I hit the water a life ring was thrown to me and I swam to Hoffman.

Boat Drifts Away.

"I got him on one side of the life ring and started to swim toward the boat, pulling the ring. The boat was drifting away, and then the front end swung toward us. We swam to it and the line was thrown. Hoffman and myself were pulled aboard."

Officials at the fort said the rescue was made under difficult conditions, as the river was covered with a heavy fog.

The official citation, read at the parade formation, declared that the medal was given Private Hone, who enlisted in the Army March 7, 1934, "for heroism displayed in rescuing a soldier from drowning in the Potomac River, August 5, 1934."

When the harbor boat Gen. D. H. Rucker was being docked at Fort Washington, Md., a soldier fell from the freight deck of the steamer. Hearing cries for help, Private Hone as passenger, with complete disregard of personal danger, jumped overboard and succeeded in reaching the soldier and bringing him to a place of safety."

Prince Georges Fund Boosted

$25,000 Is Asked of State for Volunteer Fire and Rescue Squads.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Passage of a bill in the Maryland Legislature authorizing an appropriation of $25,000 for the volunteer fire companies and rescue squads in Prince Georges County will be urged by the Volunteer Firemen's Association of the county, it was learned here today.

Such an allotment would be $11,500 greater than the $13,500 granted the county fire fighters last year, it was explained by Noah Joffe, member of the legislative committee of the association, in a conference with the Prince Georges County delegation of the House of Delegates.

The legislators will be asked to incorporate in the proposed bill provision for giving each company a definite allotment, as well as granting a stipulated sum to each of the rescue squad units. Under the present law, the total appropriation is distributed by the board of directors of the association, as it deems advisable. The board is composed of officers of the association, together with the three youngest past presidents.

Tax Problem Is Attacked On 2 Fronts

Gov. Nice and Senators Suggest New Means of Revenue.

Move Starts to Reduce the State's Share of Relief Burden.

By Laurance F. Stuntz
(Post Staff Correspondent).

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Maryland's tax problem was attacked on two fronts today as an attempt was initiated to reduce the State's share of the relief burden, and Gov. Harry W. Nice and Senators suggested new sources of revenue.

Gov. Nice in a message to the Legislature suggested a State income tax, and increased inheritance, race-bet and corporation taxes. Senators proposed taxes on beer and luxuries. A third proposal was to finance relief with a bond issue, devoting gas tax revenues to amortization of the debentures.

Senator J. Allan Coad, Democratic floor leader and chairman of the finance committee, will go to Washington Monday to see if Marylands' allotment of $8,000,000 of the relief load can not be lightened. Several weeks ago Federal authorities offered $10,000,000 of Federal funds if the State would provide $8,000,000 more. Since then, President Roosevelt has proposed changes in the method of relief, giving foundation for a belief here that the Federal Government might be satisfied with a smaller State share in the relief bill.

Opposes Sales Tax.

Gov. Nice opposed a sales tax, saying that "it operates disproportionately upon those least able to bear it." Such a tax, he said, should be imposed only as a last resort. He added he estimated that the emergency budget for the remainder of this year would be $8,529,000 and that $11,050,000 would be needed for each of the next two years, in addition to the regular budget.

The Governor suggested that the tax on race bets be increased from 1 per cent to 7½ per cent. The $3,000 daily license fee for race meets would be reduced to $2,000 and the 15 per cent tax on gross receipts of the tracks would be repealed. This, he estimates, would yield an additional $1,215,000.

A State income tax would be possible without amending the Constitution, the Governor declared. At the rate of 2 per cent, under the Federal income tax regulations, it would yield about $5,000,000 per year. Employes of the State and counties would have to pay the tax on their incomes. A sliding inheritance tax scale, from 5 per cent on estates less than $25,000 to 10 per cent on those above $200,000, would bring in about $500,000. Increased gross receipts taxes on public utilities and insurance and guaranty companies would add an additional $1,300,000.

Bills embodying these suggestions will be introduced tomorrow. Together they will bring in about $9,000,000 more per year. Gov. Nice said that later he will propose other revenue sources to bring the total up to the amount required for the next two years.

"Steam Railroads."

The phrase "steam railroads" in the tax act will also be stricken out by a suggested amendment so that the newly electrified Pennsylvania Railroad will not escape its usual payment to the State.

Two perennial bills, which are introduced every session and always provoke a good fight, made their appearance here today as the General Assembly filled its legislature hopper and got down to business. One of the bills will open the Potomac River to oyster dredgers. It was introduced by Senator Harry T. Phoebus (Republican), of Somerset, in reprisal for the arrest of several of his constituents who were taking oysters near their homes. The law now allows tonging for oysters in the Potomac, but not dredging. A similar bill was introduced last session and was defeated by the filibuster conducted by Senator J. Allan Coad (Democrat), of St. Marys.

The other measure repeals Maryland's whipping-post law. Frank J. Hirt (Democrat), of Baltimore City, introduced the same law last session, but it was not passed. The Maryland statute allows a wife-beater to be sentenced to not more than 40 lashes, but such a sentence has been only made once in the last five years.

The beer tax, levied in a bill introduced by Senator Milton L. Veasey (Democrat), of Worcester, would amount to $1 per barrel. It would yield about $1,250,000 per year, Senator Veasey said. He predicted that the brewers would absorb it, as it amounts to only about .3 of a cent per bottle. It applies to beer sold in county dispensaries as well as to ordinary sales.

The bond issue for relief needs was sponsored by Senator Joseph L. Donovan (Democrat), of Howard, who proposes $16,000,000 issue of 4 per cent ten-year bonds. Interest charges would be met from the gas tax revenues, while funding would amount to about $1,000,000 per year. Use of the gas tax for interest would curtail road building by about 20 per cent, he estimated he conceived his plan, he said, chiefly because he is so strongly opposed to a sales tax.

Another pair of bills, introduced simultaneously in the House and Senate, will make "Maryland, My Maryland" the official State song. If the bills are passed, the approved words will go duly into the statute books. The tune now holds its position as the Free State anthem only unofficially.

Meanwhile, Republican Senators were planning to protest against the office space given them. Eleven of them were assigned to the Senate minority room and they were deprived of the messenger usually allowed the minority.

After two weeks of careful consideration and weighing of counterclaims, committee assignments in the Senate and House of Delegates were made here today by the presiding officers of the two chambers.

In the Senate, J. Allan Coad (Democrat), St. Marys, becomes chairman of the finance committee and majority floor leader. Kent R. Mullikin (Democrat), Prince Georges, will head the House Ways and Means Committee, which carries with it the House floor leadership. These are the two major committees, passing on all financial bills.

Other Chairmen.

Chairmen of other Senate committees are: Joseph L. Donovan (Democrat), Howard, judiciary; Ridgley P. Melvin (Democrat), Anne Arundel, education; Stedman Prescott (Democrat), Montgomery, militia and retrenchment in State expenses in the House.

Charles C. Marbury (Democrat), Prince Georges, was appointed to head the committee on grand inquest. This assignment, not ordinarily important, promises to occupy the limelight this session. Gov. Nice has asked authority to appoint a committee to investigate certain State expenditures. It is expected that the Democratic Legislature will point out that they already have an investigating committee and refer the matter to Delegate Marbury's committee.

One of Montgomery's fusion delegates was also named to a committee, but it is one that has not met since 1901. Walter M. Magruder was named to the currency committee.

Among other assignments were T. Yellott Canby (Democrat), Montgomery, House roads and highways; Miss Ruth E. Shoemaker (Democrat), Montgomery, House education; R. Shirley Hays (Democrat), Montgomery, House agriculture; Egbert F. Tingley (Democrat), Prince Georges, House education, agriculture, roads and highways; John S. White (Democrat), Prince Georges, judicial proceedings, Chesapeake Bay and tributaries; L. Harold Southoron (Democrat), Prince Georges, House committee on amendments to the constitution.

Senator Vernon Cooksey (Democrat), Charles, civil service and election reform, Federal relations, fish and game, library, printed bills and printing; Charles V. Hayden (Democrat), St. Marys, House ways and means, education; A. J. Omax (Republican), St. Marys, House Chesapeake Bay and tributaries, and Rudolph B. Carrico (Democrat), Charles, House judicial proceedings.

Martinsburg Police Chief Dies at Desk

Lieut. Reeves, Victim of Plane Crash, to Have Annapolis Rites.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Capt. O. T. Wilson, 56, chief of police in Martinsburg for the past five years, dropped dead of a heart attack at his desk in the City Hall here this afternoon as he was questioning a juvenile. Though he had not been in good health, he had had no warning of the heart attack.

He had served as police chief continuously since the advent of Mayor Chris H. Daily's administration five years ago. He took personal pride in his efforts to apply the "golden rule" in treatment of persons before him and in trials of cases, and told newspapermen not an hour before he died that at least half the juvenile delinquents to come before him had been reclaimed.

His jovial disposition was an outstanding characteristic. He conducted a grocery store here before becoming chief of police. In earlier years he was an active fraternalist, particularly as a Red Man; in much demand as a public speaker; active in church affairs, and a member of Martinsburg Monarch Club. He was a native of this city.

Surviving are the widow, formerly Miss Minnie B. Clark, this city; a daughter, Miss Virginia Wilson; a brother, Harry D. Wilson; two sisters, Mrs. Minnie B. Pearrall and Mrs. Lizzie E. Moats, all of this city.

Funeral arrangements had not been made this evening.

Reeves Burial Scheduled.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—The body of Lieut. William C. Reeves, Army aviator, killed in a crash on the West Coast a few weeks ago, will be brought to Annapolis and buried in the Naval Cemetery January 23, it was learned today.

Lieut. Reeves was the son of Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief of the United States fleet. Admiral Reeves will attend the funeral.

Services for Mrs. Trenary.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Funeral services were conducted here today for Mrs. Jessie Hillyard Trenary, 51, who for 20 years conducted a paint and paper store in this city.

She was the widow of Samuel W. Trenary, who died of a heart attack in their store a few months ago. She is survived by one sister, Miss Bessie Hillyard, of Winchester; one brother, Garner B. Hillyard, of Baltimore, and one step-daughter, Miss Beulah Trenary, of Winchester.

Mrs. Henson's Rites Today.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be conducted at Bunker Hill, this county, tomorrow morning, with interment there, for Mrs. Ella Henson, 88, widow of James W. Henson, who died at her home in Bunker Hill Tuesday morning.

She leaves one brother, Luther Pultz, of Tiffin, Ohio; a half-sister, Mrs. Frank Wheeler, Erie, Mich., and a half-brother, Mason Pultz, of Bowling Green, Ky.

Mrs. Stell Is Dead.

Social and Club Notes
Of Towns and Cities in Nearby States

By Elisabeth C. Taylor.

Far from being a dead season for garden clubs, this is the time when they are all planning the things to be done in the spring and summer flower shows.

In Hagerstown, the home of one of the most active garden clubs, at the January meeting which will be held on the last Tuesday of the month, the club members will plan the shows and arrangements to be exhibited in June.

During the winter months they have not been idle. November and December largely were devoted to the making and arranging of winter bouquets for home decoration. In the past few years the Hagerstown club has made and sold Christmas wreaths. The object of the making of these wreaths was to teach the professional makers to use only the materials available under the instructions of the conservation committee which forbids the use of such evergreens as holly, laurel and ground pine.

This year the club felt that their work was done in their district, and on the invitation of the clubs of Shepherdstown, Chambersburg, Frederick, Hancock and Mount Airy, went to those cities and demonstrated the making of the wreaths according to specification.

Mrs. Thomas Harding, president of the Garden Club, is beginning to arrange for the spring luncheon which will take place in February. At the luncheon there will be table decorations of flowers forced by members of the club.

Yesterday the Junior Women's Club of Martinsburg, W. Va., held a meeting at 7:30 p. m. in the club rooms. The program, under the direction of Miss Isabel Harrison, was "Home Talent."

The play which was to have been presented on Thursday evening by the Potomac Players of Hagerstown, Md., has been postponed until January 31. This play, entitled "An American Dream," was to have been presented as three one-act plays, each showing the characters in a different generation. Due to the difficulty in arranging the presentation, the manager, Miss Anna Katherine Roulette, has decided to give the play at a later date.

The Urbana Women's Club presented the ever popular civics program at a meeting on Thursday. The hostess of the meeting was Mrs. William Oden.

Mrs. Boyd Williams was the leader of a meeting of the Vanclevesville (W. Va.) Women's Club held Thursday in the Community Hall. Miss Mary Van Metre was the alternate leader.

The Women's Club of New Market, Md., met Thursday under the leadership of Miss Hilda Etzler. Miss Helen Pearson addressed the members.

Mrs. Bowyer Fout will act as hostess to the Braddock Women's Club Friday. The program, under the leadership of Mrs. Paul Roderick, will be a discussion of fine arts. Miss Daisy Bast is in charge of the entertainment.

In a recent meeting, the Berkeley County Farm Women's Bureau, meeting with the presidents and secretaries of the constituent clubs, planned their program of work for 1935 and appointed chairmen of the committees for the year as follows: Mrs. Jenning Ashton, Spring Mills, horse; Mrs. Fenton Gall, Pikeside, health; Mrs. William Dean, Bunker Hill, schools; Mrs. Franklin Clapham, Vanclevesville, West Virginia committee; Mrs. Harry Mish, Bunker Hill, music; Miss Dorothy Small, Tuscarora, recreation; Mrs. Frederick Metze, Spring Mills, citizenship; Mrs. William Snyder, Berkeley, parliamentarian, and Mrs. W. Holliday, Swan Pond, welfare.

Mrs. Hopkins President.

Fredericksburg, Va.—Mrs. Ray C. Hopkins was elected president of the auxiliary of Abaca Grotto at the first anniversary meeting of the order.

Other officers elected were Mrs. A. B. Young, first vice president; Mrs. J. L. Pyne, second vice president; Mrs. L. H. Jackson, third vice president; Mrs R. C. Pearson, treasurer; Mrs. C. H. Richardson, secretary.

Miss Handakas to Wed.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—A marriage license has been issued here to George Katranis, merchant of Frostburg, Md., and Miss Marope N. Handakas, now of Martinsburg.

Both are natives of Greece and are to be married here Sunday by a Greek Orthodox priest.

To Hold Card Party.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 16.—Mrs. Henry Burroughs, of Chaptico, president of the Margaret Brent High School P.-T. A., announces the association will hold a card party at the school on the evening of February 1.

ABC Policy Critic Asked For Remedy

Board Member Replies to Border Dispensary Allegations.

Frazier Denies Vision of Big Trade From West Virginia.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 16 (AP).—United States District Judge George W. McClintic, critic of policies of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, today was called upon to offer suggestions for "the administration of an act designed to reduce lawlessness and promote temperance."

This request was contained in a letter written to the judge by T. McCall Frazier, a member of the ABC Board, whose residence is in Bluefield, on the West Virginia border. The letter followed a statement made here earlier in the day by S. Heth Tyler, chairman of the board, denying the implications drawn from remarks Judge McClintic was quoted as making in charging a grand jury yesterday.

Mr. Frazier, in his letter made public here, quoted statements attributed to the judge, that "greed for gold" had prompted the board to violate the Constitution of the United States for the benefit of Virginia and that it had strung stores along the border, "knowing that 90 per cent of the patronage will come from West Virginians."

Foresight Disclaimed.

Asserting that he would not dare to question the sincerity of Judge McClintic's purpose and that he preferred cooperation to criticism, Mr. Frazier said: "You will pardon the statement that you are in error in stating that this board knew that 90 per cent of the sales made in the Bluefield, Va., store would be made to West Virginians. We did not have such foresight, and had no reason to believe that we would, through that store, take away from the bootleggers of your State so much of their business."

He added that ten Virginia counties touch West Virginia, but that stores have been established in only five of these and that some of these are more than 25 miles from the border.

"Not being a constitutional lawyer," Mr. Frazier continued, "I will appreciate it if you will advise me of the section of the Federal Constitution we have violated in establishing a dispensary under the laws of Virginia in Virginia. We are endeavoring to promote among our people a respect for both the Federal and State constitutions as well as for all laws. Certainly we would not knowingly violate any provisions of the Constitution, even through our most effective weapon against bootleggers and moonshiners along the borders of our State."

Suggestions Solicited.

Asking Judge McClintic for any suggestions he might have as to how the Virginia liquor control law might be made more effective, Mr. Frazier said the jurist probably would agree that cooperation of law-abiding and self-respecting citizens is needed to solve the problem. He added: "Constructive criticism is always helpful; destructive criticism and baseless insinuations we will always have from those opposed to any form of control."

Maj. Tyler, in his earlier statement had asserted that:

1. West Virginia, called dry by the Federal judge, has voted to abolish its prohibition law, effective March 1.

2. Virginia is furnishing controlled legal liquor, by popular demand in a section where this State had experienced much difficulty with illicit liquor imported from West Virginia.

3. Examination of the A. B. C. Board's accounts "would not indicate a greed for gold," and since there is no provision of the United States Constitution being violated, the board feels "that the controlled sale of legal liquor is better than the uncontrolled sale of illicit liquor."

Miller Services Today.

Waynesboro, Pa. Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at Jacob's Church, south of here, for A. Wesley Miller, 59, well-known Washington township farmer, who died of a paralysis stroke suffered while stepping out of his automobile here Monday afternoon.

Pact Attacks Stir Warning Of New War

Substitution of New Clauses Called Only Solution.

College Park, Md., Jan. 16 (AP).—Sir Herbert Ames, former financial director of the League of Nations secretariat, today said that "any attempts to rearrange the provisions of the Treaty of Versaille through force will mean another war."

"The way to revise the treaty is to take one grievance after another and substitute new pacts on each subject," he asserted.

He pointed out that this was the policy of both France and Germany until the death of Gustave Stresemann and Aristide Briand, and the subsequent policy of the Hitler regime.

Hitler, Sir Herbert said, tried a policy of threat instead of negotiation "until he found the policy was creating a solidarity of nations against him." The peaceful outcome of the Saar vote, he pointed out as an indication of the German leader's change of policy.

Sir Herbert attributed France's opposition to Germany's original entrance into the League of Nations to the failure to materialize of President Wilson's protocol assuring France of support in the event of an attack.

"France felt she had been tricked when the United States did not come into the league," Sir Herbert said.

Germany's entrance into the league in 1926 he characterized as "the greatest reconciliation of nations in history." He expressed the hope that the provisions of the treaties of Locarno might be fulfilled by the return of Germany to the league.

Sir Herbert was a member of the Canadian Parliament before serving on the league. He is now on an international tour sponsored by the Carnegie Fund. At the University of Maryland he is making a survey of educational matters brought here by the committee on nonresident lecturers.

Fire Company Plans to Fete Its 50th Year

Charlottesville Unit Will Hold an Anniversary Banquet Tomorrow.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl).—The fiftieth anniversary banquet of the Charlottesville Volunteer Fire Company will be held at the fire house on Friday evening.

Guests of the local company will be Edward Lamb, of Clifton Forge, president of the State Firemen's Association, and members of the executive committee of that body, which will hold a meeting here that afternoon.

The Charlottesville Hose, Hook and Ladder Company was organized July 24, 1885, when a number of citizens met at the office of Frank Gilmer, local attorney.

The first officers of the company were: Fire marshal, C. H. Harman; commander, Frank Gilmer; chief engineer, Thomas J. Williams; first warden, Lew Wood; second warden, J. B. Wood; third warden, A. D. Payne; secretary, Robert H. Wood; treasurer, Richard W. Duke.

Eight charter members of the company are living today. They are William C. Webb, J. B. Wood, Marion C. Thomas, A. D. Payne, W. J. Keller and George Marshall, all of this city; R. R. Case, now residing in Buckingham County, and Edward A. Balz, of Fork Union, Fluvanna County.

The committee on arrangements for the banquet is headed by Chief Charles H. Page, the other members being S. H. Florence and W. Ben Jarman. The banquet committee is composed of James E. Baker, chairman; H. Cooper Gleason and Garland C. Gum.

$2,100,867 Resources Of Four Virginia Banks

Luray, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Four national banks of this county—the Page Valley and the First National at Luray, the Farmers and Merchants at Stanley, and the Shenandoah National Bank, Shenandoah—according to recent statements have resources amounting to $2,100,867.55.

The largest report is shown by the Page Valley National Bank, which Cashier E. C. Berrey says has resources amounting to $996,287.87. Trailing the Page National Bank is the First National Bank, Luray, with $666,307.26.

In Anticipation of Reorganization, the Belasco Closes After Three-Week Season

New Client Bid Is Now Planned By Art Society

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The shadows of the past reach into the present.

I mean to say that following two and a half years of darkness, the Belasco Theater, after only a meager three weeks of operation, under the auspices of the Belasco Art Theater Society, last night closed its doors again for an indefinite period.

It is the assumption, as well as the contention of those most vitally concerned, that the Art Theater Society will resume its altruistic course in due process of time, after necessary reorganization and the expert adjustment to economic conditions of the dictates of art and the box office.

This is a consummation, like others that have been illustriously celebrated, devoutly to be wished.

As has been the contention of this department from the outset, the National Capital is a city of sufficient importance, population and buying power to justify the simultaneous operation of more than one tabernacle of living drama.

In the "Good Old Days."

It was not so many years ago—and after the advent of the "movies" as a competitive agency of some moment—that Washington supported, and supported handsomely, it may be said, four temples of the so-called "legitimate" drama—the National, Poli's, Belasco and Garrick—in addition to two vaudeville houses and two strongholds of burlesque.

There is a peculiarly sinister aspect, therefore, of our present palpable inability to support two shrines of the traditional drama—one at regular "road show" prices; the other at the popular scale usually assessed for stock. It can not all be charged off to the stress of the times. The stringent imposts since 1929 have not been quite enough to dull completely the public's consciousness of amusement bargains when it has encountered them.

There have been amusement bargains at the Belasco since it inaugurated its short-lived season on New Year's eve.

The plays have been well selected and they have been competently acted. The blame for the unseasonable closing of what promised to be a flourishing enterprise can be laid only at the door of an indifferent public.

And, so, there it lies!

Roy Atwell, cofeatured with Ilka Chase and Glenn Anders in "On to Fortune," the current bill at the National, was guest of honor last night at a modest rout at the Club Habana, tossed in his honor by Mr. and Mrs. Guy Scott. Mr. Scott, always with an eye cocked on the main event, is perhaps the youngest night club impressario in the National Capital, whatever being born in 1909 adds up to. You figure it out. And forget all about those prepositions!

"On to Fortune."

Since the subject of "On to Fortune" has come up—and how could it avoid it?—it seems worth remarking that Lawrence Langner, Armina Marshall (Mrs. Langner), Crosby Gaige and Charles Heidt, the producers, all are bending their every joint energy to whipping their play into more acceptable shape than it was in on Monday night.

The comedy of small-town bankers and big-town romance is progressively becoming a better entertainment at every performance. That is the nature of such things as this in the playhouse. It has been numerously observed here before, that farces, like musical comedies, are not written; they are rewritten. That is what is being done with "On to Fortune," perhaps not in the broad sense, but at least to the extent of having about 25 minutes of its "innards" amputated.

That is no small task, but while those who are at it still are at it, I, in the capacity of one who knows little about such things, beg to suggest that the lighting of the three acts is particularly bad—or was on Monday night.

Seek Ye the Light!

There seems to be a brilliantly illuminated strip of light along a certain path leading from the stage left to right. It is about the depth of one human actor. If the player is lucky enough to know where the strip is, he is more apt than not to be completely lighted up. Otherwise not.

On Monday night, Miss Chase seemed the canniest in the matter of locating the beams of the strips, floods and spots; the others, a good deal of the time, were working in what amounted to eternal darkness.

If I seem here to hang a severe criticism on the direction of Worthington Minor, in the same breath I beg the privilege of according him an accolade of purest ray serene for the excellence of his acting of the comparatively minor role of Tracy, the lovable absconder—a function that unfortunately was ignored in the hurly-burly of Monday's midnight duties.

Late last night—unless the wire dispatches relating to ship news is more hay than hey-hey—the noble S. S. Majestic docked in New York, depositing upon our expectant shores one Elisabeth Bergner, one of Europe's most renowned actresses, notable in America principally by virtue of her remarkably vibrant impersonation of the title role in "Catherine the Great," a foreign-made film play that made a profound impression in this country. Miss Bergner, a week or so hence will be seen on the New York stage in a production of the Theater Guild's which is destined, by all the cards, to elicit wide interest. "Escape Me Never" is the title of the item. It was written by Margaret Kennedy.

The Postman Rings.

So under the impressive, more or less, letterhead of The American Federation of Labor, comes this: Dear Sir: Forgive the officiousness of the letterhead but I feel too indolent at the moment to search for a blank sheet of paper.

This is in the nature of a query and not an attempt to eliminate the static which occasionally creeps into your short-wave chatterbox. Nor shall I attempt to gauge the journalistic effectiveness of a pun which is made ubiquitous—not to say redundant—by being previewed in the caption.

On second (or near-second) thought, it also occurs to me that it would be quite irrelevant to mention the fact that the town once known in Russia as Ekaterinoslav, and long since blessed by the Soviets with a far more scarlet name, derived its name from sources different from those you have mistakenly assumed as authentic. The name is rooted in two words: "Ekaterina"—Russian for Catherine, and "slava"—Russian for glory. The final "a" in Ekaterina changes to "o" for no really good reason, at least for no better reason than its inherent tendency that way. As, for instance, if you build a railroad between China and Russia, it immediately creates a problem which is either Sino-Russian or Russo-Chinese. A pedant might add that "E" taken all by itself means nothing whatever, even though it is pronounced "Ye."

And incidentally—to continue beside the point—whoever is your Gayety booster, he may be interested to know that Nadja is just as much Russian as Columbus was an Eskimo. So inadequate is her mastery of the great Slavic language that she can barely struggle through the first five or six words in the well-known "Black Eyes," which is at least two stanzas less than the attainment of Congressman Black from New York and about on par with Ambassador Bullitt.

But what I really wanted to ask was—who the hell is the distinguished Washington musician, Daniel Breeskin, and what, in the name of Paganini, is he distinguished for? This seems to have escaped me ever.

Please forgive my philoexic predilections and accept my assurances that this is written in a derisory, and not a derisive spirit. Your very truly,

(Signed) BORIS SHISHKIN.

Selah. Or at least in a manner of speaking.

So, Here You Are!

The fact remains, however—or maybe it should be pluralized—that our knowledge of Ekateriaslav, remarked upon in this space yesterday, in conjunction with Nora Gorden and Dan Breeskin, harks back only to what Mr. Breeskin, a native of the city, told me years ago.

The spelling of the name is up to you—and Mr. Shiskin.

As to Mr. Breeskin's distinction, I can only say that my good correspondent, Mr. Shiskin, is obviously a comparative newcomer to the Capital.

Dan Breeskin, now a member of the first violin section of the excellent orchestra conducted by C. Frederick Clark at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, in the days of the silent "movies," was one of a few musical geniuses—and I use the term advisedly—who was able to syncronize the exactly proper tune with the scene it was supposed to interpret on the screen.

There were only a few of these men—Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, Dr. Axst, Paul Ash, Nick Mirskey and a half-dozen others.

If Mr. Shiskin has come along in an age that trails a little behind these earlier days of musical preeminence in the cinema, it is his loss. I wish he might have heard some of Dan Breeskin's "scores," encompassing, sometimes, as many as 125 excerpts from the greatest works ever penned by the masters.

Society Note.

Charlie McClintock also called!

"The Ski Is the Limit," Says He!

Not that we think "ski" is pronounced "sky," or that Eddie Cantor ever said it, but it makes a good topline, anyway—or does it? However, the fact is that the eminent Mr. Cantor, accompanied by Mrs. Cantor and three of their five daughters, has just returned from the European tour during which this snapshot was made by the alert Associated Press cameraman. It depicts Mr. Cantor in the act of pretending that he is going skiing at St. Moritz, Switzerland. You will see him in more engaging pretending on the screen at Loew's Palace, come Friday, when his "Kid Millions" will supplant "Bright Eyes," starring Shirley Temple.

Movie Boners

Hollywood, Jan. 15.

TODAY'S meeting of the Movie Boners' Club will be held in a large projection room and the members will be shown a flicker, a strange picture, for it is made up of clips from movie boners.

The picture starts unreeling and the first scene stars Bing Crosby in "Here Is My Heart." Bing is looking at a piece of paper on which is listed his ambitions and he is putting a check next to one just realized. . . . . Our picture flashes quickly to the final sequence: Kitty Carlisle now has the piece of paper which lists Bing's ambitions and she gives a love glance to Crosby as she checks the ambition which says: "To marry a princess." But as Annette Titlebaum, the camera lady for this sequence, points out, this ambition was not listed when Bing first displayed the list which enumerated his desires.

Another title quickly appears on the screen. It is "The Gay Divorcee," the phonograph sequence in which the cardboard figures of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers keep revolving with the record.

While we view this scene Ruby Byhoff speaks. He—Ruby is a man this time—says that he is a musical instrument salesman and he says that this scene has an error according to his knowledge of phonographs.

The phonograph turntable with the miniatures started revolving at a normal rate of speed, but after a while instead of the speed diminishing—the spring would need winding—it proceeded to pick up more and more speed until it was racing.

"Am I a member?" asks Mister Ruby. Here's your membership card.

THE MOVIE boners' picture continues and next we get glimpses of a couple of football games. The first is from "The Band Plays On" and is contributed by Jacob Levine. In this reel Robert Young goes up to the coach and asks to get into the football game. Since Young is the hero of the flicker the coach can do nothing but say yes and send him in. Young races onto the field, joins the team and endeavors to pep up the players by saying: "Let's go gang." A player going into a football game can't talk to the other players until one play after his entrance has been completed. If a player forgets the rule there is a 15-yard penalty. If we've got to have football games in flickers at least let them follow the rules.

The other football sequence is from "College Rhythm." It is during Jack Oakie's last football game at college and the announcer clearly states that there are 50,000 people present. Later George Barbier asks Oakie how many people paid to see his last football game and Tony Cornetta, who is interested in figures, insists that Oakie answered 85,000.

Next we get a shot of Myrna Loy in "Broadway Bill" and she is interesting to see even in our movie boner film. It is summer, the race track sequence, and summer clothes are in evidence. Yet Miss Loy appears garbed in a fur coat—although she wears a summer blouse beneath it.

This is easily explained, E. S. Highie. That fur coat is very necessary to the story of "Broadway Bill." Myrna Loy wore it that hot day because she read the scenario in advance and knew she would have to pawn the coat to help Warner Baxter.

The film is still unreeling. The next scene of our special flicker is from "Babes in Toyland" and is offered by a gal who is already a club member, Prunella O. Larceny. The king of Toyland orders Oliver Hardy to be ducked in a pond. We see Hardy being ducked and he is wearing no hat. When he is fished out of the pond, however, he has on a cap. A boner somewhat similar occurs in "Forsaking All Others." It is the scene where Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery are running to Paula's house in the rain and they both fall. When they get up one side of Miss Crawford's white dress is dirty and white. Yet when she arrives at the house a short distance away, we see that upon opening the door Miss Crawford's dress is dry and there is only a small speck of dirt on her dress. The cameraman who showed this to us is George M. Eummett.

The movie boners' flicker is nearing the last reel and a person who signs his letter with the letters, E. R., contributes a flash from "Belle of the Nineties." We see a number of parked cars outside the ring where the boxing match takes place and although it is the gay nineties, a few new models are visible. The last shot of our special flicker for today is donated by W. Rauh and shows a scene in "The Case of the Howling Dog" where a woman is sending a telegram. She is told the telegram will cost 45 cents plus 2 cents tax. She gives the clerk two coins and walks away. The Government must have manufactured special money for this flicker.

Lott, Stoefen Get $6,000 For Week

Tilden Expecting Tour to Bring $200,000; Vines Gets One-fifth.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP).—With fame behind them and fortune as their goal, George Martin Lott, jr., and Lester Rollo Stoefen, latest recruits to professional tennis, earned slightly more than $6,000 each in their first week as play-for-pay racquet wielders.

While Lott and Stoefen and their barnstorming partners, Bill Tilden and Ellsworth Vines, took things easy today in New Haven before appearing there in an exhibition tomorrow night, Promoter Bill O'Brien announced that the gross receipts thus far of the three months' tour, which opened in Madison Square Garden here a week ago, amounted to $49,069.52.

Vines Gets 20 Per Cent.

Lott and Stoefen quit the amateur ranks last fall, signing contracts with O'Brien for "cuts" in the gross receipts amounting to 12½ per cent each. At that rate, last year's world double champions have realized $6,133 each from six Eastern exhibitions. Vines' share is reported to be 20 per cent, while O'Brien and Tilden, partners in a promotion concern, split the remainder.

At its present rate of drawing power, the tour is approximately 20 per cent behind the income derived from the first week of the 1934 barnstorming campaign, which featured Vines' debut as a professional nad included the Frenchmen, Henri Cochet and Martin Plaa, along with Tilden. For the corresponding period a year ago gross receipts were $62,347.

Trail in Attendance.

Although O'Brien could not recall the 1934 attendance figures for the opening week, he said this year's troupe was also trailing in that respect, having played to 35,800 in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh and Providence.

Forty per cent of the total attendance witnessed Lott and Stoefen's debut in New York last Wednesday night and paid half of the sum already taken in on the tour. The attendance was 16,000 and the receipts were $24,682.

"We are doing approximately 80 per cent of last year's business," said O'Brien. "Our total in 1934 was $243,000 and I expect this year we will reap close to $200,000."

After the engagement in New Haven tomorrow night the tour swings westward and O'Brien anticipates a large turnout in Chicago, Lott's home town.

C. U. Conquers Baltimore, 41 to 27

Schmarr and Lieb Help Victors to Gain 22-9 Lead at Half.

An improved Catholic University quintet passed and shot its way to a 41-27 victory over Baltimore University last night at Brookland. A large throng of fans braved the young blizzard to see the game.

Baltimore was in a threatening mood all evening, but it never got beyond that stage. With Hermie Schmarr and Bernie Lieb shoving the ball into the bucket with both hands, the Redbirds helped themselves to a 22-9 lead at the half and were never headed.

The second period saw the game develop into a see-saw affair as first one and then the other went on scoring splurges. Baltimore brought the score to 17-22 before Catholic took over the situation and ran its own total to 30.

Briton Voices Support of Net Films

Davis Cup Team Captain Disappointed as U. S. Is Silent.

LONDON, Jan. 16 (AP).—Making no secret of the fact that the move is designed to keep Fred Perry and Bunny Austin in the amateur fold, Herbert Roper Barrett, captain of the British Davis Cup Team, today defended the British Lawn Tennis Association's effort to make life simpler for court stars by permitting them to be paid for "educational" motion picture action films.

Simultaneously, Barrett expressed keen disappointment over the failure of Walter Merrill Hall, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, to "mount the band wagon" and join England and Czechoslovakia in a move to abrogate the International Lawn Tennis Federation rule prohibiting amateurs from receiving pecuniary gain for appearing in action films.

Whereas it always has been customary for amateur officials to profess nothing bu rare good will toward professional barnstormers like William (Big Bill) Tilden and Ellsworth Vines, Barrett not only admitted he doesn't like them, but predicted that the move he fostered at last Monday's meeting of the B. L. T. A. would "cut the ground from under them."

Despite Barrett's explanation of the purpose of England's interest in the movement, Walter Merrill Hall said yesterday that he was still personally opposed to the idea.

"I still maintain that abrogation of the international federation's rule prohibiting pecuniary gain from appearing in action films would be a violation of the amateur law," Hall said.

Graw Yacht Club Plans Canoe Race

Annual Regatta Set for July 19 and 20.

Havre de Grace, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.)—A Chesapeake Bay log sailing canoe race will be a feature of the annual regatta of the Havre de Grace Yacht Club, July 19 and 20, according to Fred A. Hoffman, re-elected commodore of the local organization. The American Power Boat Association will sanction motor boat races, he said, which will be staged on a more extensive scale than ever before.

R. L. McVey of the local club has recently acquired a log sailing canoe, more prevalent along the lower Eastern Shore than in this area, and has been named a member of the committee to arrange the sailing race. Canoes from the Miles River Yacht Club, the Chester River Yacht Club and other clubs specializing in this type of craft are expected to enter.

The annual winter rendezvous of the local club will be held at the Colonial Hotel here the night of February 15.

Other officers chosen for the year are: G. Bartol Silver, jr., vice commodore; Frank Maxa, jr., rear commodore; Harry Crawford, secretary, and Edward U. Way, treasurer. Dr. James H. Day has been named fleet surgeon and Vernon Duff, official measurer.

Snowstorm Led Solon To U. S. Cue Crown

By Dillon L. Graham
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

MONRAD WALLGREN, husky, blond representative from Everett, Wash., credits a snowstorm with leading him to a national billard championship—and present title contenders can thank politics for keeping him too busy to play now.

As a young man Wallgren had played some billiards but quit for seven years due to an injured finger. Then he took up the game again and in less than a year's time won the 18.2 balk-line amateur title in 1929.

"But if it hadn't been for a snowstorm that tied up traffic and forced me to either twiddle my thumbs or play billiards at a nearby club, I might never have played another game," he said.

Second to Collins.

He won a later local torunament in his Everett, Wash., home. Then came several triumphs on the Pacific Coast and finally the nationals, where he was runner-up to Percy Collins, of Chicago.

"Although I lost, I earned the right to challenge him to a 900-point match for the championship, and I won that," he said.

For the next several years Wallgren played in a few major tournaments and several of the national events, but, he says, "I haven't played a game since I was elected to Congress in 1932."

Much as he likes billiards, Wallgren says the game of politics is much more interesting. "It takes all of my time, and I don't know when I'll ever play another game of billiards."

Broke 80 at Golf.

Full-faced and broad-shouldered, Wallgren doesn't look his 43 years. Sitting at his desk in the House Office Building, he appears fit now to drive into a football line as he did years ago.

"I played all the sports as a youngster and until recently played quite a bit of golf. I broke 80 now and then," he said, "and ruined the evenings for my wife by talking about my various shots."

He likes to fish and go duck shooting, but he has turned his back on all sports for the present. Elected to Congress on his first political venture, he is too interested in this new game to find time for the others.

St. John's Defeats Hopkins Five, 36-28

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Basketers of St. John's College, playing their first game in the newly formed intercollegiate league, defeated their old rivals of Johns Hopkins here tonight, 36 to 28.

With Lambros and Evans leading the attack, the Johnnies got the jump on the invaders to pile up a score of 21 to 10 at the intermission. The Blue Jays showed much improved form in the second half, outscoring St. John's by 3 points, although at no time did they seriously threaten to overhaul the home team.

Siegel, Hopkins forward, was the outstanding star of the game, registering six times from the floor and once from the penalty strip.

Bethesda Downs Silver Spring, 38-7

The close duels of old between the arch suburban rivals, Bethesda and Silver Spring, are evidently a thing of the past as the Montgomery County League battle yesterday went to the host Bethesda team, 38 to 7, in the most one-sided battle of the 10-year series.

It was the Bethesdans fourth straight victory, the eighth in nine starts, and tied them for the loop lead with Rockville.

Frank Lozupone, with 10 points, stood out for the hosts in scoring and floor work. Sammy Wolfe, all-high forward, tried singled-handed to stem the attack to no avail.

Temple Streak Stopped at Nine; Rosan, Star Center, Is Missed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP).—With a brilliant display of basket ball in the last period, New York University kept intact its unbeaten record tnight, defeating Temple University, 38 to 22, for the Violets' twenty-fifth straight triumph over a span of two years before a crowd of more than 15,000 in Madison Square Garden. The defeat snapped Temple's consecutive winning streak at nine games.

Slow to get under way, New York University trailed during the early part of the play as the Owls capitalized on foul shots and worked the ball through the Violets' offence to score frm short range. With only six minutes tp olay in the first period, and on the short end of a 12-to-7 score, the undefeated New Yorkers hit their stride. In rapid succession Len Maidman dropped in two baskets and Mil Schulman added another to put the Violets in front, 13-12, for the first time, and they drew away.

With Howard Rosan, their star guard, out of the line-up, the Owls were unable to cope with the Violet" attack. Rosan was forced to bed this afternoon, suffering from an attack of influenza.

Mrs. Simons Spurns Golf Chairmanship

Declines Tournament Post Offered by President.

Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor Club, last season's tournament chairman of the District Women's Golf Association, yesterday formally declined that office offered her again by Mrs. Charles K. Wing, president.

Mrs. Wing was particularly anxious for Mrs. Simons to continue as tournament chairman following her fine work in that capacity during 1934.

The new tournament chairman and first team captain will be announced at the executive committee meeting on February 4. It was rumored that Mrs. C. E. Purdy, of Beaver Dam, was being considered as tournament chairman.

Roman Golfers Take Divots Off the Noses Of Buried Caesars, Paul Gallico Discloses

Writer Digs With Club and Man Waits to Examine Ruins.

By Paul Gallico.

ROME, Jan. 9 (Via Mail).—I played a round of golf with Tom Morgan, local bureau manager for the United Press, at the Rome Golf Club, and learned a little about the possibilities of felicitously combining golf with archeology. The course lies on some rolling campagna between the Appian Way and the old Roman viaduct, about 10 minutes from the walls of Rome. You practically can not take a divot without hitting some buried Caesar in the face.

I was having a little trouble on one of the holes and, as I hacked away at the ball, a rather tall, lean fellow, wearing a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles, wandered over and stood behind me watching. I took a few more strokes, and the stranger waited patiently, never changing his expression. It finally got on my nerves a little, so I stepped over to Morgan and inquired: "Why the one-man gallery, and who is it?" Morgan took a look and replied: "That? That is an archeologist. When you have finished excavating, he is going to try to identify the ruins."

The Rome club has very few bunkers and sand traps because it does not need them. You get yourself down in a gully that was evidently once a part of a Roman Forum, or behind a mound covering a buried temple, or find that your ball has rolled into the shaft of an ancient Roman clay mine, and you will begin to wish for the good old white face of honest sand. A winding ditch, miles longer and more crooked than the famous Swilcan Burn of St. Andrews, winds around the course, in and out of the holes and harasses you at every turn.

There is one hole where you drive off the tee into what looks like a straight, wide, level fairway. And so you bust it one and feel satisfied that you have hit a pretty fair shot, and you watch your ball rise, fall, bounce, roll, roll some more and suddenly vanish from sight. The mystery is explained, not by a slight dip in the ground, but by a sheer 50-foot precipice where the land is cut away. Your ball has been hit just hard enough to trickle over and drop into the tunnels of the mines from which the Romans took the clay for their pottery. You can still see the marks of their picks on the walls and ceilings. What you can't see is your golf ball.

Now you feel that here is a great opportunity missed for some business. The Roman corps of guides miss so few that you wonder how they came to pass that one up. Indeed, as you grub timorously in the black entrance of the shaft for your

Braves Due To Remain In League

Circuit's Club Owners Expected to Solve Puzzle Friday.

Reorganization Is Held Solution to Woes in the Hub City.

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—The Boston Braves' dog racing tangle is expected to be unsnarled quickly in New York Friday at the National League's big "pow-wow over bow-wows."

Contacts with club owners revealed tonight that the most likely solution is a financial reorganization of the Braves. This might bring into the club a couple of new faces—faces that represent money.

The club owners Friday will take steps to boot the racing dogs permanently out of Braves Field. The National League is robust enough financially to do this. Dogs and baseball do not mix. In addition to the unsavory gambling angle attached to dog tracks, these racing plants are recognized by the owners to be ruinous to the financial welfare of clubs attempting to operate in the track cities.

Cite Yawkey's Views.

That's why Tom Yawkey of the Boston Red Sox and other American circuit owners are opposed to the Braves giving up their field to the dogs and transferring their games to the Red Sox Park. They feel it would be unfair to young Yawkey, who in the past couple of years made a heavy investment at Fenway Park.

And National League owners similarly do not relish the prospect of dog racing cutting in on the pocketbooks of prospective Braves' customers—regardless of who operates the Braves.

And owners of the National circuit feel that they are strong enough to prevent such a situation. Despite recent wails of poverty from various National clubs, most of them are well off. The league itself has enough cash and unlimited credit, so that if it came to showdown it could operate the Boston Club. It is a certainty that the league will not revert to a seven-club organization.

Operators Face Threat.

The robust financial condition of the league is important. The present operators of the Boston Club can not threaten Friday to forfeit their franchise—thereby automatically losing all their players—because if they went through with their threat, the league would snap up the franchise.

Such a procedure would result in an immediate and heavy loss to the present operators.

Rather than forfeit their franchise, the controlling operators unquestionably will suggest or be prevailed upon to go through with a financial reorganization.

It seems that the actual situation in Boston is not as alarming as at first painted. The Commonwealth Realty Co., landlords of Braves Field, have leased the field to the Boston Kennel Club, because, it is understood, the Braves have not been paying their rent on the field.

Lead With "King."

It is understood, however, that there is a modifying clause in this lease which prevents it from going into effect until Tom Yawkey has consented to let the Braves play their games at Fenway Park. In other words, the Boston boys led off with their king by announcing the lease, but still have an ace in the hole, in the case the Braves can not shift to Fenway Park.

No one connected with baseballl denies that the Braves are in financial straights, and that Charles F. Adams, head of the holding company which controls the Braves stock, is tired of playing angel and underwriting them. But National Leaguers believe that a reorganization and the entrance of new capital will straighten out the Braves and Braves Field so that games will be played there as usual this summer.

Ruth Mentioned As Field Leader

Boston, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Reorganization of the "homeless" Boston Braves with Charles Francis Adams becoming president, Bill McKechnie, general manager—and Babe Buth field manager—was talked of here tonight.

There was a growing belief that Friday's special National League meeting in New York would result in a financial "showdown" between President Emil Fuchs and Adams, vice president and large stockholder.

Adams, chain store magnate and owner of the Boston Bruins, of the hockey circuit, has taken no active part in Braves' affairs since he and Fuchs split for multiple reasons several years ago. At the time Adams was principal owner and he offered Fuchs opportunity to buy control of the club. Payment of $80,000 is still due, it is understood, and in addition Fuchs is said to owe $45,000 rent and taxes on Braves Field. Adams has ample capital and if Fuch is unable to "get out from under," the Bruins owner may step in.

Adams has been reticent on the entire situation, but, with Fuchs, will attend the New York meeting.

Jackson to Stay At Emory-Henry

Satisfied With Job, Turns Down Offers.

Richmond, Jan. 16 (AP).—Coach W. S. ("Pedie") Jackson, of Emory and Henry College, today announced his decision to retain the coaching position he has held for the last seven years.

It had been known that he was considering an offer to go to King College, at Bristol, at a salary in excess of what he now is receiving, but he said today that pleasant associations at Emory and the sound foundation for athletics he had built there would outweigh other considerations and had induced him to stay.

Driver Ready To Resign at Virginia

Most Coaching Contracts End This Term; Tebell Keeps 2 Sports.

RICHMOND, Jan. 16 (AP).—All coaching contracts at the University of Virginia except that of Gus Tebell, baseball and basket ball coach, who has another year to go, will expire at the end of this season, it was learned today. Tebell's contract as football coach expires at the end of this term.

Jimmy Driver, graduate manager of athletics, said that his resignation became automatic under the new system announced by the board of visitors last Sunday, which gives the faculty complete control of the institution's athletic activities.

Mr. Driver said today he had not conferred with President John Lloyd Newcomb, but that he expected him first to appoint a new director and then fill out the new coaching staff.

Sasse May Get Miss. State Job

MacKechnie Resigns as Head Football Coach.

Starkville, Miss., Jan. 16 (AP).—Capt. A. R. Mackechnie, for the past two years head football coach at Mississippi State College, today tendered his resignation to the athletic board of control.

President G. D. Humphrey declined to comment on the resignation. t was not learned who will succeed the former University of Washington star. However, reports were current that Maj. Ralph Sasse, former Army coach now stationed at Fort Knox, Ky., will be named.

Babe Insists He Must Be Manager

May Spend Summer In Writing Book, He Says in Paris.

PARIS, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth definitely is through as a regular player and will stay out of baseball this year unless he is given a major league player-manager contract, he told the United Press today.

Ruth arrived today from Japan. He was accompanied by Mrs. Ruth and his daughter.

"I am definitely through as a regular," the Babe said. "But if I could get a good player-manager job I'd leap at it. Reports that I might play with the Yankees 'just one more year' are just guesses and happen to be wrong ones."

Plans to Write Book.

Ruth said he intended to spend the summer writing a book. The book would be "About My Travels." He also hopes to get in "a little golf if I can find the time."

"He will," Mrs. Ruth added.

The Babe said that he had not consulted with New York Yankee Club officials since just after the close of the 1934 season when he told them that he would no longer play as a regular. Since then it has been rumored that, having failed to get a managerial post, he would try to take a regular turn with the Yankees.

"All I can say," Ruth added, "is that I plan to have a conference with Col. (Jacob) Ruppert when I return to New York late next month."

Dislikes Bali, Java.

Ruth said that he was not impressed by the islands of Bali and Java, over which other travelers often become enthusiastic.

"For one thing," he said, "I don't like Bali and Java women. They are too chesty and too black."

Ruth has no hopes for the Japanese as a great baseball-playing nation. He thinks they are too small.

"The Japanese are good for their size," he went on, "but I don't think they ever will get very far. They are too small and they simply can't pound the ball hard enough."

The Ruths left today for St. Moritz for a try at winter sports. They will then go to London and will sail for New York on February 21.

Yanks "Interested."

New York, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—New York Yankee club officials today regarded news of Babe Ruth as "interesting but not surprising."

* Analysis proves that

Ruxton Rye

has all the qualities of a

TWO YEAR OLD RYE

. . . though Ruxton Rye is aged eight months

In an unbiased analysis by a nationally known chemist, Ruxton Rye was reported as having all the characteristics of 2-year-old whiskey. That's simple to understand. Ruxton Rye is made from the finest grains obtainable. Nothing but chemically pure Maryland limestone water is used. It is distilled in the old-fashioned way from an old-fashioned formula . . . then placed in temperature-controlled warehouses to age slowly and naturally. It's the skill and care given to Ruxton Rye that gives it such inimitable quality.

Excerpt from analysis: "This whiskey is of good flavor and corresponds to old-fashioned stored whiskey about two years old. It contains no artificial flavor or color."*

Haggerson Awakes to Take Feature of Tropical's Closing Card

Gelding Wins By Length And Half

Dr. Freeland, Favorite, Quits After Showing Good Early Speed.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan 16 (AP).—Haggerson, 6-year-old son of Sun Briar in the silks of J. C. Clark, jr., proved the hero of the final program of the Gables Racing Association's meeting here today. The bay gelding, ridden by Georgie Watson, leading apprentice at the local session, shook off the tired feeling he evidently had in recent races and won the sixth event by a length and a half, ridden out, to return $9.90.

N. E. Stanton's Wise Advocate, carried very wide at the stretch turn, was second, a half length before Mrs. E. Haughton's Infinitate. The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:45. More than 8,000 fans were on hand for the finale of a meeting that met with unexpected success despite it's early opening in mid-December.

Old Dr. Freeland, a Preakness winner way back in 1929, was installed the favorite in the six-horse field, which attracted most interest on an ordinary card. The 9-year-old son of Light Brigade ran like a youngster for six furlongs, after which he began to creak. He staggered enough at the stretch turn to carry several horses wide.

Haggerson and the old Doctor showed the way, the ultimate victor drawing away when his rival tired. Wise Advocate, although losing ground, cut the winner's lead down considerably in the closing furlong. Infinitate easily earned third money.

Golf in Old Rome Is Educational

golf ball, you are always expecting a polite and half unctious voice, "Mister, want a good guide? I very good offizial guide, speak-a English perfettamento. I have studia in the academia, for have pass my ezzominasion. While you look-a you boll I show you Roman mine, very old, sird century B. C. I think you are interesting in this. So, I begin. This galleria where your golf-a boll is not to see, ex-tenda one-half mile souse, where she connect with very old cata-combs, firs century where is bury very old Chris-tian martyr for pos-secution from the Hemperor, How-gustus, heh, heh. I think-a you like."

If there were such, you might just as well go with him. You are not going to find your golf ball. It has disappeared to become one with antiquity.

The course is a fine one, tough, long and tricky, with splendid greens. It is the only one in Rome. Half of the drives are blind, over hills and gullies, and most of the second shots involve the creek or marana somewhere along the line. A Scotchman is the professional, or, at least, I thought he was Scotch while I was paying him 30 lire greens fees and the same for three balls and some tees. I had a momentary doubt when I borrowed a set of clubs and he said after some hesitation: "I'll nae charge ye for the clubs." The doubt was set at rest when I played the clubs. He was Scotch.

Not long ago they shifted one of the greens down the course and discovered a statue, some pottery and a handful of Roman coins. This takes a good deal of sting out of looking for a lost ball. There is always the chance that you will come upon some treasure. The caddies speak no English, but have mastered a few of the English names of the clubs and are very proud of their ability to hand you a brassie when you ask for a mashie. You solve that one by not asking for anything, but simply waiting until they hand you something and then playing it. They are quite shot-wise and usually right.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Jan. 16.

Racing moves over under the sheltering palms of Mr. Widener's establishment tomorrow, and everybody and his brother has predicted that the meeting will outshine anything in a horse way that has been put on in this neck of the woods. Tropical, splendid in a smaller way, need not lower its head in shame for practically the same horses will be in operation over at the other course. With few exceptions, the entries reveal only those bangtails that earned their way hereabout since early in December. The opening of Hialeah means the reinstatement of Jockeys Wayne Wright and Don Meade, who, with a half-dozen others, were set down at Tropical. Steffen and Malley, grounded yesterday, may have to sit it out for ten days, according to how the Florida Racing Commission is feeling when it looks into the fouls committed by this pair yesterday. Clocker Mike and Trainer Joe are moving over to the big track with me and I expect to see some action. Our horses had their moments today.

BILL.

First race—De Valera shares top weight in this sprint with Octarora, and I believe the race lies between them. De Valera will draw Wright as the rider and I expect no mistakes to be made. Impromptu and Scotch Gold have fighting chances.

Second race—James City has that recent fine winning effort to recommend him. Hunter must be ready to hustle him off the rail, however, or he will be jammed back. Bungler, from the E. R. Bradley string, is said to be a fair sort and may show good speed at the first asking under Meade's handling. Closing Time for the show award.

Third race—Opinion seems to be the standout horse of this group. Comes over from the other track at tops. Wise Revue may be better than rated and Pryor looks like a safe wager for the show end.

Fourth race—The Ogle entry of Miney Myerson and Tractable seems to have a strong grip on this purse. Either of the pair can turn the trick according to my book. St. Stephen's is dangerous and the same goes for Golden Spur. The latter has worked briskly.

Fifth race—Wise Prince won at the other track and that effort repeated would take care of the main portion of this purse. Porter will ride and I'm depending on him to get a break in the limit field. Kawagoe might like this course better than Tropical. Evergold cannot be counted out of the contention.

Sixth race—West Main, Jamison and Aladdin's Dream is the order in which I prefer them in this race. Each has a strong rider and I expect to see some action in the stretch from all three of them.

Seventh race—Al Neiman to take care of the group listed in the day's finale. He is at tops, says Clocker Mike. Fairly Wild will like the route and will be hard to keep out of the money. Ahmed to complete the money bracket.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—†BANDERILLA, $2.60, $2.20, $2.20; CLAPPING JANE, $4.60, $3.30; POLY ROYAL, $5.90.

BANDERILLA, a rapid breaker, rushed into long lead, but began tiring at the sixteenth pole, and just lasted to win. CLAPPING JANE came with a rush and was wearing the winner down. POLY ROYAL, well up all the way, ran a good race. LAURA S. is sure to improve. GLORY GREENOCK is worth noting. MONKS GOLD suffered early interference.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:33. Off at 2:40½. Winner, L. E. Johnson's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENERGETIC BOY, $8.80, $4.20, $2.80; VENETIAN, $12.00, $4.20; VEE EIGHT, $3.20.

ENERGETIC BOY, well handled, moved up and ran into lead around turn and just lasted to win. VENETIAN was poorly ridden. He should have won easily, but was allowed to run out in stretch, and finished on the outside rail. VEE EIGHT rushed into lead; the boy lost his stirrups and the gelding stopped. BUY STRAIGHT was well up all the way.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:12½. Off at 3:14½. Winner, Mrs. A. M. Creech's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENTEEL LADY, $8.20, $4.30, $3.10; RIDGEMOR, $19.70, $11.90; CAPTAIN JOY, $7.20.

GENTEEL LADY rushed into lead in first furlong, set a fast pace and held on gamely. RIDGEMOR, well up from the start, finished very fast. CAPTAIN JOY came with a rush in final furlong. BROAD MEADOWS ran a good race. SUN TEMPEST showed a flash of speed. FOREWARNED tired badly.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $700. The Lake Rosalie. For fillies, 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46½. Off at 3:48. Winner, Greentree Stable's br. f. (3), by Bud Lerner—Basquaise. Trained by M. Lilly. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:06 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BASQUINE, $6.30, $3.60, $2.50; MAPLE QUEEN, $3.80, $2.30; VANDA CERULEA, $2.70.

BASQUINE was rated along back of the early pace to the top of the stretch, where she was taken to the outside, closed gamely, and right at the finish was going away. MAPLE QUEEN broke fast, but was eased back off the pace, and came with a rush at end. VANDA CERULEA displayed keen speed, but weakened in last sixteenth. POLLY RITA ran a good race. NEON went well.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:18. Off at 4:21. Winner, Mrs. F. White's ch. f. (3), by Flittergold—Some Bird. Trained by F. White. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOWSON, $8.50, $4.40, $3.00; COONEY, $6.40, $4.30; LANGUOROUS, $5.10.

TOWSON, well ridden, followed the pace under wraps to the top of stretch, closed gamely, caught COONEY at sixteenth pole, and won going away. COONEY was tired, made a long lead, set a fast pace, but tired suddenly in last few strides. LANGUOROUS, well up, closed very fast. SUNCHANCE was never able to get close. AIR LINE displayed good speed. KUVITO came from far back in stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:52. Off at 4:54 Winner, J. C. Clark's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAGGERSON, $9.90, $6.20, $4.20; WISE ADVOCATE, $4.70, $3.50; INFINITATE, $2.60.

HAGGERSON, showing startling improvement over recent races, raced DR. FREELAND into defeat, then drew away and held race safe. WISE ADVOCATE trailed far back, closed fast, but was carried very wide entering stretch, recovered, and finished gamely. INFINITATE, unable to get to the front, ran a fair race. DR. FREELAND had plenty of speed for six furlongs, then tired, and ran out on stretch turn STAR FIRE had no mishap. DON GUZMAN was practically left, but showed good speed for a half-mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 5:26½. Off at 5:29½. Winner, J. A. Johnson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FIRE REEL, $14.00, $7.10, $4.30; FLAT ROCK, $3.30, $2.90; CHIEF A., $4.50.

FIRE REEL was hustled along from the start, moved into lead around turn, but had to be driven out to win. FLAT ROCK closed with a rush around turn, but hung right at finish. CHIEF A., well up, showed good speed, and was next best. SLEEPY JOE was kept out in the middle of the track, closed fast in run through stretch. MEROVECH had plenty of speed for six furlongs, then curled up and finished away back. IDLE ALONG had no excuse.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:58. Off at 6:00½. Winner, Mrs. M Nelson Bond's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PENCADER, $44.60, $25.20, $12.10; ST. CHRISTOPHER, $36.10, $31.20; HAPPY HOPES, $10.10.

PENCADER circled his field around turn, closed with a rush, and won going away. ST. CHRISTOPHER ran into lead in final sixteenth, but could not stall off the winner's rush. HAPPY HOPES trailed far back in the far turn, where he began to close ground, and finished gamely. MAD CAREER ran a good race. CAPT. JERRY ran a good race.

Navy Sinks Georgetown Five, 36 to 25

By Lewis F. Atchison.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 16.—A Navy broadside that landed squarely amidships on a frail Georgetown craft sent a crew of sturdy Hoyas gurgling into a 36-25 defeat today as the powerful Middy quintet chalked up its fourth consecutive victory.

Admiral Buzz Borries, who seems to be the head man in Navy circles this year, personally directed the sinking of Georgetown. The Admiral rammed home seven field goals and four fouls for 18 points before retiring to the bench with a gash over his right eye.

His aides were Fellows and Dornin, able battle commanders, who scored all but one of the points Borries failed to make. The trio was in full command of the situation from the starting whistle until a vigorous tapping on the metal pipe the Tars employ as a time gong ended hostilities.

Navy Off in Front.

Georgetown was plainly suffering from sea-sickness in the first half and scored only one field goal, a pot shot from close in by Capt. Ed Hargaden. Navy, as a result, was a couple of ship-lengths in front at the half with its 20 to 7 lead.

But Georgetown recovered its composure as the second stanza got under way and dented Navy's heavyplated lead with an unrelenting rain of shots that brought the score to 23-19, with Navy ordering all hands to the pumps.

The pumping crew of Borries, Borries, Doring and Borries bailed out Navy's floundering ship and the Admiral put it on its true course again with a full-speed-ahead command. Before Georgetown scored again Navy's total was swollen to 33. From then on the fans simply sat around and waited for the time-keepers' whistle.

Hargaden Is Star.

Georgetown played better than the score indicates. Hargaden easily was the most polished man on the highly polished floor and frequently dribbled through the entire Navy team. Don Gibeau, a spunky little guard, put up a whale of a fight before being evicted because of personal fouls, as was Joe Corliss, and Fellows, of Navy.

But the Hoyas' marksmanship was something else. They couldn't hit earth in a wrecked flying machine. Superb passing that had Navy running around in circles at times was wasted by the erratic shooting.

Hagerstown Five Wins.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—The Woodmen of the World basket ball team of this city won the first half of the split Washington County League season when it defeated Funkstown, 30 to 30. Funkstown led at half time, 19 to 17.

Augusta Cadets Strong in Sports

Prospect Bright for Ring, Court, Mat, Tank.

Fort Defiance, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.). Augusta Military Academy athletes are expecting successful seasons in virtually all branches of winter sports.

Len Williams, former Washington and Lee athlete, has built his basket ball team around two veterans of the 1933 squad, Allen and Tully, the former being captain. Jackson and Mitchell are bidding for center; Wharton, Corken, Foreman and Gallagher for the forward posts, and Heilman, Grills, Perry, Shomo and Fusco for guard. Jackson and Grills were all-star high stars in Tennessee last season. The Cadets have dropped but 8 games out of 40 in the past two years.

Prospects are encouraging in boxing, inasmuch as most of the intramural winners are out for the team. Among these are Cauthorne and Jordan, 115-pounder; Nixon, 145-pounder; Pennybacker, 175-pounder, and Rees, 125-pounder. Veterans back are Payne, 115-pound South Atlantic prep champion; Quarles Culton and Capt. Wheeler.

A large squad is bidding for places on the swimming team; ambition and willingness are expected to offset inexperience in the case of the wrestling team, while Carlan, R. Payne and Neale are the 1935 rifle team stars.

St. John's Plays At Cumberland

Lions Club Sponsors Fray With Potomac State.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Arrangements are being completed for the St. John's College basket ball team of Annapolis, Md., to meet Potomac State College cagers on the armory court here on January 28.

M. Talbott Riggs, director of athletics at St. John's, already has entered an agreement to send his team here and, as Harley Staggers, Potomac State coach and athletic director, has approved of negotiations for a game in Cumberland with a Maryland college team, he is expected to agree to plans for the contest.

The game late this month will be sponsored by the Cumberland Lions Club, with all receipts over and above actual expenses to be turned over to the organization's charity and milk fund. Sponsorship of the contest was approved last night by directors of the club and F. Allen Weatherholt has been appointed chairman of a committee to stage the game.

Md. Defeats Washington College

Waters, Willis Are Stars as Old Liners Run Up 43-27 Margin.

MARYLAND disposed of a State rival last night with alarming ease, snowing Washington College under a landslide of floor goals to win, 43 to 27. The outcome was never in doubt.

Although the Eastern Sho' men rallied in the second half and succeeded in making up some of the ground, they were left too far behind in the first period and were out of the running at the intermission. The Terps led at half-time, 26 to 12.

Al Waters and Vic Willis, each of whom located the net for 15 points, led the Maryland onslaught, with various members of the supporting cast lending helping hands at intervals. Al Wilmot, forward, and Phil Skipp, center, were Washington's most prolific point-makers, ringing up seven each.

Visitors Never Threaten.

The visitors really never threatened Maryland's substantial lead, although they succeeded in bringing the score to 26 to 36 midway in the final period. Numerous shots were open to them, but all seemed disdainful of any but snowbirds. And they weren't bad shots.

Maryland applied more pressure as Washington, which is leading the Maryland Intercollegiate League race, tried to bridge the gap between them, and the Old Liners were coasting along at the finish.

N. C. State Wrestlers Are Minus Two Stars

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 16 (Spl.). State College's wrestling team will meet V. M. I. at Lexington on Saturday night and it appears now that three of the team's five monogram men will be unable to take part in the match.

Capt. Carl Bernhardt, 155 pounds, left this week to do practice teaching and will not be available until February 15. E. W. Cooper, veteran heavyweight, dislocated a shoulder in a practice match last week, and Colin Kerr, star 126-pound veteran, is laid up with a case of flu.

Laurel and Mt. Rainier Fives to Clash Tonight

Laurel A. C. will face Mount Rainier A. C. tonight at 7:30 o'clock on the National Guard Armory court at Hyattsville in a Prince Georges County Basket Ball League contest. Both teams will be striving for their first loop victory.

In the nightcap, Company F, National Guard, will engage Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church.

Jaddick-Furr Victor May Face Cool

EDDIE COOL, a high-ranking junior welterweight, was projected into the local picture yesterday when it was announced he tentatively had agreed to meet the winner of Monday night's Phil Furr-Johnny Jaddick boxing feature at the Auditorium.

Matchmaker C. Egbert Cornell discussed at great length the proposition of showing Cool here, while in Philadelphia recently. He said yesterday that he practically had closed out the match.

Cool boasts two decisions over Harry Dublinsky, who walloped the daylights out of Tony Canzoneri once, and also spanked Tony Falco, recent upsetter of Young Peter Jackson.

Furr Seeks Power.

Convinced that he is no match for Jaddick in boxing skill, Phil Furr has abandoned all the finer points of fisticuffing he has so laboriously acquired and is concentrating strictly on developing punch and power in his workouts.

The District welterweight champion abandoned all semblance of a defense yesterday, staking his all on a potent left-hook and sharp-shooting right against spar mates.

Reports from Philadelphia indicate that Jaddick, too, has buckled down to serious training in anticipation of serious opposition from Furr, who is an unknown quantity outside of Washington. "Iron Hat" Johnny Burns, promoter of the celebrated Cambria Athletic Club and one of the most picturesque figures in the ring today, will accompany Jaddick here and serve as his handler and chief second.

Western Md. Boxers Picked to Face Bucknell

Westminster, Md., Jan. 16 (AP). four men, three of them seasoned veterans, have been tentatively picked to represent Western Maryland College in its initial boxing meet with Bucknell here next Tuesday night.

Don Keyser is to fight for the Green Terrors in the 155-pound class and Andy Gorski will be in the 175-pound bout. The heavyweight division will be taken care of by Bernie Kaplan. In the 145-pound class is to be Rodman Haines.

Keyser, Gorski and Kaplan have experienced plenty of action in the ring for Western Maryland in recent years. The representatives in the lighter classes have not been selected.

Coach Dick Harlow, who has been at Harvard loking over the grounds for starting football coaching there in the spring, is expected back by the first of the week to send his charges through the final drill and handle them in the boxing meet.

Pyne to Miss C. U.-V. P. I. Boxing

Cards' Heavyweight Has Torn Ligament; Place Taken by Fleming.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S Boxing Team will be handicapped by the absence of Denny Pyne Saturday night when it squares off with Virginia Polytechnic's ringmen at Brookland. Pyne yesterday was ordered to rest because of torn ligaments in the shoulder.

Winner of his first bout last week by a knockout over Joe Rosatti, of Bucknell, Pyne's should was injured by Rosatti's hammer-like blows. A broken blood vessel resulted and he was powerless to raise his arm in training, so Coach Ed LaFond ordered him placed on the casualty list.

Fleming Takes Place.

Red Fleming, who knocked out Bob Pethick, Eastern collegiate 175-pound champion, last Saturday, will move up into Pyne's berth. His opponent will be Malcolm O'Neale, a broth of a lad who packs a punch.

Fleming's place will be filled by George Mulligan, who reported for practice only this week. A natural slugger, Mulligan won by a knockout in his only bout last season. He is expected to be a valuable addition to the squad.

The remainder of Catholic's lineup will be the same that opposed Bucknell. All survived their bouts in good condition, and are in the pink. Angy Restaino, who outpointed Al Peterson, failed to get a single blow in return for the walloping he handed the rugged young Pennsylvanian.

Little Generals Win From Episcopal

Ballston Coasts to 51-34 Victory After Score Is Tied at 26-All.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—A last-quarter rally that netted a total of 28 points enabled Washington-Lee High School, of Ballston, to emerge victorious over Episcopal High School by 51 to 34 in the Episcopal gym this afternoon.

Trailing 18 to 16 at the half, Episcopal pulled up to a 26-all tie midway of the third quarter by virtue of baskets by Wilson and Ringer.

At this point Washington-Lee put on the steam and was never in danger for the rest of the game. Jimmy Cooper and Bill Copeland led the attack on the Cherry and Black basket.

Fredericksburg High Tossers in Victories

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.) Fredericksburg High Schools' two basketball teams broke into the winning column for the first time this season last night when the Fredericksburg boys defeated Warrenton High, 28 to 11, and the Fredericksburg girls triumphed over Warrenton High, 58 to 9.

Intercity Cage League May Be Formed

Metropolitan Teams Are Due to Oppose Baltimore Stars.

WHAT started out to be just another basket ball league—called the Metropolitan Amateur—may develop into a huge intercity loop in which Washington's best simon-pure cagers will be arranged against the cream of Baltimore's talent.

The Metropolitan Amateur league was organized a few days ago with the best unlimited quints in this section entered—Sholl's, which reached the third round of the National championship last year; Bureau of Investigation, St. Mary's Celtics, of Alexandria, and Delaware and Hudson. An invitation last night was extended the crack Company F team of Hyattsville to join the loop.

The Metropolitan league will open this Sunday with Sholl's meeting the Bureau of Investigation at George Washington University's gym. In a professional attraction at the same place, Rinaldi Tailors will engage the Hagerstown (Md.) Elks.

Local club managers and temporarily elected league officers were in communication with heads of the Baltimore City League in an effort to effect the formation of a Middle Atlantic circuit. There are eight clubs in the Baltimore loop—the Y. M. H. A. and Fairgold, tied for the first half; Sonewall Club, Baltimore A. C. Lithuanians, McCormick, Y. M. C. A. and Susquehannocks. It is possible that only five of these will be asked to join with six clubs in the District.

Sholl's boast such stars as Bernie Jones, Sammy Hook and Bobby Lucas. Investigation has the Thompson brothers, late of Duke, and Walter Morris; the Celtics have Buddy Zimmerman and Johnny Cabell; Delaware and Hudson, Teddy Capelli, and Company F, Rufus Vincent, Frenchy Cohan and Spider Chase, former Maryland luminaries.

V. P. I. Teams Face Busy Period

Tech to Meet Richmond Five Tonight; Boxers, Wrestlers Active.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Athletic contests tomorrow night and Saturday will pit Virginia Tech varsity and freshman basket ball and wrestling teams and the varsity boxers against powerful aggregations at home and away.

A game between the Tech freshmen and the Massanutten Academy five tomorrow night will open a double basket ball card that includes also a tilt between the Tech varsity and the fine University of Richmond team. Rival freshmen outfits are slated to start action at 7 and the varsities at 8 p. m. Though conceding the Tech five little chance to surprise the Richmond team, local court fans are eager to see the powerful Spider quintet in action.

Five Tech teams will be in action Saturday, all of them away from home. The varsity and freshmen basketeers will play a doubleheader with Washington and Lee at Lexington. The varsity boxers face a strong Catholic University team at Washington. Varsity and first-year wrestling teams will open their five-meet schedule in meets with University of North Carolina matmen at Chapel Hill.

State Normal Defeated By Wilson Teachers

Wilson Teachers College held Maryland State Normal, of Towson, Md., to one field goal in the first half and two in the second, and triumphed last night at the former's gym, 46-13.

While the Wilson guards were putting up an impregnable defense, Sacks, forward; Keyser, center, and Tipton, guard, slipped through the invaders' sentinels for 14, 14 and 12 points, respectively.

Wilson led 16-5 at the turn.

Wolf Pack Swimmers To Face Fort Monroe

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Romeo Lefort, coach of the State College swimming team, announced today that the local tankers will open their schedule Saturday afternoon against Fort Monroe here.

Coach Lefort will send an inexperiencd team against the veteran Army swimmers, as graduation last spring left him with but two monogram men for the 1935 team. They are Capt. Nat Thompson, diver, and S. B. Holoman, who competes in the dashes.

Race Bill Approved.

Dover, Del., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—The change of the State constitution to allow pari-mutuel race horse betting was approved today by the State Legislature.

CROSBY.

The ALLEGED GREAT AUNT

GILBERT obeyed as Jones, who had been drawn by sound of the shot, appeared on the threshhold, and in the face of reinforcements Bradley gave up the fight. The man looked spent. His face was drawn with pain, and blood was trickling down from a smeared wound on his lip.

"Pick up the brief case, Jones, will you?" Then Burke turned to Gilbert. "We'll be on our way."

"Not until I have looked downstairs," Gilbert said finally, and the trooper nodded.

But Gilbert found only a broken time lock and not a sign of Jane in the vaults below.

As he left the bank with the others, who had waited for him, a crushing sense of helplessness settled again over his spirits. He glanced hopelessly back at the bank, at James Bradley's modest house.

It Was Miss Swanson.

"Look!" he called to the troopers. "Who is that?"

Every one swung around and, realizing that she had been seen, the woman started back. Then she changed her mind and came up to them under the street light. She was carrying a Gladstone bag. Gilbert recognized her at once—Miss Swanson, of the bank.

"Charles!" she cried, her voice shaken with anxiety. "You're hurt?" Bradley threw her a quick glance, but said nothing.

"And who are you?" demanded Burke.

"Luella Swanson." Her lips twitched nervously.

"Miss Swanson works for Mr. Bradley in the bank," said Gilbert.

"Looks like she worked for him outside it," Burke commented glumly. "Jones, take that bag."

Making a Get-Away.

"Making a get-away, weren't you? Pretty slick! You can just come along with us, young lady. Take a hold of her, Jones."

They crossed the square in silence and entered old Lily's door. James Bradley looked up drearily as the party came in.

"Hello, Charles," he sighed.

"Let her sit down," said Burke to Jones, jerking his head toward Miss Swanson. "Now," barked the officer, addressing Charles, "perhaps you'll tell us what you've been up to this evening."

"Perhaps you'll tell me," said Charles coldly, "if you have a warrent for my arrest?"

Gilbert took a step forward, his fists doubling. It was intolerable for him to remain another moment in the presence of these Bradleys without tearing from their hidden thoughts the knowledge that he knew they possessed. "Where is Jane Stanton?" he demanded.

"Where've you been since Mr. Meade saw you in the bank?"

"May I sit down?" asked Charles Bradley smoothly. Then, dropping into an armchair and settling back in it comfortably, "You haven't the slighest right to ask me that question, but I don't mind answering it. I spent the afternoon in the bank. We had a great deal of work on hand. I motored Miss Swanson to her house, dined with her there and went on working all evening. We frequently work nights——"

Going to New York.

"I was going away—going to run down to New York for the week-end."

"Alone?" Burke's lip curled.

"With Miss Swanson. She is my personal secretary. It's my custom to take her with me on my business trips——"

Burke interrupted him. "Is it your custom to start out on business trips at 11 o'clock at night?"

"I like to drive at night," said Charles Bradley promptly. "The roads are empty." He glanced at Mixter, bending over the Gladstone. "You'll find nothing but my clothing in that bag."

"That's all that's here," Mr. Mixter reported, regretfully.

"Open the brief case, Mr. Mixter."

"In the brief case," said Charles Bradley evenly, "you'll find some money, some documents and Miss Lily De Long's will." His tone was completely casual. But the words, "Miss Lily De Long's will," brought everyone's eyes to his face.

"What were you doing with Miss Le Long's will?"

Money in Case.

The answer came reasonably. "I was considering how some changes which she had suggested might be made. I'm Miss De Long's lawyer. I expect to join her in California next week."

"There is a great deal of money here," said Mr. Mixter mildly. He was pulling out one fat packet of greenbacks after another.

"Count it," said Burke. "That explains the broken timelock."

Gilbert's eye had been caught by the "documents." He poured them out of the briefcase onto the desk, a great disorderly pile of old and yellow letters. They were all addressed to Miss Lily De Long at various European hotels, and the old-fashioned writing was that of his great-uncle Gilbert! He barely heard Burke's question: "Miss De Long is in California?"

"She wired my brother from Chicago this morning, on her way," Charles Bradley replied. "Mr. Meade saw the telegram."

Like Physical Blow.

"Did you, sir?"

"Yes." Gilbert turned from the letters.

He walked a few paces toward Charles Bradley and said deliberately, "I couldn't make that wire square with her presence at Moosehead Lake this afternoon."

The effect of the words on the banker was that of a physical blow. Gilbert could see him take it. For a long moment he sat silent. Then he asked, slowly, "Did you see her?"

"I did. How did she get there, Mr. Bradley?"

"I have no idea." Then Charles Bradley threw him an oblique glance and inquired, "Was—was Alberto there? He was? Ah, then! Undoubtedly he took her." Charles Bradley smiled. "He was to motor her to Albany, but as you've seen, Mr. Meade, she's very impulsive. A creature of whim."

"But that Chicago telegram, Mr. Bradley?"

"I confess I don't understand it." After a moment he threw off casually, "Of course she shouldn't go up there, like that, alone with Alberto."

Not a Fit Guardian.

"Why not?"

"Well, it's pretty lonely. The season hasn't opened. In short I"—— He shrugged. "Well, I don't like it."

"Why not?" Gilbert asked again.

"I—I don't entirely trust Alberto. There have been little things—grievances, fits of temper. He's violent and moody. I think he shouldn't be the solitary guardian of an old lady. With that in mind, I've slept in this house for years."

"Are you trying to tell us," asked Gilbert, "that you think he might do her personal injury?"

"Oh, I wouldn't say that, but my brother and I have warned her over and over again that in our opinion, the man might be dangerous!"

"Then you had a presentment?" Gilbert's question came quickly.

"Of —— what?" Charles Bradley's voice was uncertain.

"Of what happened this afternoon."

Charles Bradley asked nothing more. His eyes were wary. Then—

"Oh! What did happen?" The gasping question was Miss Swanson's. She had risen, white and tremulous, from her chair by the door. "Did—did Alberto"——The words died on her lips. Charles Bradley's endurance suddenly snapped.

Then Lily Appeared.

"Did he?" he cried, hoarsely. "Have you—have you got him?"

"Yes. We have him, Mr. Bradley."

For the first time Charles Bradley's eyes sought those of Luella Swanson. They exchanged a bewildered glance. Miss Swanson began suddenly to cry. She sank back in her chair and buried her face in her hands and sobbed hysterically.

"Maybe you've got something you'd like to tell us, young lady," Burke observed.

Miss Swanson shook her head. Across the sound of the girl's sobbing came the noise of the front door opening, men's feet in the passage. A slower step—lighter, but shuffling. Then, unmistakably, Lily De Long's voice: "Well! Who on earth are making themselves at home in my house?"

A moment later, leaning heavily on Lieut. Johnson's arm, she appeared on the threshold of the study. The round, red face of Casey, the trooper, loomed over her shoulder. She stood there for an instant, taking in the scene before her—the troopers, Gilbert, Mr. Mixter, the sobbing girl, Charles Bradley in handcuffs.

"Have you all gone mad?" she inquired.

"What's going on?" Her glance fell on Mixter. "Who's that? What are you all up to?"

The Congressional Record came into being in 1875, 60 years ago. The record of the proceedings of Congress was kept and published prior to that time back as far as 1799, but it was given various names. Before 1799 the Senate's business was carried out behind closed doors, and no reports of the proceedings were published. Since then all except the executive sessions of the Senate have been on record.

From 1799 to January 17, 1824, proceedings were kept in the Annals of Congress; for the next 12 years they were published in the Register of Debates; from then until 1874 it was called the Congressional Globe, and since that time the Congressional Record. The Record, strange as it seems, is not an accurate record of the actual proceedings, because members are allowed to alter their remarks for the record—they can say one thing and have quite another put into the record. "Leave to print" speeches, which were never given on the floor, are also sometimes inserted in the record as though they had actually been given.

Something new in snowstorms was experienced last March by Sallisaw, Okla., when the town woke to find itself in the midst of a blinding snow under a cloudless sky, and with the sun shining brightly. The storm lasted half an hour, and is believed to have been caused by snow on the ground evaporating and rising into the air where the vapor struck a cold layer of air and formed again as snow.

Tomorrow: $10,000 for $5—a poor investment.

Wheat Climbs On Report of Dust Storm

Cotton Fluctuates in Active Trading; Closes Steady With Old Crop Up.

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP).—Worst dust storms this season Southwest and advices the Canadian government would continue upholding the Winnipeg wheat market gave renewed strength to grain values today.

Indications were plentiful that all cereals had become oversold here and desire to take the buying side was increased because the Liverpool wheat market today reflected but to a slight extent severe setbacks of prices yesterday this side of the Atlantic. Discussions of legislative means of minimizing the effect of a possible adverse gold clause decision by the Supreme Court were also construed as a bullish factor.

Wheat closed firm at about the day's top level, 1¼ to 2 cents above yesterday's finish; May, 96½-¾; corn, 1⅜ to 1⅞ up; May, 86-86⅛; oats, ¾ to 1⅜ advanced, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to 17 cents gain.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Cotton was fairly active today and fluctuated over a range of approximately $1 a bale. Early declines were followed by a good rally, but prices eased near the close. The general market ended steady at net advances of 4 to 7 points on the old crop psoitions, while the new crop was 2 to 4 points net lower.

March sold off to 12.29 and July to 12.31 during the middle of the day, making net losses of about 7 to 13 points, but offerings were absorbed by trade buying on the scale down, and later there was a spurt of commission-house buying, accompanied by unconfirmed rumors that the Bankhead quota for 1935 might be considerably under the figures suggested in some of the earlier reports.

March shot up to 12.49 and July to 12.54, making net gains of 8 to 13 points and recoveries of 20 to 23 points from the low levels of the morning.

Prices then dipped under renewed realizing or liquidation, and closing quotations showed reactions of 6 to 11 points from the best, with late months relatively easy.

Exports today, 38,686, making 2,780,868, so far this season. Port receipts, 35,109. United States port stocks, 2,946,889.

Recent Code Hearings Show Majority of Spokesmen for Industry Favor Some Measure of Price Control, Observer Says.

By Special Writer of the Post.

The recent NRA hearings on code price provisions showed that a majority of spokesmen for industry favored some measure of price control and would oppose any effort to forbid maintenance of price agreements. The memorandum presented on behalf of the consumers' goods industries committee contains particularly effective and keenly analytical presentation of the case for price control, calculated to dispel many of the misconceptions that have arisen concerning the socially detrimental results of all concerted action to fix prices. The committee undertakes to define a fair competitive price and to point out that under competition these characteristics of fairness are sometimes lacking. "We are too apt," the memorandum states, "to think of competition as something which takes place among the sellers only," instead of realizing that the normal competitive process also calls for competition among buyers in securing a supply of goods. Unless there is a balanced kind of competition, therefore, the result is a price that is either too high from the point of view of the buyer, or too low from the point of view of the seller. In other words, the resultant price may be for all practical purposes in the nature of a monopoly price.

The argument that efforts to put a floor to the downward movement of prices in times such as these aid the restoration of a soundly functioning competitive economy, is not only ingenious, but it is essentially valid. The chairman of the consumers' goods industries committee, George A. Sloan, is also head of the Cotton Textile Institute, and knows from first-hand experience that when a large proportion of normally efficient production units are unable to cover costs and obtain a fair profit on sales, the remedy does not lie in price cutting to encourage consumption. "If industry is to be held to higher costs of production by virtue of hours and wages provisions, then industry must be upheld against destructive competition by policies and by provisions of the character mentioned" (that is, protection against destructive price cutting).

Distinction Drawn Between Price Fixing and Minimum Scales.

A distinction is drawn between price fixing and the establishment of scales of minimum prices. Such minimum prices, it is said, do not destroy the incentive to reduce costs and improve the quality and general efficiency of services. The fact that the minimum price is so frequently the prevailing price does not necessarily indicate that there is no room for variations above the lower limit, but may mean that competition has depressed quotations to the lowest permissible level. It must be admitted that the difference emphasized, while logical, is not always easy to draw in practice. The committee concedes the difficulties connected with determining a proper minimum price and also the obstacles in the way of enforcement and compliance, but it wishes to retain minimum price measures as a defense to be used in emergencies. Open price filing is also indorsed as a means of preventing price cutting and discrimination by resort to publicity, while qualified approval of provisions against sales below cost is given. Again a distinction is made between the desirability of such provisions and difficulties in their enforcement.

To the argument that recovery is held back by increasing prices under the codes, the committee replies that it does not increase consumption to have surplus stocks of commodities pile up. Moreover, such stocks can not be produced except through reliance upon credit or increased investment, which will not be forthcoming unless a profitable demand for the product exists. There is an admission that prices in certain industries, construction, for example, may be too high, but that does not warrant putting pressure upon industries that must maintain prices in order to obtain reasonable profits and pay decent wages.

Fixed Hours and Wages Fail to Halt Ruinous Competitors.

Insistence upon uniform fixed hours and wages will not, moreover, obviate ruinous and destructive competition, if an industry is suffering from overcapacity. England is cited as a case in point where, in both the coal and textile industries fixed limitations of wages and hours have not prevented competitive demoralization from spreading. Consequently, the Consumers' Goods Industries committee resolved that "overcapacitated industries, upon proper showing of facts, should be permitted and encouraged to adjust the use of productive facilities to consumption. Such policy will benefit both management and labor without imposing any burden on the public." Here again, however, it is admitted that the adjustment of productive capacity to demand is not feasible in many cases.

The memorandum closes with an appeal for improving the administration of the codes that place restrictions upon competition instead of condemning them because they sometimes work defectively. Although the discussion is an ex parte presentation of the case for price control, it undoubtedly reveals the shallowness of the thinking that regards all forms of competitive price fixation as preferable to price control. While the social dangers inherent in systems of price fixing that tend to institutionalize inefficiency and destroy incentive to progress are insufficiently stressed, the case for price control as a means of preventing destructive competition has been admirably developed.

Bonds' Trend Is Irregular; Federals Easy

Shifting of Issues Marks Trading; Sales Cut to $10,400,000.

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—The bond market lapsed into a trading affair today with no uniform trend established in any group except United States Governments, which were a trifle easy.

Transfers were the smallest for a full 5-hour session in more than a week, aggregating $10,400,000, par value, compared with $13,289,000 on Tuesday, and less than half of the turnover last Friday when the gold clause cases now before the Supreme Court became one of the outstanding factors in investment circles.

High-grade corporate bonds scarcely moved and what trading there was reflected a large amount of shifting from one issue to another as indicated by the action of different loans of the same company which moved in opposite directions, price-wise. Consolidated Gas 5½s lost ⅝ of a point, at 105½, while the 5s gained ¼, at 103¼; Pennsylvania general 4½s dropped ⅞, to 105⅜, and the 4⅛s were ⅛ higher, at 101⅝. The same situation prevailed in obligations of the Chesapeake Corporation, Detroit Edison and Union Pacific. The Associated Press average for 20 railroads advanced .11 of a point, to 86.21, that for 10 industrials declined .08 of a point, to 95.07, and for 10 utilities there was a gain of .03 of a point, to 85.57.

The foreign section was fairly steady with higher prices paid for many German, French and South American bonds. Royal Dutch 4s, which had been acutely weak during the past two days, recovered 1¾ points, at 107¼.

Bonds—Shifting of issues in trading marked dealing in bonds. Prices were mixed but closed unchanged. Sales volume was cut to $10,400,000.

Curb—Scattered recoveries resulted in quieter trading and cash issues recorded some gains. Sales cut to 115,000 shares.

Wheat—Dust storms reported in the Southwest and advices that Canada would uphold the Winnipeg wheat market, caused grains to turn strong. May wheat sold at 96½, July at 88.

Cotton—A good rally in the market was followed by easing prices toward the close. In fluctuations of $1 per bale the old crop gained 4 to 7 points and the new was 2 to 4 points lower. January closed at 12.43; May at 12.47.

Sugar—Raw sugar was quiet at 2.80; refined, unchanged at 4.30 for fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Rio No. 7 sold at 9¼ and Santos No. 4 at 11.

Silver—Bar silver was unchanged in New York at 54¼. In London it sold at 24 9-16 pence. (United States equivalent, 53.88 cents per ounce.)

Dollar—The United States dollar was irregular in foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $4.87¾ to the English pound, 6.56½ cents to the French franc, and 29.98 cents to the German mark.

Gockeler Made Chairman of 'Change Board

Y. E. Booker Becomes President of Capital Stock Market.

C. J. Gockeler, for the past two years president of the Washington Stock Exchange, was elected chairman of the exchange board of governors at the annual meeting held yesterday.

GOCKELER.

The vacancy left by his retirement will be filled by Y. E. Booker, who had been active as vice president of the exchange for the past several years.

Karl W. Corby, a partner in the firm of W. B. Hibbs & Co., who was secretary of the exchange, was elected to the post of vice president, while James M. Johnston, head of the investment banking firm of the same name, succeeded to the position of secretary. William W. Mackall was elected secretary to succeed Johnston.

Registration of Exchange.

In his annual report to the members, Mr. Gockeler reviewed the activities of the exchange during the past year. Most important of these was registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The great mass of detailed work incident to this move was handled by a special committee under the direction of Gockeler.

The retiring president also called attention to the fact that the majority of issues listed on the exchange maintained extraordinary strength during the year, a number scoring substantial advances. A great part of this he attributed to the high standards set by the exchange in regard to stock issues applying for registration.

Increase in Business.

A large increase in the business volume handled by the exchange in 1934 as compared to 1933 was also brought out. One of the main reasons for the acceleration of trading, Gockeler pointed out, was the merger of the street car companies.

Secretary Johnston's report on the financial condition of the exchange showed a balanced budget as well as an increase in earnings for the past year.

The board of governors for the coming year will be as follows: C. J. Gockeler, Karl W. Corby, James M. Johnston, Y. E. Booker, Edward L. Hillyer, W. W. Mackall and Chauncey G. Parker, jr.

Industrial Bond Maturities

New York, Jan. 16.—Industrial bonds totaling slightly more than $200,000,000 par amount mature during 1935, according to a survey by the Standard Statistics Co., of New York.

This figure is approximately 20 per cent less than the 1934 aggregate. Of the 30 more important maturities, payment in full seems assured in about a dozen instances, while 14 issues represent defaulted situations, on which no action is expected to be taken.

The largest individual maturity is the $10,856,000 issue of Wickwire-Spencer Steel, which has been in receivership since 1927. With respect to the remaining steel bull 7s appears assured, while handling of the Newton Steel 7s apparently will depend upon the outcome of the proposed Republic-Corrigan merger. If consolidation is consummated, the bonds will be paid; otherwise an extension appears likely.

Commodity Purchasing Policy

New York, Jan. 16.—The following recommendations as to purchasing policy for various important commodities have been made by the Standard Statistics Co., of New York.

Advance purchasing justified around current levels: Brick, cheese, cocoa, cotton, cottonseed, oil, lard, lead, linseed oil, rayon, silk, silver, sugar, wool, zinc.

Argentina's Corn Export Placed at 400,000,000 Units

Weather Favors Crop for 1935; Prices Range Above Wheat.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 16.—An export surplus of around 400,000,000 bushels for Argentina's 1935 corn crop is now being predicted by private observers here, following an abundant, widespread rainfall over the last week-end, which materially enhanced the prospects for a heavy yield. Coincidently, wheat crop expectations in Argentina have undergone a substantial downward revision as hot winds and rains during harvesting have tended to reduce yields.

At present, the Argentine grain markets are experiencing the phenomenon of corn prices ruling above wheat quotations. Furthermore, owing to a present scarcity of exportable corn, the prices for this grain have recently hardened, notwithstanding and increasingly favorable crop outlook.

There has been heavy buying both for spot corn and April-May delivery, and considering the international supply situation, it is expected that Argentina's corn crop will insure the country's prosperity in 1935.

Variety Store Sale In U. S. Averages 9½ Per Cent Gain

December Volume Rises Over 1933 Period; Down for 5 Years.

Daily average sales of variety stores for the year 1934 were 9½ per cent higher in dollar volume than for 1933 and 11½ per cent higher than for 1932, according to preliminary estimates just released by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Sales for December, 1934, were up 6 per cent from December, 1933. The increase from November to December, 1934, was 76 per cent, which was about equal to the increase last year and much larger than that in December, 1932. However, it was less than the average rise for the past five years, so that the seasonally adjusted index receded from 91½ per cent of the 1929-31 monthly average in November to 88½ per cent in December.

The foregoing figures are all computed on a daily average basis which makes allowance not only for the varying number of business days from month to month but also for the varying sales importance of the different week-days. In addition, the seasonally adjusted index makes allowance for usual seasonal changes from month to month as observed during the past several years.

Commodities Set Peak for Past Four Years

Wholesale Prices Advance 50 Per Cent Over Period of 20 Months.

By Karl von Lewinski.

Wholesale commodity prices during the first week of 1935 soared to the highest level since January, 1931, the United States Department of Labor reported yesterday.

A steady advance, begun in March of 1933, has skyrocketed commodity prices 50 per cent in 20 months. Compared to the same time a year ago, prices are up by 10 per cent.

Of the ten major groups of commodities covered by the report, farm products showed the largest gain during the past week. Their advance of 4 per cent was directly traceable to an advance of 14 per cent in poultry and live stock prices.

During the past two years farm products have led the advance in prices by a wide margin. Their present level is 72 per cent ahead of that recorded in 1933.

Wholesale food prices took the place position during the last week with a rise of 3 per cent. The greatest rise in this commodity classification was recorded by meat, which rose 8 per cent.

Hides and leather products, textiles, metals and chemicals also registered increases from the previous week. A decrease in prices was noted in fuel and lighting materials, building materials, housefurnishing goods, and miscellaneous commodities.

Bankers Convention.

Hilleary G. Hoskinson, vice president of the Riggs National Bank, has been appointed general convention chairman for the 1935 conclave of the District Bankers Association, according to an announcement yesterday by Frederick P. H. Siddons, vice president of the American Security & Trust Co.

Buying Brightens Hardware Outlook

New York, Jan. 16.—The hardware trade has entered 1935 encouraged by decided indications of the better buying mood, and the improved buying ability of the people.

Manufacturers are reporting generally larger orders, due to the reduced inventories of their wholesalers, and the unusual rate of January ordering by retailers is evidence that their stocks have become severely depleted.

While trade during the past week or two has not kept the stores particularly busy, this is felt to be a natural and seasonable situation always common to early January. The weather, the post-holiday lull, and, in some places, the new sales taxes, are variously mentioned as affecting consumer buying for the moment.

Steel Scrap Advances From $12.33 to $12.63

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Iron Age index of scrap steel was further advanced this week to $12.63 a ton from $12.33 in the previous week. This is the highest level since the first week of March, 1934.

The composite price for pig iron and finished steel were unchanged at $17.90 a ton and 2.124 cents a pound, respectively.

Refining Plants Report 2,333,000 Units Run in Nation.

The American Petroleum Institute estimates that the daily average gross crude oil production for the week ended January 12, 1935, was 2,538,500 barrels. Daily production for the four weeks ended January 12, 1935, averaged 2,447,750 barrels. Comparative figures are set out below.

Reports received from refining companies owning 89.9 per cent of the 3,795,000-barrel estimated daily potential refining capacity of the United States indicate that 2,333,000 barrels of crude oil daily were run to the stills operated by those companies and that they had in storage at refineries at the end of the week 27,062,000 barrels of finished gasoline; 4,862,000 barrels of unfinished gasoline and 106,814,000 barrels of gas and fuel oil. Gasoline at bulk terminals, in transit and in pipe lines amounted to 18,571,000 barrels.

Cracked gasoline production by companies owning 95.6 per cent of the potential charging capacity of all cracking units averaged 469,000 barrels daily during the week.

The complete report for the week ended January 12, 1935, follows in detail:

Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 16 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture)—Ohio and similar fleece wools were receiving only scattered calls and the demand was mostly very limited. Fine Ohio delaine or strictly combing 64s and finer Ohio fleeces brought mostly 38 cents in the grease, which represented a slight strengthening tendency as little was available at 37 cents except the heavier than average shrinking lines. Strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼ blood Ohio and similar fleeces were quoted slightly easier at 26@27 cents in the grease. There was no demand in this grade for many weeks, and while a few inquiries were recently received, they did not as yet result in sales.

Steel Scrap Is Firm.

Stock Leaders Renew Gains In Quiet Sales

Waiting on Gold Decision Blamed in Trading Cut to 667,240 Shares.

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Wall street had a welcome breathing spell today as relative stability and quiet descended on foreign exchanges and the security markets, after yesterday's sudden upsurge in the dollar.

Trading favorites in the stock market gained major fractions to around 2 points.

Activity was curtailed, and the attitude of watchful waiting while the Supreme Court debated its gold decision had not abated. Turnover in the New York Stock Exchange aggregated 667,240 shares, and movement of bonds totaled $10,400,000 par value, both substantially under the figures for the previous day.

Losses Partly Recovered.

Yesterday's losses in stocks and grains were only partly recovered. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks listed .84 of a point to 39.10, with industrial shares the firmest group, up .73 of a point at 53.24.

Other markets were generally felt to be moving under influence of the better tone in the foreign currencies, induced, it was believed in some informed quarters, by official intervention in exchange dealings abroad and in New York.

The pound sterling was able to chalk up a gain of ¾ of a cent against the dollar at $4.87¾, while the French franc dropped .01 of a cent to 6.57 cents, and the Holland guilder, another leading gold money, lost .15 of a cent at 67.30 cents. At no time was there any reappearance of the demoralized market conditions of Tuesday, nor were the lows of that session even approached in today's dealings.

Steel News Fails to Aid.

A tasty batch of steel news failed to whet the appetites of traders to any great extent for this class of shares. The "Iron Age" compilation of the industry's operations, set the rate at 49 per cent of capacity compared with 44½ per cent a week ago, and the United States Steel Corporation.

Announced a restoration of salaries to white-collar workers to the levels of last September, and the abolition of the Saturday layoff due to more encouraging outlook in the company's business outlook.

U. S. Steel common at 37½ gained only ⅝ of a point. Bethlehem Steel was up ½ at 30⅛. National Steel was the best performer with a rise of 1⅝ points to 47¾, though some of the higher priced preferred issues got up 1 to 2 points each.

Aviation Issues Gain.

Aviation issues gained a small following, with fractional gains general in the group. Attention was directed to these shares by a pronouncement of the Air-Mail Bureau of the Interstate Commerce Commission recommending a general revision of air-mail rates, which were said now to be at a level spelling losses for most transport lines, in order to avoid destruction of air line companies.

Utilities were generally steady to a shade better, although Public Service of New Jersey was able to net a point gain at 28⅜, and Consolidated Gas at 20⅜ was ½ a point better. Electric power figures for the week showed production 7.7 per cent above the like week of 1934, although the rise from the previous week was slightly less than seasonal.

Homestake Mining, the high-priced gold stock which yesterday dropped 28 points, recovered 8 points at its best today, but by closing time had dropped back to 351, up only a single point.

Washington Man Elected Building Owners' Head

Baltimore, Jan. 16 (AP).—James McD. Shea, of Washington, was elected president of the Middle Atlantic Conference of Building Owners and Managers here this week. Other officers named were George H. Ostermayer, Philadelphia, vice president; Thomas F. Egan, jr., Philadelphia, secretary-treasurer, and Stacy M. Reed, Washington, chairman of the apartment group.

Chosen as directors were Norman R. Ellis, retiring president, and Oscar D. Green, Baltimore; Maurice Griest and Thomas Carson, Washington; James C. Leeper, Philadelphia; John J. Kuder, Scranton, Pa., and Floyd E. Booth, Wilmington, Del.

U. S. Steel Corporation Restores Salary Cuts

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Because of improved conditions in the steel industry, the United States Steel Corporation has restored to certain employes salary cuts which were made effective last September through omission of Saturday work, it was learned in authoritative quarters today.

Curb's Prices Recover From Selling Attack

Several Issues Record Gains; Sales Cut to 115,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Scattered recoveries from the selling of the previous session occurred on the Curb Exchange today. Transfers dwindled to 115,000 shares from 250,000 the day before.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass yielded moderately, but advances of around a point were recorded by Swift International, A. O. Smith, Sherwin Williams, Newmont, Lake Shore, Gulf Oil, United Gas preferred and Canadian Industrial Alcohol "A" and "B."

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

FEDERAL specialists, especially those connected with the conservation activities of the Government, are completing their plans to take an active part in the twenty-first American Game Conference in New York from Monday through Wednesday.

BAKER.

One of the outstanding features on the program will be an address by Secretary of Interior Ickes at the annual banquet Tuesday night.

At the wildlife research session Monday morning, Dr. J. E. Shillinger, Bureau of Biological Survey, will speak on "Wildlife Research in 1934;" E. G. Holt, Soil Erosion Service, on "The Soil Erosion Service and Wild Life;" Francis M. Uhler, Biological Survey, on "Mosquito Control and Its Effect on Wild Life," and J. Paul Miller, Biological Survey, on "Game and Forest Management in New England."

At the game-breeding session Monday afternoon, Dr. L. C. Morley, Biological Survey, will talk on "Recent Observations of Game Farm Losses."

Tuesday will be devoted to a symposium on waterfowl conservation and game management, in which J. N. "Ding" Darling, chief of Biological Survey, will participate with an address on "The Duck Situation in the United States." Walter Dutton (P), Forest Service, will speak on "What Basic Essentials Should a Management Survey and Plan Include?"

The final day of the conference will be concerned chiefly with discussion of fisheries management. Frank T. Bell, Commissioner of Fisheries, will speak on "Our Program for the Anglers." Other speakers and their topics that day include:

Dr. M. M. Ellis, Bureau of Fisheries, on "Attacking the Nation's Pollution Menace;" Representative Roy Ayers, of Montana, and Mrs. Antoinette Funk, General Land Office, on "The Taylor Grazing Act and Wild Life in the West;" Ferdinand A. Silcox, Chief of Forest Service, on "The Purpose and Effect of Regulation G-20-A;" and Carl D. Shoemaker, secretary of the Senate Special Committee on Conservation of Wild Life Resources, on "The Model State Game and Fish Administrative Law."

Other Government representatives, as well as various State and local game officials, will attend the conference. Hoyes Lloyd, supervisor of wild life protection, National parks of Canada, is the chairman.

Dr. F. D. Richey, Bureau of Plant Industry, recently was elected a fellow of the American Society of Agronomists.

Dr. Eliot Is Promoted.

Dr. Martha M. Eliot, (F), formerly associate clinical professor of pediatrics at the Yale University School of Medicine and for several years director of the Division of Maternal and Child Health, Children's Bureau, Labor, has been appointed assistant chief of that bureau. Dr. Eliot has been on the staff of the Children's Bureau since 1904.

The Agriculture Musical and Theatrical Guild will present a vaudeville program at 8:30 p. m. today in the Agriculture auditorium, A. C. Edwards, guild officer, announced. This will be the fifth program given by the guild this season and will include 14 acts of dancing, clowning and a farcical playlet.

Navy Banquet Tonight.

The Navy Department lodge of AFGE will be host at a turkey dinner tonight at its annual meeting at 1219 G street northwest, at 6:30, Miss Helen C. McCarty, (P), secretary, reminds all members in Navy Building. Miss McCarty is chairman of the arrangements committee which consists of Miss G. R. Allen, Mrs. Belle Graves, R. A. Sauls, Mrs. Minnie Taylor, Mrs. Lillymay Powers, Mrs. Rose O'Hara, B. F. Royce, A. B. Ross, E. J. Hourihane, A. Y. Dreisonstok, Miss Ruth Tech, Miss Elizabeth Gibson, and Mrs. Mary Hilton.

Among the guests to be introduced by Michael D. Schaefer, lodge president, will be Ira D. Scott, president of the District Department; Mrs. Maude Anderson, Dr. Emma Eichelberger and Thomas O. Fee, of the Government Employes Sick Benefit Association; Col. John I. Stengle, executive officer from national headquarters.

"When Will Lassen Peak Again Erupt?" and "Is America About to Lose Her Elms?" are two questions propounded in the current issue of Scientific Monthly by Government scientists. The former question is discussed by Arthur Holmes (C), National Park Service; and the latter by Stanley B. Fracker, in charge of the Division of Domestic Plant Quarantine, Bureau of Plant Industry.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary Editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Vera Gordon and round-up of vaudeville stars; screen, Will Rogers in "The County Chairman"); or to Loew's Palace (Shirley Temple and James Dunn in "Bright Eyes"); or to Loew's Columbia (Helen Twelvetrees and Conrad Nagel in "One Hour Late").

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon up to 2:30 p. m.

Stool Pigeons.

The tattle tales, the vile wretches,
A bit of truth surely stretches,
When telling of our errors
By saying we are terrors;
The bosses will surely fetch us
Again upon the carpet green,
To tell us we were surely seen
Doing this and that and such,
Though it really wasn't much.
Now don't you think that's very mean?
Away with that outmoded style
The spotters have. The vermin vile
Who always do observe us.
For betterment of service
And peace among the rank and file.

Detectives Named To 'Pickup Squad'

Special Detail to Harass Criminals in City.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, yesterday disclosed the personnel of the squad formed to harass out-of-town persons found here without visible means of support. The squad is known unofficially as the "pick-up squad."

Detective Sergt. Clyde N. Strange, Joseph Shimon, Herbert Wanamaker, Paul E. Ambrose, Guy A. Rone and Eugene D. Lambert have been assigned to the unit.

The men are working directly under Inspector Burke and their principal job is to bring to headquarters for questioning suspicious persons found loitering on the streets, in pool halls and other such places. Once in headquarters, such persons will be "thoroughly investigated" before being released. An influx of out-of-town criminals, escaping habitual criminal laws in their home States, is responsible for the action, officials said.

Alfred French's Funeral Today

Lawyer, Veteran of Civil War, Dead at 91.

Funeral services for Alfred French, a lawyer in the Government service from 1879 to 1921, and a veteran of the Civil War, who died at his home, 2219 California street Tuesday after a short illness, will be held at the Church of the Holy City today at 2 p. m. Burial will be private.

Born 91 years ago in Lakewood, Ohio, the son of Albert Gallatin French and Almina Paddock French, he joined the Union Army when he was 18, along with his twin brother, Albert, who survives him. Caught in a burst of shell fire at the Battle of Stone River, Mr. French lost his right arm.

Besides his brother, Mr. French is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Meem French; a daughter, Miss Kate French, and a son, Henry Matson French, of Los Angeles.

Liner Bound for U. S. Hits Tug at Le Havre

Le Havre, France, Jan. 16 (AP). The French liner Lafayette, which left Le Havre at 2 p. m. today with 75 passengers bound for New York, returned to port after colliding with a tug in the harbor in a dense fog.

The Lafayette, a 25,000-ton motorship, suffered slight damage to her bow and developed a leak. It was stated the ship probably could resume the voyage tomorrow.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 25, 1935—

TRUSTEES' SALE OF TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING, NO. 1419 FIRST STREET NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust, duly recorded in Liber 5975, at folio 146, among the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will sell, at public auction in front of the premises, on FRIDAY, THE 25TH DAY OF JANUARY, A. D. 1935, AT 4 O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and designated as and being part of lot ninety-four (94), in Mary Keefe's subdivision of lots in square six hundred and sixteen (616), as per plat recorded in Liber 24, at folio 50, of the records of the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia more particularly described in the above-mentioned deed of trust.

TERMS: One-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in two equal installments payable in one and two years, with interest at six (6) per centum per annum, payable semiannually from day of sale, secured by a deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. A deposit of $200 required. Conveyancing, recording, etc., at the purchaser's cost. Terms to be complied with within 10 days, otherwise deposit forfeited and the property may be advertised and resold at the discretion of the trustees.

SAMUEL A. CLEARY,
JOHN L. HAYES,
Trustees.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1935—
THOMAS J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers, 1431 Eye Street Northwest.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE, BEING A TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING, CONTAINING SIX ROOMS AND BATH, AND BUILT-IN GARAGE, KNOWN AS 1837 INGLESIDE TERRACE NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6107 at folio 450 of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned will sell at public auction in front of the premises on TUESDAY, THE TWENTY-NINTH DAY OF JANUARY, 1935, AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and being lot numbered one hundred and forty-four (144) in square numbered twenty-six hundred and seventeen (2617) in subdivision made by Dorie C. Gruver of lots in block numbered four (4) "Ingleside," as per plat recorded in Liber No. 88, folio 14, of the records of the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia.

TERMS OF SALE: Purchaser to pay one-fourth of the purchase price in cash, the balance in three installments in one, two and three years, respectively, with interest at the rate of six (6) per centum per annum, and secured by deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser; taxes paid or adjusted to the date of sale; purchaser to pay interest on purchase price from date of sale to date of settlement at six (6) per centum per annum; all conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at the cost of the purchaser; good title or no sale. A deposit of $250.00 will be required at the time of sale, and settlement to be within thirty (30) days of the date of sale, or deposit forfeited, and the property resold at the cost and risk of defaulting purchaser, after five (5) days' previous advertisement of said resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

J. WRILEY JACOBS,
Surviving Trustee.

APPLE MARY — Post Comics on the Air—Sundays, 8:45 a. m.—WMAL — By Martha Orr

OIL WELLS! ALL OVER MY LOVELY GARDENS, AND THE TREES ARE ALL GONE—
WHAT DO PEOPLE WANT WITH OIL WELLS, GRAN'MA? THEY'RE NOT NEARLY AS NICE AS TREES.
OH, THEY'RE WORTH A LOT OF MONEY, DENNIE.
SILLY OF ME TO MAKE A FUSS OVER THE CHANGE IN THE OLD PLACE. GUESS I'VE CHANGED A LOT MYSELF.
IF GRAN'MA HAD KNOWN ABOUT THAT OIL WHEN SHE OWNED THE PLACE, SHE WOULDN'T HAVE LOST HER HOME— NOW, I WONDER—

THE GUMPS — Now on the Radio—Post Comics—WMAL, Sundays, 8:45 a. m. — Sweet Violets

WELL, YOUNG LADY—FROM OUR PRELIMINARY DIAGNOSIS WE HAVE COME TO CERTAIN DEFINITE CONCLUSIONS ABOUT THIS REMARKABLE INFANT—
THERE IS UNMISTAKABLE EVIDENCE OF PREMATURE CARTILAGINOUS OSSIFICATION AND MUSCULAR COÖRDINATION, DIAMETRICALLY CONTRASTED WITH INEXPLICABLY ARRESTED DENTITION AND CALCIFICATION;
— ALSO, A RETARDATION OF THE HYPOPHYSIS CEREBRI WITH EXCESSIVE FUNCTIONING OF THE CEREBRAL CORTEX, AND AN ACCELERATED METABOLISM, ALL TENDING TO RESULT IN A PHYSICAL QUOTIENT OF MINUS EIGHTY, A CEREBRAL QUOTIENT OF ONE-NINETY-PLUS AND AN I.Q. OF POSSIBLY 240
OF COURSE IN OUR SUBSEQUENT ANALYSES WE HOPE TO MAKE OUR CONCLUSIONS EVEN MORE CLEAR TO YOU

Walt Mason, Himself

The Hen.

The hen is quite a worthy fowl, as all men must agree, although her chums, the roosters, howl at three or half past three. There is no malice in her heart or in her gizzard brave; like NRA, she dose her part, to duty she's a slave. We couldn't do without her eggs, they soothe the savage breast; the farmer brings them in, in kegs, fresh from the rural nest. And when the hen is boiled or fried, or cooked in other ways, we must admit she does provide great comfort to all jays. She is a fowl whose course is right, she walks in paths of peace, and, eating everything in sight, accumulates much grease. And yet the hen has caused more woe, more agony and strife, than any critter that we know, in this our mundane life. Man plans his rows of lima beans, when spring its solace brings; he sows the seeds of peas and greens and beets and kindred things. He labors till his bones are sore, until aches cramp his feet, but when the summer comes once more he'll have good things to eat. He dreams about the luscious fare he'll have on hand ere long, from that fine blooming garden where all things are growing strong. And then some day men hear his howls, they listen while he rants; for he has found his neighbor's fowl's have ruined all his plants. He swats that neighbor in the eye, he biffs him on the nose, he pulls his whiskers all awry, and then to jail he goes. A million tragedies like this have happened every year; and still the hen, that ruined bliss, is cherished, which I queer.

Fire Levels Club Near Cumberland

Loss in Dance Hall Blaze Set at $18,000.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Don-Mar, large night club with an adjoining dance hall, 2 miles from the city, was destroyed by fire early today, flames breaking out shortly after the place was closed. It was operated by Donald Cornish and his wife, Martha Cornish, who had gone to Cleveland. His brother, Nick Cornish, is manager.

The Cornishes' household effects, an orchestra's instruments and library, and the entertainers' wardrobes were destroyed. The loss is placed at $18,000, with insurance covering half that amount. The fire, the origin of which is unknown, cost 32 their jobs. Cornish announced he would rebuild.

The flames were so fanned by the wind that when Cumberland firemen arrived, the place was past saving.

Dawson Is Given Oath As Park Group's Lawyer

Walter W. Dawson, Rockvillle attorney, yesterday was sworn in as attorney to the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission by Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the Montgomery County (Md.) Circuit Court. Dawson, chairman of the Republican State central committee for the county, was appointed recently by Gov. Nice.

Charles J. Maddox, who was unopposed for county surveyor in the November elections, also was inducted yesterday by Watkins.

James Duncan, Party Leader, Named Justice

President of Young Democrats Gets $3,060 Job at Alexandria.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

James Reese Duncan, president of the Young Democrats Club of Alexandria and chairman of the Eighth District Young Democrats Clubs, was appointed yesterday by Judge William P. Woolls, of the Alexandria Corporation Court, to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge Frederick W. Duvall as civil and police justice for Alexandria. The term will expire December 31, 1937.

Judge Duncan is a native of Alexandria and received his early education at St. Mary's Academy and the Alexandria public schools. He was graduated in law with the degree of L. L. B. from Georgtown University Law School in 1925, and was elected permanent secretary of his class.

He served in the United States Navy in the World War, seeing active service overseas, and served in the State Department from 1920 to 1922 as chief clerk to the American High Commission at the American Embassy in Constantinople.

Since 1926 he has been engaged in law practice in Alexandria, and in July, 1932, was appointed commissioner of accounts of the Corporation Court. In October, 1934, he was appointed general assistant to A. P. Staples, Attorney General of Virginia, to represent the State before the Boundary Commission considering the question of the boundary between Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Duncan's candidacy received the indorsement of 25 members of the local bar and a majority of the membership of the City Council. The position pays a salary of $3,060 a year, and carries with it the duties of judge of the juvenile and domestic relations court of Alexandria.

The collection of delinquent personal property taxes by the serving of civil warrants is meeting with success, according to City Collector Purvis Taylor. More than 400 warrants have been served so far, 58 having been served yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Frank W. Moriarty. Many persons who have never paid personal property taxes, are making payment before their cases are called in court.

The statement was made before city council that 1,500 Alexandria persons have not paid this tax. Tentative budget offered by a member of the council called for the collection of $30,000 in delinquent personal property taxes.

Necessity for enlarged quarters for St. Agnes School for Girls was given consideration at a meeting of the board of trustees Tuesday night. In two years the enrollment nas increased from 107 to 159, making it almost necessary to close the enrollment in the lower classes of the school, officials said.

The Rt. Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop of Virginia and president of the board, met with the executive committee, composed of C. S. Taylor Burke, John M. Daniel, jr., and the Rev. George S. Vest, preceding the session of the board, and it is stated that plans for additional quarters are contemplated in the near future.

Mayor E. C. Davison, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the President's Birthday Ball, has appointed the following chairman and officers to complete preparations for the ball, which will be held January 31 in Armory Hall:

General chairman, E. C. Davison; secretary, Harry F. Kennedy; treasurer, Elliott F. Hoffman; chairman of advisory committee, J. Herbert Taylor; chairman of music committee, Roger C. Sullivan; finance committee, Elliott F. Hoffman; ticket committee, Dan S. Hollenga; publicity committee, Francis H. Fannon; refreshments committee, O. Ashby Reardon; patroness committee, Mrs. Gardner L. Boother, sr.; floor committee, Capt. James S. Douglas; decorations, George W. Welker.

The guest speaker at the meeting of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club today will be Edgar M. Gerlach, of the United States Department of Justice, who will take as his topic "The War Against the Criminal Yesterday and Today." Thomas M. Jones is program chairman and will introduce the speaker.

Dr. Lawrence A. Phillips, of Washington, gave an illustrated lecture last night in the auditorium of the Alexandria High School on "Old Virginia," under the auspices of the Jefferson School Parent-Teacher Association.

Mrs. Fannie Lee Peverill, 63-year-old, wife of George W. Peverill, of Fairfax County, died Tuesday in the Alexandria Hospital, following a short illness. Besides her husband she is survived by eight sons and six daughters.

The body was removed to the Cunningham Funeral Home, and funeral services will be conducted from the residence near Franconia at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon by the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Interment will be in Sharon Cemetery.

Trade Body's Meeting Attracts 300 Tonight

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Approximately 300 persons will attend the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce here tomorrow night in conjunction with the regional meeting sponsored by the Rotary Club of this city.

The Rev. C. Sylvester Greene, vice president of the Richmond Rotary Club, will speak and music will be furnished by singers from the Orange Rotary Club. Others on the program are Ray C. Hopkins, Dr. Morgan L. Combs, Benjamin T. Pitts and the Rev. J. J. Ambler.

Fingerprints Offers Only Clew in Postal Robbery

Clear Spring, Md., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Fingerprints found in the postoffice were the only clues to the robbery here early today, when $20 in cash was taken from a stamp drawer.

No attempt was made to crack the safe. Entrance was made through a rear door, which was jimmied.

RFC Aid Asked For New Bank Herndon Plans

$10,000 Now Subscribed; Mayor Calls Meeting for Tomorrow.

Citizens of Herndon, Va., interested in organizing a new national bank there to take the place of the bank that was closed recently plan to seek the aid of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

It was stated yesterday that the committee in charge of organizing the new bank had obtained slightly more than $10,000 worth of subscriptions for the common stock in the new bank. This committee, headed by Mayor Allen H. Kirk, will hold a meeting tomorrow night in the town council rooms to check its progress.

The committee has tentatively decided that the capital stock of the new institution will be divided equally in common and preferred stock, with the common stock being sold in the community. The RFC will be asked to purchase the $25,000 in preferred stock. It is further planned to sell the common stock at 10 per cent above the $50 par value so that the bank will have a working surplus on opening.

According to statements of the leaders, the new bank will probably be able to pay a dividend at the end of the first year. If the necessary $25,000 in common stock has been subscribed an application for a charter will be forwarded to the Treasury Department together with a request that the RFC purchase the unsold balance of the preferred stock.

A stockholders' meeting will be called immediately upon completion of subscription and directors elected. It is expected that the new bank will purchase the assets of the old Herndon National Bank, and the organizers of the new institution are hoping to be open for business by the time the FDIC begins to return the deposits of the closed bank.

Spates Will Seek Treasurer's Post

Bank Cashier a Candidate in Clarke Primary.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.).—Jetson F. Spates, cashier of the Bank of Clarke County, has announced his candidacy for treasurer of Clarke County, subject to the Democratic primary in August. The post is now held by W. A. Bradford, who announced that he would not be a candidate for reelection. His present term rounds out 40 years in that office.

Mr. Spates is a World War veteran. Last week he was reelected a third time as cashier of the bank.

The two other candidates have already filed for the treasurer's position, John O. Hardesty and Benjamin Crampton.

7 Plead Guilty To Indictments
